And, he told the delegates as the conference wound up Tuesday night, he would be fighting in cabinet for continuation of federal price support programs. He added, however, that he doesn't plan to turn in his resignation as cabinet minister if he doesn't win everything he asks of it.

"I think that it is important that I still be there to tell the story as you tell it," he smilingly said. He was sure the general policy of federal price support for food products "is kept out, but he didn't be sure that present floor prices will stay at current levels."

HEAD APPEALED

Many of the provincial ministers and farm group spokesmen had appealed to Mr. Gardiner to have the support programs continued and some urged an extension to other products.

One didn't: Agriculture Minister Colin Cuthbertson of Nova Scotia suggested that federal money pouring out for storage on surplus butter might better be used to help campaign for increased Canadian milk consumption.

A newcomer to the annual conference, Mr. Cuthbertson said the federal butter price support program may have had some merit when it was started, but he was convinced "that there is nothing constructive to be gained by the government getting into the butter business."

DENIES IN IT

Mr. Gardiner denied that the government is in the butter business. It merely supervises what people in the industry are doing, he said.

The government supports butter at 38 cents a pound, cheese at 28 cents a dozen for grade A large, and pork at 23 cents a pound for grade A bacon-type hogs. The question of whether the government will continue to support the farm egg at 42c in 1955, and at what level, was to be taken up by cabinet today.

Mr. Chisholm's remarks seemed so to upset a couple of the delegates that later his deputy, Waldo Watch, rose to say that his boss did not mean to "say that he did not support existing price support for butter. He was merely looking at the situation from the "long-time pull," considering it would be good for the industry to encourage increased milk consumption.

WHO RANGLED

Mr. Gardiner tangled in statements by J. L. Phelps, chairman of the Interprovincial Farm Union Council, too. Mr. Phelps suggested the government establish farm-parity prices—hooking floor prices to farm costs—to encourage food production and help fight communism.

Mr. Phelps charged that the conference is being turned into a clearing house for discussion of problems about which nobody is prepared to do anything," and asked that the meeting be continued for another day to discuss marketing and prices.

The conference, said Mr. Gardiner, was not a vote-getting meeting and was not one that could pass resolutions such as proposed by Mr. Phelps. Marketing was discussed as part of production. Delegates had gathered to study the outlook for farm products and to take the information back to their folks.

Chancellor Raab Interested Visitor To Super-Market

OTTAWA (CP)—Austrian Chancellor Julius Raab hurried through a visit to the National Research Council Tuesday so he could tour a super-market.

He threw his entourage into a flap by insisting that a visit to the super-market be squeezed into his tight schedule. This was done by lopping five minutes off his NRC tour.

At the super-market, Dr. Raab was quite taken with plastic coffee cups and paper cups. He also had a close look at the meats and cheeses. Most of the shoppers had no idea who the visitor was and went right on selecting groceries after stares at the RCMP escort.

Saunders Blames Press for Defeat

TORONTO (CP)—Leslie Saunders Tuesday blamed newspapers for his defeat in his bid for re-election as mayor in Monday's municipal voting.

"I was a victim of the press ganging up on me during the last few remnants of the Sunday sports group," he said. "They represent a few people against the right-eous."

Although I lost a lot of votes, the others polled ones they had never had before. This was caused by the newspapers and the Sunday sports group which presented large paid advertisements against me in the daily press."

He said Toronto newspapers magnified his errors in judgment without giving much credit for faithful administration.

"The newspapers have no reason to be proud of themselves. I had a combination of four newspapers against me—the dailies and the dailies' sheet. Whether the dailies are proud of this combination is for them to judge."

CONVERTING AFRICANS

VATICAN CITY (Reuter)—One African Negro was converted to Roman Catholicism every 20 minutes during 1953, the Vatican reported today. African Roman Catholics have grown in number from fewer than 500,000 at the turn of the century to about 8,000,000 today, the report of the missionary service added.

Crime Wave Election Issue In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — A crime-ridden city went to the polls here today, mounting off a round of civic elections throughout Canada's west-coast province.

What originally promised to be a dull campaign with little voter interest, livened up as two mayoralty candidates took clearly-defined stands on the crime issue.

Mayor Fred Hume, seeking his third two-year term, has voiced full support of police chief Walter Mulligan, whose force is reported rife with unrest over the chief's promotion policy.

PROMISED END

Former alderman Archie Procter has promised an end to the crime wave which saw three fatal shootings, a wounding and eight bombings within 10 weeks. He has said that, if elected, he will fire chief Mulligan.

In Vancouver, the mayor is automatically chairman of the police commission.

TORONTO (CP)—Fire early today forced a family from its second floor apartment and caused $30,000 damage to a building in suburban New Toronto.

The flames destroyed beauty lounge equipment valued at $25,000 and $5,000 in Christmas supplies in a flower shop.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 27-year-old unemployed laborer, who carried his crippled mother to safety when flames wrecked their home Monday, admitted Tuesday he started the fire to avoid eviction. John Bogrut was charged with starting the fire that drove the Belgrath, their dog and nine persons in neighboring homes to the street.

Once Purged on Allied Orders, Jap Leader Now Backs West

By GENE KRAMER

TOKYO (AP)—Ichiro Hatoyama, forced to the sidelines by a purge under the Allied occupation, has returned in Japan's political spotlight with the resignation of Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida.

It was Hatoyama who picked Yoshida to lead Japan when, in 1946, the occupation purged Hatoyama from politics the day before he was to have become prime minister. He later broke with Yoshida.

Hatoyama was barred from political activity for a book praising Hitler and Mussolini. He later repudiated the book.

Hatoyama, a mustached semi-cripple of 71, said in an interview that if—as now expected—he becomes prime minister he will refuse to let strings of visitors and aides during his long exile. A stroke sent him to a wheel chair. He walk with a cane and to give up golf.

But he said two physicians attending him "assure me I can do any job," in Japan. Hatoyama spoke through an interpreter in the easy-going manner of an American politician. He speaks English but not fluently.

Hatoyama took this position on major policy questions:

Japan and the U.S.—"Leave the U.S.-Japan security agreement (permitting American troops to be based in Japan) alone. Japan receives only because of it. Japan intellectuals are without exception pro-American. Anti-Americanism is just a reflection of what they consider American support of the Yoshida regime."

Russia—"I have a fundamental conviction Russia is never to be trusted. She is eager to annex any nation, though Japan, whenever she has a pretext. So we should act (so as) never to give Russia a pretext. Japan must maintain relations with Russia and Communist China. By making relations with Russia and the U.S., Japan can help avert the war between the United States and Russia."

Britain—"It is an accomplished fact that there are two Chinas." Nationalist and Communist. Nationalist Formosa, Red China showed its expansionist tendencies in Korea. I don't want to give her any more opportunities."

Despite Four Days of Delay Bulldog II Scheme to Continue

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

FORT CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) The military isn't worrying over Exercise Bull Dog II as it drags.

Despite four days of delay in completing the all-Arctic winter training scheme, the exercise will continue.

Brig. George Kitching of Edmonton, chief of staff, western army command and exercise director, said at a press briefing Tuesday night: "The beauty of the exercise is that it hasn't succeeded yet. It would have been smug of us if we had left Sunday after completing our mission in so short a time."

Since Saturday a planned airborne assault of units of the Royal Canadian Regiment of London, Ont., and the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery of Camp Shilo, has been postponed seven times.

It was unlikely the assault would take place today, Hugh Cameron of the meteorological office in Winnipeg, who has been guiding the forecasting operations from Fort Churchill, said a blizzard sweeping northwest from the Prairies will continue to blow over the area, creating drifts and heavy icing conditions.

The paradrop almost took place Tuesday but icing conditions and low clouds kept RCAF C-119 packets on the airfield here. The troops were scheduled to advance on a weather station captured by the invaders Monday. The enemy, represented by 80 members of the Royal 22nd Regiment of Quebec City, has been camping out in tents during a mish-mash of weather, including temperatures as high winds, sudden thaws.

Brig. Kitching said the exercise has already taught the military some lessons. It pointed out the need for further training of the Ranger organization, a civilian group of spotters who took part in reconnaissance patrols around the enemy camp. The enemy commander, CPO Jean-Paul Savary of Quebec City, claims to have eliminated the entire force of more than a dozen Rangers.

450-Foot Crater Believed Formed Many Years Ago

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. V. Ben Meens says samples taken from a green, circular lake in the Ungava district may indicate that a 450-foot crater was formed thousands of years ago by a meteor.

Dr. Meen, director of the Royal Ontario Museum of Geology and Mineralogy, said Tuesday that the samples, taken last July by a group of eight scientists, will be evaluated within a few weeks.

The lake was first brought to Dr. Meen's attention when he received a snapshot of it in a letter from a United States air force officer following the Chubb crater discovery.

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto's Finnish population will be joined by Finland's new charge d'affaires to Canada, Sigurd von Numers, in celebrations of their country's 37th anniversary of independence tonight.

The head of the Finnish legation in Ottawa, to Canada for only a month, said the meeting will celebrate the anniversary of the day that Finland broke from the rule of the Russian czars.

President Faces Reporters On Sen. McCarthy's Outburst At Open Press Conference

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower, apparently determined to keep a rein on his temper, had a chance to reply personally today to Senator Joseph McCarthy's politically explosive charge that the president has displayed "weakness" toward communism.

The charge, which appears to be a chips-down McCarthy break with the administration, was sure to be brought up at the president's weekly press conference at 10:30 a.m. EST.

The Wisconsin Republican, condemned for his conduct by Senate colleagues last week, accused Eisenhower Tuesday of "coagulating senators who have exposure of communism" and of a "shrinking show of weakness" in dealing with Chinese Reds who "are forming and brainwashing American unformed men."

SAYS MISTAKEN

McCarthy apologized to American voters for telling them in the 1952 campaign that election of Eisenhower would guarantee a "vigorous, forceful fight against Communists in government."

"I was mistaken," he declared.

In response to reporters' questions, McCarthy repeated his statement of last week that he intends to continue in the Republican party. But he added, perhaps significantly that "at this time" he has no interest whatsoever in any third party.

Later in the day McCarthy's office announced he had left town for a week or 10 days. His destination was not announced.

Among senators reserved for comment on the sharp McCarthy criticism of Eisenhower, none outspoken than colleague 100 per cent. Some Republicans who voted last Thursday against condemning Mc-Carthy took issue with him for assailing the president.

SEE DEMOCRAT BENEFIT

Senate Democrats, who voted solidly to condemn McCarthy, tended in off-the-record comment to regard their party as likely to benefit from the repercussions on the Republican side. But there was some public expression of concern over McCarthy's attack.

Eisenhower Tuesday refrained from any immediate comment, but he authorized a White House statement which appeared to stem sleep in the anti-Communist fight at home. Press Secretary James C. Hagerty also said that this time the president's remark at his press conference last week that the United States must not let itself be goaded into war by the Communists.

There has been a good deal of friction between McCarthy and the administration on the Communist issue and foreign policy in relation to it. But Eisenhower, although critical of the senator in general terms and without mentioning his name, steadfastly has declined to speak out against him as an individual.

NO ANGER

One Eisenhower side, who asked not to be named, said in response to a reporter's question that the president showed "no particular anger" when informed about McCarthy's attack on him.

The aide said Eisenhower had steeled himself all along against losing his temper over McCarthy, and that he apparently was determined not to lose it this time. There appears to be a feeling at the White House that the senator Chinese Reds who "are forming" in a slam-bang quarrel.

At least one member of Eisenhower's official family was letting his anger be known, however. Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell said in Los Angeles Tuesday night of McCarthy's criticism:

"All of my upbringing . . . makes my blood boil when the president of the United States is attacked in that way."

Record Price Paid For Festoon

NEWMARKET, England (AP)—Festoon, a three-year-old thoroughbred filly, was sold to a wealthy English sportsman on Tuesday for a world record price of £105,-840. The sale took only 3½ minutes.

The filly was purchased by A. B. Askew, nephew of film producer J. Arthur Rank, who outbid American rivals at the second session of the Newmarket Autumn sales.

Festoon, by Fair Trial out of Blossom, won the English 1,000 Guineas and the Ascot Coronation Stakes this year and came from the stables of the late J. A. Dewar, scotch whisky millionaire.

Potato Prices Will Be High Next Spring

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's tobacco farmers harvested a record 300,000,000 crop this year and exports from this harvest may reach an all-time high of 50,000,000 pounds.

While tobacco farmers reaped a record harvest, the times were not so favorable to Canada's potato growers and seed producers.

The experts estimated the 1954 potato crop dropped by 25 per cent to 32,500,000 bushels, the Prairies, British Columbia and Prince Edward Island showing the biggest cuts.

The United States also had a production decline, and thus with fewer potatoes on the market, the housewife may find prices high until next spring. The conference, now in its second day of studying Canada's farm economy, was told that spud prices fall advance seasonally throughout the winter months.

As for seed, production this year was "seriously affected" by unfavorable harvesting weather, rust and frost.

OUTPUT DOWN

Output of registered and certified wheat seed was estimated to have dropped in 1954 to 4,560,000 bushels from 6,300,000 last year; oats, to 2,640,000 from 3,218,000; barley, to 1,142,000 from 1,389,000; soybeans to 120,000 from 228,000.

Apples production in 1954 rose by 20 per cent to 14,100,000 bushels and may exceed 15,000,000 bushels next year, with weather favorable. Of the 1954 output, about 2,200,000 bushels are expected to be exported, 3,500,000 bushels processed and 8,400,000 available for sale as fresh apples in Canada. Britain is expected to take about 720,000 bushels.

STIRLING

River Valley W.I. Entertained By Mrs. R. Bush

STIRLING.— On Thursday, the spacious home of Mrs. Ross Bush was decorated with two lighted Christmas trees, for children and adults. Approximately 30 ladies, members and visitors and a bevy of children gathered for the Christmas meeting of River Valley Women's Institute.

The president conducted the opening exercises and the secretary gave her report. A letter was read from Mrs. Ed. Kent re their donation of a turkey on December 17th. An aged person will be remembered with a birthday card shower.

Mrs. C. W. Moore offered to donate silverware and this was accepted.

A special trip was planned for next week and the collection of the day will be used to purchase gifts for a gift to the "County Home Inmates."

The next meeting will be held on January 6th, 1955 at the home of Mrs. Gerald Brooks.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Mrs John Kane prestided over the Christmas program and opened with two Christmas carols with Mrs. George Heasman in charge.

Mrs. Percy Ulman read Peter Marshall's selection "Let's Keep Christmas." It emphasized that one should not permit the rush to crowd Christmas out of his heart, for that is where it belongs. Isn't it wonderful to think that nothing can really harm the joy of Christmas.

"Let us keep Christmas in all the loveliness of its ancient traditions. There is only one way, that is the way of Him, who was born a babe in Bethlehem. We must try to hold on to the old customs and traditions because they strengthen our family ties and bring us back again to the God who gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life."

Recitations were given by Mares Heasman, Jean Donohoe, Allen Carr, Donnie Carr and Cheryl Ulman song "Away in a Manger."

The group joined in "Jingle Bells" after which Mrs. Phil Conley staged a "Christmas Country Dinner Contest," and prize winners received a treat of candy.

GIFTS

The children each drew a gift from their tree followed by the gift exchange of the adults from the large tree as the roll of members was called and then the visitors left their turn.

A full Christmas menu followed as the hostess and committee served the bountiful refreshments.

The hostess was tendered a vote of thanks for hospitality. (Goodwill,c, 14

Bringing Up Baby

Certainly parenthood is a most serious business. But there's no reason to be completely solemn about it. Don't take the job so seriously that you forget to enjoy it. Children need to be played with and encouraged to make new efforts. However, try to use good judgment in the times you select for play. Points to remember: it is best not to get baby overly interested to play too soon before or after mealtime . . . and the hour before bedtime should not be exciting or too stimulating.

Daily do. Vitamin C is important in keeping gums and body tissues healthy, is one of the "musts" in vitamins. That is to say, it cannot be stored in the body, so babies (and adults) should have a fresh supply every day. Gerber's Strained Orange Juice . . . is processed just for babies . . . fills the bill for vitamin C beautifully. Made from tree-ripened oranges, specially selected for high vitamin C content and mild natural flavor. Processed with aluminum peel oil and seed protein so it's extra easy to dispense portion-control for baby's protection.

Baby Spoon offer! A heavy silver plated Baby Spoon (regular value $1.25) is yours for only 25c plus one box top from any of the full famous Gerber Baby Cereals. Send to: Mrs. Dan Gerber, Box 17, Toronto 18, Can.

Refreshing idea. Tired feet plague you? Try this: a 5-minute footbath in hot water, followed by 5 minutes in cold water! Dry feet and apply a splash of cologne.

Small-fry luncheon suggestion: CREAM OF CHICKEN & PEA SOUP 1 cannond Gerber's Strained Vegetables & Chicken ½ cannond Gerber's Strained Peas Salt ¼ cup whole milk Combine ingredients. Heat and serve. Yield: 1 large or 2 small servings. Gerber's Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Viet Nam Army Says Reds Sign Secret Pledge

SAIGON (AP)—The South Viet Nam army claimed Tues. that Indochina's Vietnamese Communists and the Chinese Reds have signed a secret pledge to help each other in any military operations to achieve their No. 1 objective—Formosa for the Chinese and the rest of Indochina for Ho Chi Minh's Vietminh.

The army said in a regular broadcast today the reported agreement also provides for joint Russian-Chinese - Vietnamese control of the big North Indochina port of Haiphong, which the French and South Vietnamese under the Geneva agreement are to cede to Ho Chi Minh's forces by the middle of next May.

The Vietminh already have taken over all of North Viet Nam except the Haiphong area.

The South Vietnamese broadcast gave these details of the agreement: Vietnamese Communists will send an undesignated number of troops to participate in any attack on Formosa. In exchange, the Chinese Reds promise to send "important forces" to North Viet Nam in the event it becomes necessary to resume hostilities in Indochina. Under terms of the Geneva armistice, North and South Viet Nam are to be unified by country-wide elections not later than July, 1956. The Vietminh so far expect to win in any such vote.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

GOOD SHOW!

While this department and brother Devine were playing "oughts and crosses" on ballots, microphones and typewriters the other night, the softball magnates of the city staged their annual party and from all reports it was a huge success. As "Red" Doran spoily or otherwise quipped, "that was the reason it was such a success."

There were accolades, and tangible tributes in the form of trophies and special cups and whatnot with OASA secretary Frank Fenyer sending his congratulations on the Belleville District Softball League representation's fine showing in the playdowns. We are glad to note Pat Maracle, ace who flung two no-hitters during the past season, had his achievement properly recognized. The native Pat came up with a sterling seasonal performance and the tributes were fully merited. It is not many "grandpops" who are possessed of arms equipped with sufficient rubber to last a softball pastime one of the best hitters in the district without a safety being registered in the scorebook.

The BDSA came in for some well-deserved kudos, too, although there were times when the going was not all beer and skittles. But ally well that ends well and Fred Newman, OASA convener Don Lee, Bob Temple and the rest of the gang, who were the bulwarks of softball last season deserve big pats on the back.

The association was represented in the OASA playdowns by the largest number of teams in the league and while no championships came its way, it supplied "bridesmaids" on not a few occasions.

GOODIES JOLTED

The Kingston Goodyears, the team one Mike Rodden says "is the team to beat," are temporarily atop the senior "B" loop after their somewhat lucky victory over the lowly Petes the other night. They lead Cornwall Colts by one point with Clinton and our side bringing up third place with 16. The Memos face a tough nut here Friday when they tangle with the Whitby "Wrens", now under the coaching management of one Don Gallagher.

However, the Brockville Magedomas threw the well-known monkey wrench into the Goodyears' effort to pull away from the pack last night when they drubbed the Rodeoville Ramnies by a 7-3 score, the fanciest shellacking the Confection ever hit a team for in years. And they may as well get used to it, because the way the rest of the pack is travelling, the trail is getting rougher and rougher for Mr. Rodden's selection for the Ontario title.

There were no flukes about the Magedomas' win. Kitch Scanlon's nine came out for victory blood and they drank deeply to put a severe dent into the runaway ambitions of the Goodies.

Meanwhile, the Memos, with a week's layoff, are readying for what should be a tough battle with the Whitby crew. Mickey Baker is rustling up some strong reinforcements and if they should happen to dig Goalie Les Colvin out of the strenuous clubs in the field. But, shucks, anything can happen in this top-again-back-again loop. None of the teams is being sold short and from here in every game will be a battle to the last ditch.

GOALS SCORED WHEN TEAMS SHORTHANDED

Twenty per cent of the goals scored in the National Hockey League, in games up to and including those of December 1, were scored while one team enjoyed a man-power advantage. Out of 331 goals tallied by the six N.H.L. clubs, 66 were scored with one team holding a one-man edge in manpower over the opposition.

On only three occasions this season has a team scored while having a two-man advantage, and two of these goals resulted from the same double penalty.

Some National Hockey League clubs have the power and ability to score while playing one-man shy themselves. Fourteen times this season a team has scored while playing with one man less than their opponents.

Detroit Red Wings proved to be the greatest opportunists at scoring with a one-man edge in player strength. Out of the 55 goals scored by Detroit, on the morning of December 2, 14 were notched while the opposition was shorthanded.

Montreal Canadiens, highest scoring team in the league with 80 counters on December 3 a.m., notched 12 of their markers with a one-man advantage.

Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers had each scored the same number of goals, and also had made the most of the occasions when the opposition was shorthanded the same number of times. Toronto and New York both scored 12 of their 53-goal totals when their opponents were playing with one man less.

Boston Bruins scored eight of their 47 goals via the one-man advantage route, while the sixth-place Chicago Black Hawks potted eight of their 43 counters with a one-man edge.

Silver Fox May Have Motive For Team Meets Leafs Tonight; Rangers Tangle With Boston

By Jim Bastable
Canadian Press Staff Writer

You've heard about the guy who had 133 wives and added two more for company?

Coach Dick Irvin of Montreal Canadiens is no polygamist but with regard to goal scorers in the National Hockey League he is in much the same position as the sultan who added to his already-over-populated harem.

Irvin, who has such aliens as scowling Maurice Richard, fuzzy chinned Jean Beliveau, stocky Bernie Geoffrion and slim Kenny Mosdell in his lineup, is bringing up the top goal-getter in the Quebec Hockey League to strengthen the league-leading Canadiens.

BRING UP TESSIER

He said Tuesday that leftwinger Orv Tessier of Montreal Royals will join Canadiens for two games, starting tonight when they meet the Maple Leafs in Toronto. Highlights of the deal:

"We want to add more scoring power."

As if Irvin needed it. His headliners of Geoffrion, Richard, Beliveau and Mosdell have four scorers in the league, Geoffrion and Richard, for instance, each scored a total of 38 points, as many as the entire Maple Leaf club scored in 24 games to be in the standings.

Geoffrion leads the individual scoring race with 32 points, including 19 goals. Richard and Bert Olmstead are tied for defence and Mosdell 23.

Canadiens, who have dropped only seven games in 27 starts, have power elsewhere, too. The team has produced 74 goals. At that rate it could crack the league's team-scoring record this season. Detroit Red Wings, now in third place, set the mark of 226 in the 1950-51 campaign.

SO FAR, 19

Tessier, 21-year-old native of Cornwall, a hefty man with the Royals last season, has 19 goals so far this year. He has 36 points, second to Ray Powell of Quebec Aces who has 39.

The Montreal-Toronto tussle is the big engagement of the two games scheduled tonight. In the other one, the last-place Chicago Black Hawks, with only three victories in 26 starts, clash with the Rangers at New York. Rangers are tied for fourth spot with Boston Bruins.

It will be a big-league trial for Tessier, who has one of the hardest shots in the business. Irvin didn't say whether he figured Tessier would stick for the rest of the year.

Plenty of fans will be watching Richard, explosive 33-year-old rightwinger who will be gunning for two of the biggest goals of his spectacular career. He needs two more to become the first player to score 400 goals. Since joining Canadiens 12 years ago, the Rocket has amassed 398.

Cataracts Whip Mercurys For Second in Row

By The Canadian Press

Last-place Niagara Falls Cataracts continued to hang the hockey Indian sign on second-place Owen Sound Mercurys Tuesday night as they defeated the Mercs 4-3 in one of two Senior Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League games.

In the other game Windsor Bulldogs registered four goals in the last period to defeat Chatham Maroons 4-2 and move into fourth place ahead of Stratford Indians. Maroons hold onto third position, one point ahead of Windsor.

Cataracts, who have beaten Mercurys in their last three meetings, came from behind twice to win. Owen Sound led early in the first period on a goal by Buck Forslund but Al Meehanan tied it up. The Mercs went 2-1 early in the second when Ray Loustit potted one but the Cataracts came back with two more by Al Buchanan and Danny Nixon. Billy Kodatsky scored the extra Cataracts goal in the third.

Bulldogs and Maroons were tied 1-1 going into the third period on goals by Murray Wilkie and Frank Roselle. But Windsor put on the power in the third to outscore Chatham 3-1. Walt Poddubny, Red Abbott and Wilkie scored for Windsor and Jim Wilson for Chatham. Both Maroons goals came when Windsor was a man short.

So, Thats It! Referees Are Subject to Fines

By W. R. Wheatley

MONTREAL (CP) — Through a new regulation, which will be put into hush-hush all season, National Hockey League referees are subject to fines which seemed lax in cracking down with misconduct penalties.

The Canadian Press learned today of the regulation. Several fines have already been imposed. The fine is $25, the same as the automatic levy a player would have had to pay if he had been given the penalty.

Without confirming the regulation, NHL president Campbell of Toronto said:

"As far as I am concerned the administration of league policy in regard to officiating is strictly private," said Campbell. "The referee-in-chief can deal with employees as he sees fit, and I don't see how he does it."

Campbell did supply information from referees on the first 70 games, one third of the season, which showed 13 misconduct penalties had been imposed compared with 10 for the same period last year.

Referee-in-Chief Carl Voss, who is out of town, sees many games in his reviews about the clients, he does Campbell.

It was learned also that management of clubs can complain to NHL headquarters of laxness of referees in imposing misconduct penalties. The complaints are then discussed by Voss with the referees before any action is taken.

THINK HASTY

Montreal Canadiens have just returned from a road trip during which Montreal Hockey Bureau has given misconduct penalties in two successive games. They were instructed by the action of the referees was precipitate and unjustifiable.

Coach Dick Irvin of Canadiens said he thinks the regulation is "a sign of weakness."

"It's a tough spot in which to put a referee to be thinking fast enough as it is," said Irvin.

"If the referee is in charge of the game he should be in full charge, with discretion to impose misconduct penalties where, in his judgment, they are deserved. This thing is an attack on the referees' heads; it isn't fair."

Major League Confabs Over, But Many Deals Are Pending

NEW YORK (AP)—The major baseball league meetings are ended but that trading man, Frank Lane, was still in town today—which means there may still be some more player deals.

In fact, the energetic Chicago White Sox general manager has a couple of new aces up his sleeve, Lane isn't the only man still eager to do business. Cleveland's Hank Greenberg, Cincinnati's Gabe Paul, Philadelphia's Roy Hamey and St. Louis' Dick Meyer stayed behind while most baseball men departed.

Possible deals that may be consummated in the next few days or few weeks include:

1. The Brooklyn-Cincinnati five-player swap involving outfielder Wally Post, pitcher Fred Baczewski and Hoble Landrith of the Reds and second baseman Junior Gilliam and pitcher Bob Milliken of the Dodgers. It's not dead although it has cooled off considerably.

2. The White Sox, rebuffed in their efforts to snag third baseman Jim Finigan and pitcher Arnie Portocarrero from Kansas City, are prepared to lower their bid with a better and bigger proposition.

3. Lane also has been closeted with general manager Greenberg of the Indians and may soon announce a trade that would send outfielder Dale Mitchell to Chicago for catcher Carl Swistal and a utility infielder.

New Owners Take Over Larks, Mystery Surrounds Identity

MONTREAL (CP)—New owners took over the Big Four championship Montreal Alouettes Tuesday but left everyone guessing as to who they might be.

The sale of the Alouettes, fresh from one of their best seasons, both on the field and at the gate, was made public in a brief announcement by the club. Regarding the new owners, it said only that "a new board will be announced shortly."

Even those usually in on all team dealings could shed no light on the ownership. General-manager Lou Hayrapetian said that a group of new owners were from Montreal and English-speaking.

"No one here knows anything," said one official at club headquarters. "And believe me, we're more curious than anyone else."

TRUST COMPANY HEAD

The deal was made through "a local trust company," unofficially reported to be the Montreal Trust Company. None of the officials of the company would comment on the sale.

The transaction involved the sale of shares of the three principal owners—club president Fred Skelchey, Big Four president Roy Robertson and club vice-president Charlie Stone. Unofficial reports placed the selling price at $250,000 but said not all assets were included.

The new owners were reported to have offered a contract renewal to Hayman. The reports also said coach Dougan (Fiesty) Fraser will be retained.

The ship went off their 14 games in finishing first during the regular Big Four football schedule and defeated Hamilton Tiger-Cats in playoffs. They then bowed to Edmonton 26-25 in the Grey Cup game.

Attendance at home games averaged more than 18,000.

THROUGH HAYMAN

Hayman said preliminary negotiations for the sale were made through him.

"An offer came to me through a prospective buyer," he said. "The deal was completed Tuesday afternoon. Next thing is a meeting between the new principal or principals and the old directors. At such time a new directorate probably will be announced.

"All I can add at this time is the new ownership is located in Montreal and English-speaking."

Ownership of the team, which came into being in 1946 to replace the old Montreal Hornets, last changed hands in 1951.

Teepees Edge Canadiens 5-4 In Overtime

MONTREAL (CP)—A blistering 25-foot drive by Alvin McDonald after 44 seconds of overtime play Tuesday night gave St. Catharines TeePees a 5-4 win over Montreal junior Canadiens in one of a series of games for the Laurier Trophy.

Three junior teams from the Ontario Hockey Association and the three clubs in the Quebec Junior Hockey League are playing a round-robin series for the, challenge cup.

McDonald's tally came after the TeePees had overcome a four-goal deficit in the third period to push the contest into overtime.

Montreal goalie Claude Pronovost was brilliant in the nets for two periods while his teammates exploded for three fast goals in the second and added another early in the third.

HAT TRICK

McDonald scored the hat trick by picking up two goals in the final frame to add to his overtime score. His first came while Canadiens were a man short and he scored his second lying on his back. Pronovost was caught out of position and McDonald, who had been dumped, swung at the loose puck and it slid past the startled goalie. Hank Cieslo accounted for the other two St. Catharines tallies.

Andre Pronovost, Ron Attwell and Neil Burke scored Canadiens' first three goals within four minutes and 32 seconds of each other early in the middle period. Burke picked up Montreal's fourth goal when he caught the lower corner of the net with a partly-screened shot from about 30 feet out.

Tennis Star Denies Romance Upset Game

It had been rumored that Hoad's girl friend, Jennifer Staley, had refused to marry him.

"There is no truth in what newspapers have been saying about the romance," Hoad said. "I have had a bit of bad luck in form, but I think I'll pick that up."

Hoad visited Jennifer at her parents' home Tuesday night, and she said "Lew and I are good friends. We have not got around to talking about marriage."

Irish Extend Lead With Win Over Marlies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto St. Michael's College Majors Tuesday night added to their 10-point lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League. Tuesday night with a 5-4 win over Toronto Marlboros in overtime.

The game, worth four points to St. Michael's, was the first of three to be played between the two Toronto teams this season.

In another junior A game, Guelph Biltmores managed a 4-3 win over last-place Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks. The Canucks have dropped 16 of their 19 league games this year.

Rookie leftwinger Frank Mahovlich scored the St. Michael's goal in overtime to give the Collegians their win. It was their 18th of 19 games this season.

St. Michael's centre Bill Colvin scored three goals to move within one point of the league-leading point-getter Hank Cieslo of St. Catharines TeePees. Pat Hannigan got St. Michael's other goal. Centre Billy Harris scored two unassisted goals for Marlboros. Bob Fulford and Mike Nykoluk got one each.

Biltmores held off a late third period attack by Kitchener to post their win. The Blits led 4-3 half way through the third on two unassisted goals by Ike Scott and singles by John Gillis and Bob Parker. Kitchener pressed throughout the latter part of the third and made it 4-3 on a goal by Glen Cressman, but couldn't tie it up. Gus Carrol and Jake Smola scored the other two for Kitchener.

Kaufman Leads Senior Point Scoring Race

TORONTO (CP)—Four centres are battling it out for the scoring lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League. They're right up there because of assists.

Ken Laufman of the league-leading Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen is in first place with eight goals and 24 assists for 32 points, in statistics released by the association Tuesday. He earned most of his assists feeding passes to rightwinger George Scholes, the top goal-getter with 11. Scholes is well down on the point list, he has only six assists, good for a total of 25 points.

The other three centres are tied for second place with 26 points. Jack Taylor of Owen Sound Mercurys has nine goals and 17 assists and Jim Robertson of Niagara Falls Cataracts and Mickey Roth of Stratford Indians have eight goals and 18 assists each.

Goalkeeper Dennis Brodeur, who went to Dutchies from Windsor earlier this season, leads the league in goalkeeping averages with 3.62 goals a game. Owen Sound's Bob Gillson leads the league in shutouts with two.

The leaders:	G	A	Pts.
Laufman, Kitchener	8	24	32
Taylor, Owen Sound	9	17	26
Robertson, N. Falls	8	18	26
Roth, Stratford	8	18	26

Hospital Gets Part Of 'Cheer' Fund

MONTREAL (CP)—The Cheer Up Chuck campaign will also cheer up St. Justine Hospital in Montreal. It will receive $1,000.98 on the suggestion of Chuck Hunsinger, the "goat" of the Grey Cup football final.

A telegram from 21,943 Montreal Alouette fans, who contributed 5 cents each toward its cost with all their names added, was sent to Hunsinger at his home in Harrisburg, Ill., as a cheer-up gesture. Montreal radio station CKAC started the movement for the giant telegram.

"We found out that because of the telegram's length, the rate was cheaper than we had thought," said station manager Jimmy Tapp Tuesday night.

"We telephoned Hunsinger and he said he had read in Montreal newspapers that the St. Justine Hospital campaign lagged behind and he thought it would be a good idea to donate to the hospital any money we had. So we are turning over the $1,036.98."

Aussies Alarmed Rex Hartwig May Have Mumps

MELBOURNE (AP)—Australian tennis officials, alarmed over growing unfavorable publicity, received a new jolt today when a physician said Rex Hartwig apparently had the mumps and probably would have to skip the Davis Cup challenge round.

"He will be confined at least for a couple of weeks and definitely will not be able to train for tennis," said the doctor who examined Hartwig. The doctor said there was every indication the 23-year-old court star had the mumps, but said Hartwig still has had time to recuperate viously. If he is unable to train, Hartwig will not be able to join Lew Hoad, Ken Rosewall, Mervyn Rose and others in the challenge round at Sydney Dec. 27-28.

Harry Hopman, Aussie captain whose woes are increasing, said his players had mumps before and he thought there was little chance of them being stricken again.

Hartwig was runner-up in the Australian and U.S. singles championships and won the New South Wales title recently.

Meanwhile, the Lawn Tennis Association of Australia was reported planning official steps to relax stern training measures which have drawn widespread criticism, particularly since the poor showing of Hoad, last year's Davis Cup hero.

What form this action takes is uncertain but one source high in the Australian setup said Hopman is likely to be called on the carpet and advised to change his methods.

Robinson May Fight in Detroit

NEW YORK (AP)—Sugar Ray Robinson, former middleweight champion now engaged in a comeback, said Tuesday he may fight Boston's Joe Rindone in Detroit Jan. 5, in a tuneup for a possible bout with Kid Gavilan later in the winter.

Robinson and his manager, George Gainford, were suspended Nov. 30 by the Michigan commission and affiliated states for refusing to go through with a Dec. 8 bout with Rindone in Detroit.

"I never signed for the match," said Robinson, "and anyway, how can Michigan or any of those other states suspend me when I'm not licensed by them."

Robinson said, however, that he was dickering with Detroit promoter Nick Londes, who brought the action against him in the Detroit Tuesday in the 73rd annual inter - university Rugby Union match.

CAMBRIDGE WINS

THE CANADIAN SOLDIER...THE ARCTIC... AND YOUR FREEDOM

To explore, to determine its strategic importance, to test men and machines in these northern regions, is vital to our defences — to your freedom in case of attack. The Canadian Army has for years been actively engaged in this work. The courage and willingness of Canada's soldiers to face the extreme cold — to go through the rugged tests of manoeuvres — hard on men and machines — has brought about greater knowledge and a greater measure of safety for all Canadians.

Army life offers the challenges of this kind of service. It demands good men — physically fit and intelligent. It offers thorough training and many opportunities for advancement. The Army is a career that combines the opportunity for adventure with the financial security of good pay and pension. It is an opportunity to serve the well-being of Canada as well as your own future.

TYPICAL OF MANY CANADIANS is Sergeant Roy Reding of Innisfail, Alta. Sergeant Reding is one of many Canadian Soldiers who have served in our Arctic regions. They tested weapons, equipment and clothing. "It was really an experience — a little rough at times — but it's all part of our duty. Anyway, I wouldn't have missed the chance for all the world." —

To be eligible you must be 17 to 40 years of age, skilled tradesmen to 43. When applying bring birth certificate or other proof of age.

By RICHARD KANSCHKE

Moscow (A) The Russians, who surprised the hockey world last season by defeating Canada for the world championship at Stockholm, are serving notice they intend to retain the title this season.

Realizing that the Canadians are out for revenge and will send a far stronger team to next February's games in West Germany, Russia has some 10 teams training in various parts of Siberia and the Urals.

Canada's hockey prestige suffered a severe setback last winter when Moscow Dynamos defeated Toronto East York 7-3 in the championships at Stockholm. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, which was strongly criticized at home for sending an intermediate team to the games, has chosen the Arvo Cup champion Penticton V's to represent Canada at the next tournament.

SEES GOOD SEASON

Komsomol Pravda, newspaper of the Communist Youth League, says "The new season promises to be very interesting and filled with intensive competition in international play.

Russian teams will be conditioned for a preliminary round of national play, following which a picked team will be sent to Switzerland and Sweden to meet national clubs.

In January Russia is scheduled to entertain teams from Czechoslovakia, Canada and West Germany in pre-tournament games, and Sweden will repay the Russians' earlier visit.

But what the Russians are directing their training towards mostly is the world tournament in late February. The struggle there, Komsomol Pravda warns, will be intense. "Judged by the serious training already being carried out in a number of countries."

Ballet Dancing For Tennis Stars? Gad, What Next!

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—Maureen Connolly's suggestion that tennis musclemen like Tony Trabert and Lew Hoad take ballet lessons to improve their footwork threatens the Davis Cup stars Tuesday.

Little Mo, the world ruler of women's tennis, demurely pointed out that ballet would improve the players' agility on the court.

"Cripes," scowled Trabert. "The next thing they'll be suggesting is that we wear lace panties like Gussie Moran. And with these legs of mine!"

"Ballet!" gasped non - playing captain Billy Talbert. "For Pete's sake, I have trouble doing the two-step."

The Australians were equally unimpressed.

"I would be a pretty sight lifting my right toe daintily on an overbend smash, wouldn't I?" asked Lew Hoad, obviously shaken. "No thanks, Maureen. We will stick to weight lifting."

In San Diego, Calif., Miss Connolly said "somebody's been putting words in my mouth."

"But," she added, "on second thought it would be a good idea."

The former teen-age tennis queen now 20 years old, added: "After all boxers are as rugged as they come and I've heard that many of junior practice ballet and lap to improve their footwork and balance.

"Look at Sugar Ray Robinson!"

Pantages May Join BC Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rod Pantages, punter with Edmonton Eskimos last season, said Tuesday he hopes to join British Columbia Lions in 1955.

"I'm trying to get transferred here," said the former Vancouver Junior star and six-year-professional with Calgary Stampeders, Montreal Alouettes and the Edmonton.

Said Lions' coach Annis Stukus: "It's up to Edmonton, naturally, but we'd like to have Rod . . . he's a pretty fair ball player."

The Kibitzer

They start learning bridge at the middle, do millions of women and men. From there on they fiddle and fiddle without knowing where, how, or when.

Sooner or later even a dub has a good general idea of when to start with an opening bid of one in a suit. Or when he can come in with a first response. But his second bid are a bit confused.

Culbertson says an opening one bid in suit is indefinite; as is the first responding bid to it. A more precise impression comes from each on the second round of bidding.

The second bid by responder shows his relation either by a pass, or by showing preference with a weak hand in one suit, or by rebidding freely if he sees a chance for game.

Goren says an opening one bid in a suit covers a wide range of hands; as does the first responding bid that may cover hands from 6 to 18 points. The second call by responder clarifies this.

Unless forced, responder does not bid again with six or seven points; bids again with eight or nine points if encouraged by opener's bids; strong with 10 to 13 points; forces with 13 to 16 points. Accepts 14-A-B as the first bid by opener or responder shows a definite minimum or more; each follows the A-B order of choice; raise once for each additional trick; jump with enough for game.

♥K 8 4 2
♦K 8 4 2
♣9 3

If your south partner opens with a heart, south to two hearts. It shows adequate support, a minimum of three tricks, two high cards.

Suppose partner then bids three hearts. With no more than three tricks and no more than two high cards, pass. You have no more to show.

This you could have decided by any system you are able to apply. Some are much too dense to like plain common sense.

'Cheer Chuck' Campaign Clicks; Huns. Happy

HARRISBURG, Ill. (AP) — A telegram of near record length and more than 1,000 letters have confirmed Chuck Hunsinger he's wanted next season on the pro football field at Montreal.

Hunsinger received the telegram signed by 21,948 fans in a special ceremony tonight before the Western Union office in Harrisburg.

The telegram capped a "Cheer Up Chuck" campaign started by Montreal radio station CKAC when fan contributed a dollar toward the cost of the 306-foot wire, believed the longest ever sent over the wires to the United States.

A fumble made Hunsinger, the Aloettes' star halfback, the goat of Montreal's 26-25 loss to Edmonton in the Grey Cup game Nov. 27.

HUGE PILE-UP

Last week more than 1,000 consoling letters piled up at the Hunsinger farm home in Harrisburg. Among them were 10 from a Montreal grade-school class in penmanship.

Hunsinger called the telegram and fan mail "about the most important thing that's happened to me in athletics."

He said he would sign with Montreal next season and hoped to have his "great year in football."

"I'm feeling great and I want to repay the people of Montreal for this tribute. Maybe greatest fans in the world are up there."

Latest Hollywood Cinderella Is Gorgeous Honey Blonde

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It turns out that Cinderella needs not only a pumpkin but new teeth as well.

The latest Hollywood Cinderella is Marjorie Heiser, a gorgeous, 19-year-old honey blonde for blonde honey, if you wish. She amazed many people last week when she went to court to have her contract approved, as all players under 21 must do.

Marjorie told the judge she would be unable to save anything out of her $1,000-a-year salary. Her contract was approved, and it was believed to be the first of an under-a-grand subpoena production for savings.

Now you and I could live nicely on such a sum, supporting our children and house payments. Why can't Marjorie, who is single and lives in an apartment?

"It's because I have my father's jaw and my mother's teeth," she explained. Heredity played her some tricks. She estimates it will cost between $3,000 and $5,000 for permanent caps for her tiny teeth. Not to mention the many painful hours in the dentist's chair.

But don't think it's unusual for an actress to rely on dentures to amplify her beauty. You'd be surprised how many top stars wear caps.

Her front teeth are the only things false about Marjorie. She is a unique and strikingly beautiful. So much so that NBC chose her to be Miss Color Television and used her fetching features as a test pattern. That's how 20th Century-Fox found her.

Marjorie could have had a bigger salary. She was offered $500 a week, but said she wanted less.

"I know it sounds crazy," she said, "but I found out that girls who were signed at high figures were soon dropped by the studios. I can't afford to take any chances with my career."

Harry Horner, director of the new CinemaScope production in color of Leonard Silliman's original Broadway revue, "New Faces", closing tonight at the McCarthy Theatre, was a top selector of the talent which produced Edward G. Alperson. For Horner has a long background in the legitimate theatre, and has had a firm knowledge of how to handle this pioneer wide screen during a novel almost exactly as it played on the New York stage.
Horner came to America from his native Czechoslovakia twenty years ago, as assistant to Max Reinhardt, the celebrated director of stage spectacles with whom he had worked in Vienna. When Reinhardt returned to Europe, Horner elected to stay on, first as a designer of stage decor, and then as director. Horner made his mark on Broadway, being involved in such hits as "Lady in the Dark", with Gertrude Lawrence, Victor Mature and Danny Kaye, "Star and Garter", a revue (his last prior to "New Faces") with Gypsy Rose Lee and Bobby Clark; and Moss Hart and Lawrence Riddle, "Winged Victory". March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—You folks might give some thought to improving the quality of your work today, and to keeping nerves calm. What you do, do well, and don't be too hasty. Take all in stride; smile.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Your may need help, friendly advice. Review past action, how you fared. Be self-reliant, take advantage of opportunities to further honorable goals and heed family advice.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Two-way action possible. In the a.m. finances and work will need shrewd handling to avoid possible setbacks, P.M. has much better aspects so you can make up for lost time. Go forward with faith.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Personal and heart interests, all worthwhile endeavors have top billing today. Execute business matters as promptly as possible. Relax in free time with family, desirable friends.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Keep everything under control. It's insurance for better business, health and family happiness. Affairs will work real charmingly like (good reading) as a tonic.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Some tension in the early hours, Do not remain too long at one task or your energies may become depleted. Anxiety can disrupt the best of plans, so get proper rest and exercise.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Sometimes it is necessary to remind oneself that "all is not gold that glitters." Never let fame or worldly goods overshadow life's best "little" things, interfere with peace of mind.

October 24 to to November 22 (Scorpio)—A relaxed mind will give you a clear-thinking, cheerier attitude. You will need to use your best talents on this rather too-encouraging day. Concentrate on quality rather than quantity.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Get in your best ideas and action before evening. Try to allocate your tasks as to finish what you do well even if it isn't all you wanted. Be content even with a little achievement.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—There may be some restrictions but you must not give up or lose faith in your ability. Common sense plus your natural wisdom will help yo uover difficult spots—and on to gains.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—You can have a useful day even if results do not reach top expectations. Don't force issues work hard become involved in matters you know you can't properly handle. Be consistent.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Some unfriendly influences, maybe problems today. Stick to rules and regulations and be congenial even if it is difficult. Don't try to push your way through; be diplomatic.

You born today, ruled by Jupiter, have broad vision, dreams of great things, and often realize many of those dreams. You can be successful if you work hard and use your talents and your better qualities rightly; also curb faults. You can make and hold friends since you are loyal and do not overstep their rights. You do not like pettiness or jealousy. This sign has given to the world many excellent managers, political leaders, teachers, skilled workers; also bankers and professional people. Watch dict and get sufficient sleep. Birthdate: John Milton, Eng. poet.

Little Benny's Notebook

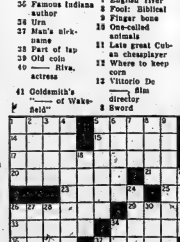
Ma was sowing to herself in her room, and I said, G, ma, wait till i tell you about the big fite Lucky Leroy Shoonfarmer had with Skinny Martin today.

I'll wait, ma said. Are you washed it yet? No, ma said, and I said, Aw G, ma, it's too erly.

It's not too early to start reminding you, ma said, and I said, Well anyways, ma, wait till I tell you. Lucky Leroy and Skinny got rags and things out of both their houses, and made an agreement to sell it to the junkshop and buy candy with the profits and divide it equal, I said.

Specking of junkshops, your room is a site to behold, ma said, and I said, They got a dime for all the stuff, and then the big argument started about what kind of candy to get with it.

I thought I warned you not to wear that swetter again until I washed it, ma said, and I said, I forgot, mar and anyways, it's better dertier than this. Lucky Leroy wanted to get a Chocklit Zanibar, and Skinny wanted to get a packidge of Choo Choo Chewing Gum, and that's how the argewment started, I said.



My my, when I think of the delicios varieties they used to sell in the little candy stores when I was a girl, ma said. Little chocklit pennies, for instance, with white seeds on them. They didn't really look like peanies, but we didn't mind that, and lemmon sticks, oh my, she said, and I said, A hole, ma, I'm trying to tell you about the big fight Leroy neerly had with Skinny.

And I'm trying to show you how it feels when you keep interrupting me whenever I try to tell you something, ma said.

Which just then I heard the fellows yelling and laffing outside, and I quick ran out to change the subject.

SPT TREATED LENIENTLY

KARLSRUHE, Germany (AP)—A 45-year-old former Nazi intelligence agent was convicted Monday of spying in West Germany for the Communists, and was sentenced to one year and nine months in jail. The West German Supreme Court said it had been lenient with Alvin Rose, 43, because officials in Soviet Russia and Germany had forced him to spy after discovering he had worked for the Gestapo.

THIS IS THE SAMPLE-SIZED HIPPO

"Pudgie," a one-year-old pigmy hippopotamus from Liberia, gets a curious squirt from a Betty D'Amore of New York airport. The rare animal was brought to this continent by John Hewston of Salisbury, Md., who hopes to find "Pudgie" a home in a zoo when she grows up. Pudgie is already the size—and the weight of the normal hippo. (Central Press Canadian).

Edna Rose Ritchings Object Of Veneration in Many Lands

Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—To worshippers in Austria and New Zealand, England and Ecuador, 23-year-old Edna Rose Ritchings is an object of veneration and devotion. They know her by the name she was given in Vancouver where she was born.

For the last eight years the pretty, blue-eyed blonde has been Mother Divine, wife of a Negro in Mt. Vernon, N.Y., who took upon as God.

Her signature is Mrs. S. A. Divine, for she took the name Sweet Angel when she chose in Negro ministry. Since Mrs. Divine, better known as Father Divine, whose reported disciple she has remained ever since.

The engraved notepaper on which Mother Divine corresponds evidence carries the legend: "I know you are God personified."

Edna Rose is said to have first "recognized" Father Divine when she was a 16-year-old girl in a well-to-do Vancouver florist, nor her mother was a follower but the girl is reported to have known a family of Father Divine's disciples. She began an exchange of correspondence with her future husband. They met for the first time when he came to work for the sect led her to leave her family and take a secretarial job in Vancouver. She became vice-president of the local mission of Father Divine and four years later she met Father Divine and they were married April 20, 1946, a month after their first meeting.

Her marriage to the bald little leader, at least 40 years her senior, has long been accepted by the faithful, but it has been a continuing source of difficulty between believers and the outside world.

She has described it as "international and apparently inter-racial" for the words white and Negro do not exist in the Divinist vocabulary. Both partners describe their union as spiritual, for "God is not married."

"Our spiritual marriage — the fact that I was and still remain a virgin—is a reproach to all who claim to follow Christ and do not," Mother Divine explained in one of her rare communications with the press.

Father Divine refers to her as "the second body" of an earlier Father Divine, his first wife, a Negro who died in 1942.

The Peace Mission movement headed by the Divines has a following of perhaps 50,000 spread through many countries. Its assets have been placed as high as $6,000,000 and includes poultry estates, hotels, restaurants, stores, farms and a fleet of limousines.

Father Divine repeatedly emphasizes that he owns no property, has no bank account and accepts no personal gifts, although voluntary contributions to the movement whose treasurer he personal possessions.

The Divines' personal appearances are confined to "International headquarters" in Philadelphia and a handful of adjacent Peace Missions in New Jersey and New York City.

In a tradition dating back to the depression-ridden 1930s when the movement began, banquets are served daily from 4 a.m. to well past midnight at 20 cents a plate to visitors at these missions.

An endless stream of supporters seeking guidance on countless problems frequently keep Father Divine absent from the banquet table. She then takes his place at the head of the table, blesses the food and sometimes serves the diners herself.

She also acts as leader of the Rosebuds, a group of white-clad girls pledged to follow Father Divine's service; conducts classes of instruction in the movement's beliefs and delivers inspirational talks.

Her name is coupled with her husband's by believers, who frequently address their prayers to "Father-Mother-God."

The banquets are held under a continual spell of religious ecstasy. As the food is blessed, the followers break into hymns and the praise accompanied by hand-clapping, which may continue 15 minutes at a stretch.

Occasionally a worshipper will rise and launch himself at the feet of Father or Mother Divine. Others sections violent convulsions until they fall exhausted on the edge of the table, unnoticed by the other diners. Still others rise to give testimony of Father Divine's omnipotence.

Father Divine is believed to have been born around 1880 on a rice plantation in Georgia, though he has claimed he was "combusted" one day in 1900 on a street corner in Harlem, New York's Negro district. In his early years he carried the name of George Baker and worked as an odd-job man in Baltimore.

It is not clear when he first claimed divinity. But his reputation was established with his followers in 1931 when a Long Island lodge fined him $500 and sentenced him to a year in jail for being a public nuisance.

Four days later the judge died of a heart attack. The believers proclaimed that Father Divine had struck him down. The conviction later was reversed on a point of law.

In recent years, Father Divine frequently has invoked his curse against his detractors, particularly newspapers in which he receives unfavorable mention, declaring that "mention" I am a live wire, if they touch me inharmoniously they destroy themselves."

Too Many Boards Says President Of Dairy Council

TORONTO (CP)—G. M. Carlyle, president of the national dairy council, said here the many regulatory boards and committees concerned with the dairy industry in Ontario could become a straitjacket to retard orderly change and progressive development.

Speaking at a meeting of the Ontario Milk Distributors Association, Mr. Carlyle said the system of boards and committees in Ontario overshadows anything now contemplated in other provinces.

His remarks were interpreted by many of the 500 executives attending as a comment on bill 68 which was passed by the Ontario legislature at its last session.

The dairy operators opposed the bill—which consolidated much of previous legislation—because they felt it contained provisions which if exercised fully in the future could take much of the control of their own businesses from them.

"Many of the responsibilities which could be assigned to these control bodies," Mr. Carlyle said, "replace the natural economic forces and there is the greatest reason to fear that the more regulation the industry receives, the more suffocating will these influences become."

Mr. Carlyle said the industry has absorbed a large amount of progressive change during the last 20 years. At the same time, he said, the industry has been subjected to pressures by federal commissions, legislative committees, boards of enquiry, milk control boards and other public bodies. Sometimes, he said, the influence has been favorable, sometimes the industry has been hindered.

Opposes Banning Of Union Shops

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell Tuesday came out flatly against state laws outlawing labor contract provisions that workers must become union members.

The Eisenhower administration cabinet member's declaration that he is opposed "categorically" to such laws, now in effect in 17 states, came as a surprise in a speech prepared for the annual CIO convention.

Labor unions are as much or more concerned with getting such as they are with changing or repealing the federal Taft-Hartley law.

Moslem Fanatics Hanged in Egypt

CAIRO (AP)—Six members of the extremist Moslem Brotherhood were hanged in Cairo's military prison Tuesday for plotting to assassinate Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser and overthrow his government.

Disregarding pleas for clemency from other Moslem countries, Egypt's governing revolutionary council carried out the executions ordered by a military court which convicted the men Saturday.

First to die was Mahmoud Abdel Latif, a fanatic who fired eight wild shots at Nasser Oct. 26 during an Alexandria rally.

The other five executed included Yousef Talaat, head of the brotherhood's secret order.

The brotherhood's leader, supreme guide Hassan El Hodeiby, also was sentenced to death, but this later was commuted to life imprisonment at hard labor.

GREAT VIOLINS

The master violin makers Amati, Guarneri and Stradivari all came from Cremona in Italy.

Canadian Flier Is Under Orders To Remain Silent

TOKYO (AP) — Sqdn. Ldr. Andrew H. MacKenzie arrived last night from Hong Kong "under direct orders from Ottawa" to tell nothing more about the United States' 23½ years in Communist Chinese captivity.

The 50-year-old RCAF ace who mentioned in Hong Kong Monday that he saw American airmen in his prison camp was whisked from Haneda airport by a 12-man Canadian military and embassy escort.

Wing Cmdr. Donald Skene of Toronto, MacKenzie's brother-in-law, said the Ilkenes pilot knew only of the Americans in his camp, not the 11 airmen recently sentenced by Red China on spy charges. Skene accompanied MacKenzie on a PanAmerican Airways flight from Hong Kong.

MacKenzie told reporters he was physically fit, and said he didn't know why he was not allowed to tell the names or addresses of Americans he saw in Chin a.

LICENSE PINBALLS

London Smashed By Second Storm After 40 Injured

More Lives Are Lost at Sea And Flood Threats Renewed

By ARCH McKENZIE

LONDON (CP) — A pre-dawn thunderstorm and gale heaped new damage today on West London, battered by a "pocket" tornado during Wednesday's evening rush hour.

Heralded by a vicious hailstorm, the new storm uprooted a house and lumber yard, scores of trees in a 10-mile line between Shepperton and Wembley. Firemen and police worked through the night helping householders save property and repair damage.

Some streets were blocked off. Train service was curtailed on the underground system affected by damage to Gunnersbury station, whose roof was blown off by the tornado Wednesday night. Seven persons injured at the time are still in hospital.

The over-all toll—estimated at about 40—remained unclear in fatalities in the London area.

Hundreds of roof slates and chimney pots were blown away, while television aerials were twisted into weird shapes. Trees, of which thousands ripped off, lay in parks.

Leicestershire, in the Midlands, reported a loss of more than 1,000 trees of 25 years. In southern England, the storm brought similar damage in areas still flooded from last week's great storm.

The tornado, accompanied by thunder and lightning, first reached Reigate, Surrey, and then swooped on the West London suburbs, a whirling dark funnel of destruction.

CAR FLOATS BY

It ripped the canopy off Gunnersbury station, sheared off the side of a bill house in Acton, smashed scaffold at a concrete garage in Chiswick High road, in Willesden, shopkeeper Lloyd Williams told reporters he looked out of his window and saw an autor mobile floating past 15 feet in the air.

Some houses had remarkable escapes. Mr. and Mrs. William Stevens were just dazed when the tornado split the tall three-storey building in Acton. An elderly woman was trapped in an upstairs room but was extricated unhurt.

Outside the immediate London area, the weather wrought manifold types of damage. Caravan dwellers in Woking Surrey, a popular "dormitory" area from which thousands of office workers commute daily to London, were flooded out and rescued by firemen. At Charmouth, Dorset, a leak in water spout loosed itself from the sea, flung into a police car and set before the thatch off a cottage.

Firemen in Hertford, who had to go to the rescue of 20 women who were busy playing whist and did not notice they had been cut off by four-foot-deep flood waters. Before they would go the firemen carry them to safety, however, they insisted on finishing their hand.

A landslide at Ilfracombe, Tiverton blocked a road and the railway line to Exeter. Trees, wires were flooded, telephone and power lines were snapped and four inches of snow reported in some areas.

The gale at Seaford, in Sussex, was broken in two.

Gales in the North sea and Baltic imperilled shipping still resting from two weeks of almost continuous heavy weather. The last of latest victims were three lifeboatmen, swept away when a giant wave capsized their vessel at Scarborough, in northeast England.

Dublin, capital of the Irish Republic, suffered its worst storm in 40 years. Gales and rain left a trail of broken power cables, flooded houses and disrupted roads.

Late Wednesday night a small ship reported to be in a force of 400-ton Ariel sank off the French Atlantic coast with the loss of five of the eight crew.

WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis: A low pressure area over lower Michigan will move through southern Ontario today followed by an extensive area of rain and snow.

Slightly colder air is pushing down from the north behind this disturbance bringing cloudy weather with snowflurries for Friday.

Banquet in Air Served Troops In Arctic Test

FORT CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) Airborne units involved in Exercise Polar Bull Dog II were served a regular banquet in the air—all in the interests of science.

Although the 306 members of the jump group have so far failed to make their descent severe weather conditions have delayed the winter training exercise for five days—they were in the air long enough to enable psychologists to gather information on the feeding habits of paratroopers.

The meal, prepared by the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, was served in individual boxed. It consisted of soup, grapefruit juice, jellied turkey, cold ham, roast beef, turkey, buttered bread, raw vegetables, an apple and an orange, candy, tea and coffee.

The men ate what they wanted. Leftovers in the air were collected and saved. Results may give an indication as to what type of food paratroopers prefer before a jump and how much should be prepared.

Much to be Done, To Alleviate Unemployment

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost says much remains to be done to alleviate unemployment though industry and governments have taken big steps to provide a more regular rate of employment this year.

He made the statement following a meeting of federal and provincial authorities to discuss ways to reduce unemployment.

The meeting, attended by Premier Frost, joint federal-provincial action was planned to reduce seasonal unemployment. The number of unemployed in winter is about double that of summer.

A long-range plan, which calls for the use of timing works to take up the slack in cyclical unemployment, was also discussed.

TO DECENTRALIZE

The premier said the purpose of the talks was to decide what further steps can be taken and to collect the co-operation of various depots provinces.

The feeling among Queen's Park officials is that Ottawa and the provinces must get together now—first on a technical level and then on a ministerial level—for a study on a national policy on unemployment.

Premier Frost said that cyclical unemployment, which is caused by seasonal unemployment, must be met by joint action of senior and junior levels of government.

PLAN NEW HOTEL

NIAGARA FALLS (CP)—A local syndicate said Wednesday it plans to build a $500,000 six-storey hotel here. The hotel will have 76 rooms and will overlook the Niagara gorge. Construction will start in February.

Russia Stresses Long-Range Bombers In Big Production Race With West

LONDON (AP)—An authoritative British aircraft survey says the Russians are stressing long-range heavy bombers in a huge aircraft production race with the West that threatens 360 fighter factories.

The 1954-55 edition of the unofficial Jane's All the World's Aircraft, issued Wednesday night, reports that Russia also is concentrating on building up a modern fighter screen in the satellite countries.

Explaining that Moscow aims to match the latest United States and British plane designs, Jane's lists four recent types of Soviet aircraft:

1. A heavy bomber of the swept-wing four-jet type, identified as the Tu-91-428. One of these planes, considered capable of carrying nuclear weapons on intercontinental missions, roared over Moscow during May Day celebrations last spring. At that time, says Jane's, possibly "only one prototype existed." The publication does not say whether the bomber reported the Russians may have now.

2. "A small two-seat specialized interceptor" developed on the basic design of the German Messerschmitt 163 and 262.

3. A twin-jet single-seat fighter with a swept wing.

4. A swept-wing twin-jet bomber, "probably the Soviet version now being equipped with modern fighters such as the MiG-15, and second-line development also is being pushed, Jane's says.

The publication acknowledges that there is little detailed information available on Soviet aircraft development, but says it is almost certain that the U.S.S.R. "is now in the middle of a phase embodying the fruits of immediate post-war research. . . ."

6 STORES, BANK DESTROYED IN $700,000 FIRE

Suburban Etobicoke Scene of Destruction

TORONTO (CP) — Fire swept through a Bloor street business building in suburban Etobicoke early today causing damage estimated at more than $700,000. No one was injured.

Discovered in a second floor bowling alley, the fire spread quickly after the floor collapsed into five stores and a bank on the first floor and the five-storey building.

More than 60 firemen fought the blaze for more than four hours in 34-degree temperatures.

The fire started on hydro service in parts of Etobicoke for more than an hour.

FIREWALLS HELP

Firewalls on both sides of the building prevented the fire from spreading to adjacent stores and offices, firemen said. Eddie Grimshaw, a milk company night worker, discovered the fire and turned in the alarm.

Firemen and police ordered two families in apartments to vacate the building when the fire threatened a second time in its late stages.

Plane Crash Narrowly Averted

BRACEBRIDGE (CP) — A trip by 16 Toronto newspaper and newsreel men to see "Santa's Village" here almost ended in tragedy Wednesday when their chartered Trans-Canada Air Lines plane nearly flipped over.

The twin-engine DC 3 was coming in for a landing at the airstrip when a gust of wind blew it sideways. Capt. Bud Raymond of Vancouver, the pilot, gunned the motors and pulled up for another approach.

One passenger said the plane clipped some trees as it skimmed out of control up from the air field. Observers on the ground said they figured the plane would crash.

The party arrived on with a scheduled visit to Santa's Village, a collection of several large-size log houses located on a tourist attraction by a public stock company of Muskoka district citizens.

Raid Gambling Joint

TORONTO (CP)—City and provincial police Wednesday announced what they said was "one of the biggest gambling operations in the city in a long time."

They forced their way into a Yonge street mid-town apartment and seized racing information and betting records. John A. Mostacci, 44, and his wife, Rose, 38, were charged with keeping a common betting house. Bail of $5,000 worth of bets had been placed Wednesday before the raid.

Actress Dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—An autopsy was ordered today into the death of Gladys Lloyd, 30-year-old movie and stage actress who was found dead Wednesday under her apartment.

Her physician, Dr. Russell Jones, said there was a possibility her death was caused by a barbiturate.

Magistrate Reserves Judgment In Discrimination Case

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — A magistrate Wednesday reserved judgment in the first hearing of racial discrimination charges in Canada.

Magistrate Ivan B. Craig reserved decision in a hearing of two Dresden restaurant operators charged with violating the Ontario Fair Accommodation Practices Act the province's six-month-old anti-discrimination law. He did not indicate when the ruling would be handed down.

The two men were Morley McKay and Matthew Emerzon. They are charged with refusing to serve food in their cafes to three Negroes and a Chinese-Canadian girl "because of color."

Defence counsel W. L. Donohue of Sarnia called no witnesses for the defence but said in his closing address that the Ontario act is not only illegal but unworkable. He told the magistrate:

"It imposes an impossible task on the prosecution . . . the crown has to prove the state of mind of the accused."

Mr. Donohue amplified his remarks by saying a restaurant owner could refuse service for any number of reasons but that in cases of alleged racial discrimination the crown must prove service was refused against a person on race, color or creed.

The lawyer also questioned the legality of the act. He said it was criminal law and therefore came under federal jurisdiction, not provincial.

Crown attorney A. D. Bell disagreed. He said the act deals with the civil rights of citizens to be given service and accommodation in a place where the public is customarily admitted. That is a provincial matter, he added.

In Wednesday's testimony Ruth Lor, secretary of the University of Toronto Students' Christian Movement, and Bromley Armstrong, member of the United Auto Workers Union, CIO-CLC local at Fresonto Massey-Harris-Ferguson, said they were refused service for more than half an hour in Mc-Kay's cafe.

Mr. Donohue claimed the colored persons came from Toronto in a "frame up" to make things difficult for the accused.

Asked if he went into the restaurant to get food or to create an embarrassing situation, Mr. Armstrong replied:

"I went in to get food and at the same time making a test for the Joint labor relations committee to see if they (McKay's restaurant) were complying with the act."

Emerzon was charged after two Dresden Negroes lodged similar complaints with Mrs. Leonard Carter and her brother, Joseph Hanson, a farmer.

The Fair Accommodation Practices Act is administered by the provincial department of labor and upon conviction provides a $50 fine to an individual or $100 to a firm.

U.N. Would Benefit if More States Admitted Says Pearson

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Pearson says the United Nations would benefit, if it included "more of the sovereign states which exercise influence in their parts of the world."

Mr. Pearson made no specific mention of Communist China but in a statement last month he said: ". . . The Communist government does control the actions of a majority of the Chinese people, whether we or they like it or not."

The ministry's comments are contained in the November issue of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs' publication "Behind the Headlines Community" published in the same issue. Mr. Pearson now is attending meetings of the United Nations.

Ichiro Hatoyama Is Elected P. M. of Japan

The announced vote was 257 for Hatoyama and 191 for Takeshiba Ogata, Yoshida's deputy prime minister and vice president of Yoshida's Liberal party.

Yoshida, whose resignation Tuesday did not end his political career, is remembered by many as the premier who put Japan on the road to independent.

DEMAND ELECTIONS

At their price for supporting Hatoyama, Socialists demanded that he should form only a caretaker government, and that an early election should follow.

Yoshida, who led Japan for seven troubled years, resigned the premiership and party leadership two days ago when he anticipated almost certain defeat in a vote of confidence motion moved by the opposition in Parliament.

Members of his party had rebelled and broken away from his leadership to join with Progressive and other conservative opposition politicians to form the Democratic party.

Vancouver Mayor Is Re-Elected

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Electors, those who bothered to go to the polls, went along once more Wednesday with the powerful right wing civic Non-Partisan Association.

With less than one-third of the 219,333 eligible exercising their franchise, voters re-elected the straight ticket and returned Mayor Fred Hume for a third two-year term.

The result was taken as a vote of confidence in Vancouver's police force and its chief, Walter Mulligan.

HEAVILY FINED

FORT ERIE (CP) — Matthew Tkachuk was fined $100 Wednesday when he was convicted on charges of keeping liquor for sale and leaving the scene of a motor accident.

Deputy Fisheries Minister Named By Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet post for Dr. Hoyes Hornby, 44, was created to deputy fisheries minister from assistant deputy.

It is not to be hope that the cabinet would meet the requests of fishermen for increased agricultural conference last Monday that it would take up the matter with the cabinet Wednesday.

However, after the cabinet meeting, Dr. Gardiner told reporters no decision has been made.

Dr. Clark, assistant deputy fisheries minister since 1950, succeeds Stewart Bates to the $15,500-a-year post. Mr. Bates, who has recently named president of the government-owned Canadian Arctic Resources Corporation at a salary of $22,500.

A native of Montreal, Mr. Clark has been associated with the fishing industry on both Canadian coasts for more than 20 years before entering the government's service in 1940.

Says Flu in 1918 May Be Cause Of Lung Cancer

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. Milton C. Winternitz today advanced the novel theory that the big increase in cancer of the lung cancer may stem in part from the flu epidemic of 1918-19.

Winternitz, a Hoover commission scientist, said he cannot prove the point, remains to be proved—but, he said, so does the alleged association between cigaret smoking and lung cancer.

Winternitz said there is "suggestive" evidence, dating back about 35 years, that the "flu epidemic may have left behind the seeds of its original surviving victims certain pernicious lung changes which may ultimately have developed into cancer."

FORD STRIKE TALKS STALL AFTER 2 DAYS

Never Once Entered Negotiation Stage

WINDSOR (CP) — The latest talks aimed at settling strikes in three Ford of Canada plants in Ontario today faced a complete breakdown over the question of collective bargaining.

Talks under the chairmanship of Ontario Labor Minister Daley and Louis Fine, his chief conciliation officer, have adjourned Wednesday after two days' discussion, without once entering the stage of actual negotiations. They will be resumed Monday.

Mr. Daley said he had not been able to resolve "any of the questions."

UAW ATTITUDE

The United Automobile Workers of America (CIO) union representatives from the three striking Ford locals be present before collect negotiations are undertaken.

The company has refused to meet with the union on this basis, and said it will negotiate with each local separately, or not at all.

When Mr. Daley arranged Monday's meeting between the conference it was decided that only Local 200, representing the workers at the Windsor plant, be present.

The union delegation, however, was made up of Local 200 officials plus members of the striking local at Ford plants in Oakville and Etobicoke, Toronto suburb.

ONLY 20 MINUTES

The company met with this delegation for only 20 minutes, before its 11-man team, headed by Wallace Clark, vice-president of industrial relations, left the conference room.

The text of the sessions until Mr. Daley adjourned them Wednesday consisted of separate talks with the company and union leaders.

Mr. Daley said that because of the serious labor-management situation, the meetings will be resumed Monday in spite of the present deadlock.

A general membership meeting of Local 200 was called for Friday to ask for the support of the workers for the union stand at the talks.

Hit-Run Driver Injures Woman

TORONTO (CP)—Ann Middleton, 50, suffered two broken wrists, a possible fractured skull and back injuries Wednesday when struck by a car which failed to stop. It was the fatal truck accident here in the last five days.

Miss Middleton was thrown 42 feet when struck by the vehicle as the car nearly ran over a traffic officer after it darted out the car streetcar she was trying to board.

Bandit Gets $4,000

ST. JOACHIM, Ont. (CP) — An estimated $4,000 in cash was taken in the Provincial Bank of Canada branch here early Wednesday by a well dressed, smooth-operating bandit.

A St. Joachim provincial police roadblocks had been established but the bandit roads leading out of the village.

Agree Fluorine Stops Tooth Decay, May Increase Cancer, Heart Disease

TORONTO (CP)—A group of doctors agreed Wednesday that fluoridation of municipal water supplies would help prevent tooth decay.

The doctors were on a panel at the annual meeting of the Health Leagues of Canada. They included Dr. W. J. Dunn, editor of the Journal of the Canadian Dental Association.

In an informal discussion, some members of the audience said although fluorine was beneficial to children's teeth, large amounts taken in at least one case cancer and heart disease increased in a community where fluoridation was adopted.

Research said no proof had yet been shown that long-term consumption of fluorine did not contribute to cancer and heart ailments.

George MacMillan of Toronto, adopted expert on dental health, said more knowledge of the long-term effects of fluorine should be obtained before municipalities adopted it as part of their water supply.

Dr. Joslyn Rogers, provincial pathologist and professor of chemistry at the University of Toronto, said amounts of fluorine used in cities could not be harmful. He said most of the fluorine passed through the human system and the remainder prevented tooth decay.

Mr. MacMillan quoted published statistics in two test cities in New York State to show a 15 per cent increase in cancer and heart disease in communities where fluoridation had been introduced.

Other members of the panel included Dr. Fred Urquhart, president of the Health League's advisory group, and D. B. Williams, superintendent of the Brantford Health Department.

Delegates also discussed the increase of heart and arterial diseases among older persons.

Dr. D. P. Murnaghan, clinical director of Toronto General Hospital, suggested fewer spectator sports coupled with more active participation and cautioned on the food lacking in fats as antidotes to old age diseases.

Doctors Fear Pneumonia May Attack Pontiff

Pope's General Condition Is Causing Anxiety

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Fears that pneumonia may attack bedridden Pope Pius increased today as his doctors found him suffering from catarrh and a cough.

Rome radio interrupted its services shortly after noon to report that the general condition of the Pope's wrecked lung muscle was causing anxiety.

The pontiff's pulse showed signs of irregularity, and it was understood the daily walk he was to have taken across the floor of his bedroom was suspended.

Doctors had prescribed the exercise in a bid to strengthen him against pneumonia, which could be fatal in his present weakened state.

The pontiff, apparently fatigued by the excitement of Wednesday's rites closing the Marian year, passed a restless night and did not sleep well, an authoritative source said, adding: "Perhaps Wednesday's Marian function tired him emotionally."

The Pope's part in the ceremony—which was broadcast to the world—lasted only two minutes. His words, spoken from a high vocalean radio and to a great throng gathered in the square below, hailed Mary Major.

The benediction closed a year of special Roman Catholic activities honoring the Mother of Christ.

FIRST STEPS

The 78-year-old pontiff, who has been confined to his bed since Dec. 2 with a recurrence of a stomach ailment, took his first few halting steps Wednesday, supported by the arm of his private physician, Dr. Riccardo Galeazzi-Lisi. He also showed continued improvement in his ability to take food, and ate eggs and small quantities of other semi-solid foods.

Galeazzi-Lisi scheduled consultations again today with two specialists, Prof. Antonio Gasbarrini and Dr. Raffaele Paolucci di Valmaggiore, to try to determine the exact nature of the Pope's illness. The measure his progress since new treatment was started last Saturday to restore his strength. The consultations consist of increasing quantities of food and administrations of blood plasma, vitamins, amino acids and liver extract.

Paolucci said Wednesday night it still was not known whether the Pope is suffering from stomach ulcers, gastritis or possibly hernia. He said he would see him several days before an exact diagnosis is completed.

Windsor Stores Are Surprised By Brisk Trade

WINDSOR (CP)—Windsor's present buoyant economy has experts wondering what is heading it up but local store owners are simply hoping it lasts a bit longer.

With 5,700 local workers on strike for more than nine weeks, and 12,000 other workers unemployed out of a total working force of 35,000, business men a month ago were gloomily silent about the prospect of a Christmas season that would ring out the bells on their cash registers.

Instead, these larger stores are reporting record or near-record shopping crowds, and in most instances a slight shortfall in the volume of their normal Christmas sales.

STRANGE TASTES

TORONTO (CP)—Canadians are becoming gourmets, Arthur Smith a former chef on the Royal Ocean Mary said Wednesday. Mr. Smith who presides over the ovens of a Toronto restaurant, Canadians are beginning to go for such delicacies as pickled camel's eye, octopus leg and diamond-back rattler.

Little Damage From Blaze In Front St. Block

A small blaze in the East Robertson Block caused a lot of excitement along Front street about 10.30 this morning but little damage was done.

Workmen repairing damage caused by a previous fire said that the blaze reunited when a soldering iron ignited a new partition in a small room at the rear of the second floor at 219 Front street. One line of hose quickly doused flames.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance said that damage was so slight as to be negligible because of the general repair work already in progress. Office workers in the building were scarcely disturbed but a crowd gathered quickly on Front street when pumper and aerial ladder truck arrived on the scene.

Amateur Radio Club Meets

Guest speaker at the Quinte Amateur Radio Club's monthly meeting in the YMCA last night was Morris Stork of Belleville.

Text of Mr. Stork's address was early amateur radio activity in Belleville. Mr. Stork became interested in radio during its inception at the beginning of the century. Radio technique at that time was quite primitive, he explained to the club, yet some startling results were achieved by enthusiasts using simple apparatus.

County Council Told CAS Needs Full Time Worker On 'Preventive' Cases

The Hastings county Children's Aid Society needs another full time worker to deal exclusively with "preventive" cases to keep families from being broken up with result that the children are brought into CAS care.

This was learned Wednesday by Hastings county councillors as they were addressed by Bruce Kerr, CAS superintendent, as he made an appeal for an additional county grant to assist in providing the additional worker. He noted that every child brought into care cost the county from $400 to $500 per year and that if even ten children could be kept in their own homes the cost of the worker would be paid.

Mr. Kerr said it would cost approximately $5,000 per year for the worker and in boarding homes. Sixty-seven children had come into care in six months of this year and 21 had been placed in adoption.

Mr. Kerr was alarmed at the number of children taken into care in October. "What's going to happen in a depression?" he asked.

It was noted that when children are taken into care by the CAS the county is months of this per diem rate for each child and this must be paid. "This year such costs will be about $40,000," he said.

NOTHING PROVIDED

However, nothing is provided by law for the cost of "preventive" work, which would result in many children not coming into the care of the CAS. Money for this work must come from voluntary contributions such as grants from the municipalities concerned and gifts by private individuals.

"It is for you to decide whether it will pay to try and keep children in their own homes rather than wait for them to come into the care of the CAS," Mr. Kerr said. "I don't say that we could keep all children in their own homes but we could prevent some of them coming into our care."

Several of the councillors were concerned over the low adoption rate in Hastings as compared with the provincial average of 23 per cent. Reeve Ritchie Wells of Marmora declaring that he had been personally "disturbed" over the attitude taken by a CAS investigator, who interviewed a couple in his area.

TURNS AGAINST ADOPTION

He noted that this couple had been as much as insulted by the questioning and attitude of the investigator and as result had not returned against any further thought of adopting a child in Hastings.

Declaring that every adoption would save the county money, Reeve Wells said that there had been some mistake along the line somewhere.

Reeve Irwin McCoy of Marmora township was also critical of the adoption program pointing out that a couple in his municipality had applied for adoption of a child many months ago and still had not been interviewed.

He said that this had never occurred during the time when the late Mr. Ruston and the late Mr. Lockyer had been superintendents.

In reply Mr. Kerr noted that these two capable municipal clerks were now cerelam strict regulations that must be carried out. INSUFFICIENT FUNDS CLAIMS

He said that the society had engaged a full time adoption worker for two months during the summer and in that time 34 adoptions were made. Since then there had been a part time adoption worker, but because of insufficient funds this work, this woman was now doing other duties.

"If we had ten little girls all with fair hair and blue eyes we could place them all tomorrow," he said. "It is our job to provide homes for children where they will become members of that family and not be adopting to last."

He went on to say that 90 per cent of the applications for adoption were from couples wanting small babies. At present time there was only one acceptable baby in the care of the C.A.S.

Reeve Tryon, of Bancroft, wanted to know if any additional workers were needed in the C.A.S. Mr. Kerr, if additional workers were needed in the C.A.S. he would say so and the county would have to foot the bill.

Reeve Bayard replied that it just did not work that way. "The only way that the C.A.S. get more money from the county is to have more children in care." He went on to say that it was just what the C.A.S. wanted to avoid.

The request for the additional grant from the county was referred to the finance means.

LAID FOUNDATION

Mr. J. Fred Wilson, chairman of the county Children's Aid Society spoke briefly introducing Mr. Kerr. He paid tribute to the late Mr. Ruston and the late Mr. Lockyer who, he said had laid the foundation of CAS work in Hastings.

He noted that the department of child welfare stressed the importance of protective work, realizing, that it would be best in its own home providing the circumstances were right. However, preventive or preventive work could not be charged in the per diem rate for the care county but must be paid for out of volunteer contributions.

A delegation of Kinsmen President Don Thomas and W. Harry Rollins addressed the councillors briefly with a request for a county grant to Quinte C.A.S. Association which is directed locally by the Kinsmen club.

Mr. Rollins noted this was a worthy preventive work, the scope of which had been widened to include board members from municipalities in all parts of the county. Another mass survey was planned for next year, he noted. The request was referred to ways and means.

Reeve C. C. Graham of Tweed as chairman of the county home committee, compared the cost of maintaining patients at the Hastings county home with that in other municipalities.

He noted that the over-all cost per patient day in Hastings was $1.89 per day. In Cornwall the cost was $2.46 per day. The average cost for all Ontario was $2.06 per day.

"So you see that the Hastings county home is operated a bit cheaper than are other homes in the province," he said.

TRIBUTE PAID

A motion expressing appreciation to the county home superintendent and matron, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth York, for the efficient management of the home, was tabled by Reeve C. J. Brennan and was unanimously passed by council.

The report of the committee on administration of justice was presented by chairman Reeve Chas. Bradshaw, the report covering only the first six months of the year.

Gross cost to the county for the first six months was given as $32,808 with Belleville's share of this cost being $8,778.50 and Trenton's share $4,650.46.

To a question from one of the councillors regarding the ratio of costs paid by Belleville and Trenton, Clerk-treasurer Eric E. Denyes replied this ratio was based mostly on populations, Belleville paying 29 per cent and Trenton 13 per cent of the total.

Reeve Russell Wright noted that as chairman of the finance and public property committee, presented his report stating that a new boiler and heating system repairs at the court house had cost nearly $19,000. "The system was completed and was working satisfactorily," he said.

Three new corridor locks and fire alarm system between the jail, police and fire departments had been installed and an institutional electric stove had been purchased to replace the coal stove in the jail kitchen. Cost of the stove and necessary re-wiring had been

Cottage Owners Will Still Pay School Taxes

A suggestion that summer cottage owners be required to pay school taxes on their properties met with short shrift in Hastings county council Wednesday afternoon as the idea was met with a stone wall of objections.

Reeve Ritchie Wells of Marmora village introduced the matter noting that cottage owners send no children to school from cottages and therefore they felt they should not pay school tax.

"I think there should be a protest go to the municipal board to get the thing ironed out," he said.

But the Marmora reeve failed to get a supporter for his idea and a number of the councillors were opposed to the suggestion.

"The idea today is to try and equalize the burden of everyday life," stated Reeve William Davis. "It was for that reason that school came into being."

The reeve went on to say that he had personally been approached for opening roads around lakes in his municipality for the convenience of summer residents and said that when a municipality does such a special thing for cottage owners should not complain about a few dollars taxes.

"They get the best of our fishing and hunting and surely they can not object to our children being educated."

MANY REEVES OPPOSED

Deputy Reeve Byron Harder of Sidney agreed with Reeve Davis, noting that road taxes on roads built in to summer cottages did not begin to pay for the roads. Reeve Harry Mumford of Sidney and Irwin McCoy of Marmora also opposed the idea.

County Assessor Cecil Geen said if such a suggestion were accepted by the council, there was no where to stop. Owners of pasture land and other such properties would want the same courtesy extended to them.

Reeve Theodore Tryon of Bancroft said it would be wrong if any properties were exempted from school tax. "It would be a step backwards," he said. "I for one do not object to school tax."

Renovations at the county engineer's office were planned and plans will be presented to the 1955 council.

A grant of $1,300 had been given to the Community Chest campaign, divided as follows: C.A.S. $800; Y.M.C.A., $150; Y.O.N. $150; Navy League $100; Boy Scout Association $50 and St. John Ambulance $50.

The first payment of $40,000 to the Belleville General Hospital building fund was authorized paid on December 27. The total county grant to the hospital building fund was $200,000 to be spread over five years.

Hastings County Assessment Likely to Reach $28 Million

The Hastings county assessment will in all probability reach 28 million or more when re-assessments of all municipalities is completed some time next year, members of county council were told Wednesday afternoon.

Giving his report to council, County Assessor Cecil Geen told councillors that only four more municipalities in the county remained to be re-assessed and it was expected this work would be completed next year.

Municipalities in which re-assessment was started and completed this year included the townships of Limerick—$166,450; Faraday — $250,900; McClure, Wicklow, Bangor—$363,675; Dungannon — $271,300; Wollaston, —$227,000; Bancroft village—$757,500; Frankford — $800,000, and the township of Thurlow where work was started last year and completed this year—$7,125,625.

The assessor noted that figures of the completed re-assessments would in line with spot assessments made earlier although the individual municipalities in some cases differed considerably. Spot assessments in Thurlow had indicated that the new assessment would be around $6,000,000. This estimate was made two years ago and since then there had been a big growth in the township, and new industry had assessed more than was anticipated.

Mr. Geen noted that courts of revision had made very few changes in the assessments and councils had stood by their assessors. "This shows confidence in the local assessors and in the system being used," he said.

Fall Series of 10 Prenatal Classes Is Concluded

The fall series of ten prenatal classes, conducted by the board of health under the auspices of the Belleville Y's Menettes, was concluded this week with the presentation of diplomas for perfect attendance. The class presented the lecturer, Miss C. B. Genik with a token of their appreciation.

Mrs. Ingersoll Nurse, and Mrs. J. A. Buchanan of the Red Cross Visiting Homemakers.

In appreciation was extended to the Y's Menettes Club for their assistance in providing accommodation, equipment, refreshments and continuing support.

Since this course has been well received and has the approval of the medical staff of the Belleville General Hospital, it is expected that another series will commence early in the new year.

Drew Leaves Hospital Says He Feels 'Fine'

OTTAWA (CP) — Hon. George Drew, 60-year-old leader of the Progressive Conservative opposition, left hospital Wednesday and said he feels fine after a month-long bout with pneumonia.

As he walked slowly toward his waiting car at the hospital exit shortly after noon, he told reporters that he feels "fine, fine," but added that he "don't want to run a mile at the moment or anything like that."

He said, however, that he expects to be fully recovered from his illness in time for the opening of the new session of Parliament Jan. 7.

Mr. Drew's wife, Fiorenza, accompanied him from his hospital room. As is hospital custom for departing patients, the opposition leader was brought from his room in a wheelchair. But he left it a few feet from the hospital exit where he was met by a group of reporters and photographers.

GREETS REPORTERS

His first greeting to newspaper men was: "Well, here we are again."

He said he had listened to last Monday's Ottawa municipal election results but when asked to comment he said his "one concern at the moment is getting well." He said his doctor will not allow him to have visitors at home "for the present."

Mr. Drew said he received a great deal of mail at the hospital.

"I want to thank all the people who have been so kind while I have been in hospital. The kindness has been marvellous — it helps a great deal."

Orland Youth Held by Police For Questioning

TRENTON, (Special) —Gordon Rightmeyer, 18, of Orland, Ont., is being held in custody by Trenton police for questioning in connection with a series of break-ins in the past few months.

Rightmeyer was apprehended by Const. Jack Graham at 2.15 Thursday morning after he was observed trying doors on Front street stores. When first approached Rightmeyer gave Const. Graham a name that conflicted with the name on his driver's license. He admitted his real name, while under escort to the police station.

Under questioning Rightmeyer told police he had broken into the offices of the Trenton Creameries Wednesday evening. No money was reported taken from the Creameries office but company papers were found in Rightmeyer's possession.

He said he entered the office by breaking the window in the front door and releasing the lock from the inside.

Police found a key ring with nearly two dozen keys in Rightmeyer's possession and decided to hold him for questioning about a series of break-ins in Trenton in the past few months.

Hillcrest School Addition Opened, Cost $65,000

The four-room addition to the Hillcrest public school was officially opened last Saturday afternoon with members of the school board and county and provincial officials taking part in ceremonies witnessed by more than 100 Hillcrest residents.

Jack Sproule, chairman of the school board, was chairman for the ceremonies and spoke briefly. Peter Murray and George Miller, members of the school board, were also present for the opening.

Speakers included L. A. Kells, public school inspector and business administrator for Belleville; R. H. Macklem, public school inspector for South Hastings; Alexander Cummins, assistant public school inspector for South Hastings; Fred Mitchell, warden of Hastings County, and Rowena Robson, M.P.P., for Eastings East.

Present for the ceremonies were members of Thurlow township council. Centenary public school board and members of the Separate School board of Holy Rosary school.

Contractor Ross Greenly turned the key of the new addition over to Mr. Sproule, who in turn gave it to principal H. V. Faulkner.

Mr. Robson cut a band of ribbon in the school colors of green, yellow and brown, to declare the school officially open.

The $65,000 two-storey addition, located at the northeast corner of Hillcrest about a block east and south of Hydro Campbellton's sub-station, is of solid masonry construction faced with brick. Each of the four classrooms has been decorated in a color scheme of the teacher's own choosing and is individually ventilated.

WINDOWS DOUBLE GLAZED

Windows are double glazed eliminating the necessity of storm windows. A stainless steel sink with hot and cold running water is provided in each classroom as well as storage space for supplies.

A teachers' room was included in the addition.

Renovation of the old building included a shortening of nine feet to the 41 foot long classrooms and transfer of washrooms from the basement to the first floor. A new septic tank and weeping bed has been installed to handle easily the needs of the 210 pupils currently attending the school.

Water for the school is provided by a self-contained collection and purification system. Water is collected off the roof into a 28,000 gallon cistern, filtered and chlorinated and then pumped to classrooms and washrooms. Water, checked by the Dept. of Health is Grade A.

The addition, started in May, was opened for use in the first week of September, with pupils moving only three days of classes.

Cost of building, at approximately $14,000 per classroom, is well below the Dept. of Education's estimate of $22,000 per classroom. The addition will be paid for in two installments with taxpayers meeting 40 per cent of the cost this year and 60 per cent next year. Debentures are being carried on the old building.

Last year the school board, by special agreement of the Dept. of Education, paid for the addition to the Prince of Wales school in one year. A special levy.

Mrs. Bryson Reid Hurt in Accident

Mrs. Bryson C. Reid, wife of alderman Bryson Reid, is resting comfortably in Belleville General Hospital today following an automobile accident on Highway No. 2, between Marysville and Desmond's Wednesday afternoon about 2.30.

The Reid car was proceeding east when it skidded on a patch of ice, went off the road into a ditch, bounced back across the road and spun about several times before coming to rest. Mrs. Reid, thrown from the car, was shaken up. Alderman Reid was not injured.

Mrs. Reid was admitted to Belleville General Hospital and is being treated by Dr. D. C. McVicker of Deseronto.

Damage to the car was estimated at $300 to $400.

OPP Constable Al McLeod investigated.

John Landy May Be Through

MELBOURNE (AP) — John Landy, Australia's 1-mile champion, has been the world's fastest clocking for a mile, indicated today he may be through with competitive track.

"I do not have that old edge any more," he said after running next to last in a two-mile run at Geelong, won in 8:52.2. Landy trailed winner Les Perry by 70 yards.

"With my teaching job I am not able to train properly any more," Landy said. "I may run some more races even in the Australian championships in February, but I will not be a serious contender."

Low Egg Prices Cause Farmers To Sell Flocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario department of agriculture says some farmers in the province are selling out their flocks of poultry because of low egg prices.

"Eggs are not too popular a commodity on farms," the department's weekly farm report said today.

The egg market at the start of the week was not strong; offerings were in excess of poor demand. Prices dropped three cents in most grades.

Grade A large were selling for 30-32 cents to producers, and 43 cents to consumers.

Last year the price of grade A large to consumers was about 65 cents a dozen.

Ferry Unable To Complete Last Trip

PEMBROKE (CP) — The Pembroke - Alumette island ferry today sits in the middle of the Ottawa river, its last trip of the season interrupted by ice.

The ferry, which carries cars and passengers, let out from Alumette island on the Quebec side Tuesday. It almost made it to the town, 110 miles northwest of Ottawa, where it was to be tied up for the winter. The fast-forming ice was too thick to break through, however.

The lone passenger, an unidentified woman, climbed down a ladder and walked ashore to Pembroke.

Present plans are to wait and hope for a thaw which will permit the ferry to complete its trip.

Treats Epilepsy By Removing Half of Brain

By RENNIE TAYLOR

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A Philadelphia surgeon disclosed today that he has been successfully treating stubborn cases of epilepsy and similar kinds of fits by removing half of the brains of children.

One side or the other of the brain is taken out, and the cavity is filled with a salt water solution. Eventually body tissues absorb the solution and half the skull remains empty.

The youngsters do not lose any of their intelligence, but their fits and antisocial behavior disappear, said Dr. Eugene P. Spith of Children's Hospital, Philadelphia.

Dr. Spitz made the report for delivery to the Radiological Society of North America, organization of specialists who work with x-rays and other forms of radiation. The operation is made possible by x-ray pictures showing which half of the brain is affected.

BELLEVILLE GETS IN STEP

Belleville voters got in step with the times on Monday.

They elected the first two women aldermen—or should it be the first aldermenwomen—in the city's history and they did it in a manner which was certainly not half-hearted.

Most people, we feel sure, will think that this action came not a year too early, that it was, in fact, several years late. For elsewhere, in other centres where women had earlier won seats in the circle of city fathers (theirs are the municipalmama in those very nutty, sometimes even cliches certainly need revision) do not hesitate to aspire being re-elected to positions as chief-magistrates. Mayor Charlotte Whitton was lustily trouncing a pair of male opponents in Ottawa and Mayor Bernadette Smith was once that recognition came it was most emphatic.

Mrs. Jane Forrester, in her first bid for municipal office, received a record vote which indicates that she certainly won her first term of office with the confidence, as well as the best wishes, of voters of both sexes, in all walks of life. Mrs. Effie McCabe had already served Belleville citizens as a public school trustee. While her vote was not as high as that received by Mrs. Forrester, it placed her well up amongst the successful candidates, and far ahead of even the highest of the defeated aspirants for office.

Indeed, that was one of the encouraging features of Monday's vote. Mayor John Both, in winning a second term, scored a clean-cut victory. Aldermen, without exception, fared well. And this was true of all those elected to various offices and on the by-laws the vote was decisive. After such an unmistakable expression of the voters' wishes, the successful candidates can count upon their tasks next year without any doubts about the wishes of the electorate. Their mandates are not open to challenge.

COUNTY COUNCIL ACTS WISELY

Hastings County Council is to be congratulated on its refusal to endorse a resolution from Deseronto which would limit relief recipients to the actual needs for municipal office.

In practice, such a ban at this time would work few hardships. In principle, though, it is all wrong.

Reeve Hicks Wells of Marmora was correct in stating that when a person is unable to provide for his own needs or the needs of his family, it usually indicates a lack of business ability which means that such a person is unsuitable to serve on a municipal council. There are, however, exceptions to every rule and Reeve C. J. Brennan of Deseronto was also correct in stating that such a ban could discriminate against persons whose dependence on relief was in no way their own fault. Many a hard-working, energetic man was forced to accept relief during the depression years.

Basically, though, the reason why such a ban is undesirable is that this question is one for the electors to decide. It is for them, through their votes, on the polls, to say whether or not they desire any individual to administer the affairs of their municipality. As Reeve McCoy of Marmora township observed, the electors will safeguard their own interests in this matter. If the electors believe that a relief recipient is best qualified to serve them on council, who has the right to veto the electors' choice?

The members of Hastings County Council showed sound common sense and a heartening appreciation of the true meaning of democracy in refusing to endorse this resolution.

ONE OF THE LAST LIBERALS

Bernard K. Sandwell is dead.

His career was checkered.

The Canadian Press reports that, when he was dismissed as professor of English at Queen's University in 1923, it was freely said that he was discharged as the result of jealousy over the popularity of his lectures.

It was just as freely intimated, when he retired as editor-in-chief of "Saturday Night" in 1951, that his "innovations" in the field of editorial writing of that publication was because his editorials lacked popular appeal.

"Saturday Night" under Sandwell became, in the words of the Canadian Press, "a national forum."

Queen's was more successful in surviving Sandwell's dismissal than was "Saturday Night." Queen's is still a great university."

GETTING MORE UP-TO-DATE

The British Royal Academy of Arts has elected a new president.

He is a quaint, quiet professor who lives in an 18th century home, dresses his guests in 18th century clothes and serves 18th century food.

Reuters intimates that he will be quite a change from his predecessor, a salty-tongued portrait painter who recently informed millions of television fans that Rubens had "a nice taste in lovely flesh."

Rubens? Flemish painter in the 17th century.

In some things, tastes change little.

THE LETTER

I have a letter to mail,
Not intended for me,
Which I'll read without fail,
Though a crime that may be.
It is one I should send,
As I promised I would.
By a child it was penned,
Telling this: "I've been good."
When Santa comes
In the evening, I know
He'll be sorry to learn
Did that nice letter go?

Postage stamp did I buy?
Without any remorse
With that little white lie
I shall answer: "Of course."
Will Santa Claus bring
What I want him to give?
Will he have everything?
Does he know where I live?
From his pack and his sleigh
Will my stocking be filled?
And I'll smilingly say:
"Yes, he does and he will."

Mayor George O. Tice has joined with the Central Relief Bureau here in an appeal to the citizens of Belleville for donations of clothing and other cold weather necessities for the city's needy. "The need for clothing, bedding and other things is great," said Mayor Tice today. "Many families are in actual distress and in the majority of cases the small children are the chief sufferers. I should like to call this situation to the attention of all citizens. The most effective thing to give a call to the relief office will bring a truck to their door for the articles."

The mayor also called on all service clubs, fraternal organizations and others at large to render assistance so that Christmas will be more happy for those in need.

Location for new drill shed discussed by Board of Trade.

At a meeting of the members of the Belleville Board of Trade the following were present: C. B. Sandwell, Kenney, J. F. Wills, W. J. McCamon, Charles M. Reid, Arthur Mellyn, Fred Deacon, C. Parker Thomas, W. C. Mikel, Col. W. N. Ponton and Col. S. S. Carter. The site selected for the new drill shed was discussed fully and the members were of the opinion that the hospital lot at the northeast corner of Church Street and Victoria Ave. is not a suitable location. Col. Ponton thought the lot should be made a city park. Mr. McCamon stated that the city council has virtually purchased the lot in question and presented it to the government upon which to build the drill shed; he did not consider the site suitable, and doubted if a change could now be made. Mr. Thomas informed the members that the title has passed to the government and the engineers have taken levels. The matter was left that the hospital lot was selected by the government and the title has been passed to the government but he held the opinion that a change could be made. It was finally decided to take the matter up with the city council and the following were appointed a committee to deal with the matter: Col. Carter, Col. Ponton, C. M. Stork and Charles M. Reid.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

If you went by the industrial houses or toys and technical magazines, not to mention the slick-er picture magazines, you would have by now come to the conclusion that all the rough work in the world was being done by machines. Even our conception of Santa Claus is a great big dirty machine with a handsome, clean young man in tidy overalls lightly fingering its controls. For several years past, there has been a powerful campaign on the part of industry generally to illustrate how few dirty men there are in-volved in life's struggle.

But there are plenty of big dirty jobs still being done, even in this lyrically mechanized world. Big dirty men, with muscles, grabbing raw materials. Men, like horses, heaving and sweating at steel beams, iron bolts, sacks of scrap, kegs, crates, bales of primitive things—the raw materials we never see in our prim, up-town factories, until all the rawness of them has been beaten and blown and reduced out of them in the ugly big foundries and warehouses along the railways or the waterfronts of the old, unvisited sections of our cities.

For it is coming into the cities in the green denim?

by rail that you become aware of the fact that industry and commerce still depend, despite all our mechanical wonders, upon the bodily strength of men. Along the locomotive sidings, you see great heaps and piles, the bins and platforms, the racks and vats around which men are busy men who take first hold upon the things which, presently, by the magic wizardry will be transmuted into goods fit to be handled by us ladies and gentlemen of the mid-twentieth century.

In a large industrial plant this week I watched an operator in a green denim overall moving huge drums of wire about the floor and stacking them by means of a cute little green-denim dolly. It was a pretty sight.

But there was no dolliness in the South American mine where the copper came from. By what means did the copper come down to the sea? In what rough ships did it travel, in what storms? How prettily mechanized are the smelters and the mills it came through, how rough the world until, as wire, it came to the industrial plant, at last, and the happy little motorized dolly and the clean young man

Talking Turkey

(By John Large in Imperial Oil Review)

Not long after those English Puritans set up shop at Plymouth, Mass., a colonizer named Thomas Morton one day spied a bunch of hefty-looking brownish birds clumping across a clearing. He asked some Indians: "How many of those do you see in the woods every day?"

"Neent matawns," said an Indian, meaning: "More than we can count."

With the Englishman speaking English and the Indian answering in Indian, it is difficult to see how they could carry on much of a conversation, but this is the way the anecdote is usually told. It is not the only confusing aspect of the Tale of the Turkey — for it was, indeed, a flock of wild turkeys which Morton saw marching across the clearing.

In the first place, the turkey has nothing to do with Turkey. More sensibly, the Turks themselves call this creature what we do, when the "American bird" (in Turkish, of course), for the guinea-fowl, guinea-pig and zoologists have dubbed him in a futile attempt to clear up a muddled situation is strictly a native of the American continent. He was first found on his drumsticks at least as far back as 1,000 A.D. Later, when the Spaniards were liberating Mexico, the turkey was officially found, and the conquistadors brought Mexican turkeys (now commonly known as Meleagris gallopavo mexicana) to Europe and Spain after 1521. From Spain, the turkey spread to the rest of Europe. It was introduced into England some time after 1524 and there began an amazing career of improving the breed, which resulted in the modern turkey, which is much heavier, and infinitely more stupid, than his wild tequila-drinking ancestor.

That is the official story.

Unfortunately for all concerned, a mural has been found in the Mayan ruins of Bonampak, Mexico, which shows a turkey being hand-reared. Below the mural is a series of hieroglyphics and medallions. The medallions depict American turkeys. But the mural is dated at 790 A.D., and, according to art authorities, were painted before the Christian era. The fascinating possibility that Norsemen brought back wild turkeys from Labrador, Markland or Vinland long before the Spaniards decided to check out what was doing in Acapulco.

"When historians fall out, the best thing to do is change the subject," observed Mencken. The turkey, he was an expensive bird in the early days. If you bought one you got seven dollars for a 15-pounder, think of the Danish ambassador in 1633, who was hoodwinked $38 per bird. Later in the century, turkeys could be cropped up to $15 in England, in Greece, a century later, children kept turkeys as pet-handsome, white-tailed birds that retailed at $70 each, while, in those days, a lot of drachmas.

While his European cousin was being bred slowly into a larger, heavier-breasted, more docile bird, the American wild turkey was fighting for his life. A lean, athletic bird, usually silent—not given to gobbling idiotically about nothing — Meleagris was a doomed fowl.

In the markets of old York and Boston, wild turkeys sold for 20 cents each, and a hunter could slaughter 30 or more a day, especially when snow covered the ground and tracking was easy. As an unusual, the wild turkey was limited to brief evasive action taken over the nearest treetops, but his forest refuges were slowly vanishing under the axe of the pioneer. Why the pioneers wanted to clear the land to plant such articles as potatoes and turnips is not clear, but they certainly did on wild turkey, is not too clear, but in 1851, the last of Mr. Morton's turkeys was killed in Massachusetts, and the last Ontario wild turkey seems to have given his final gobble about 50 years ago.

In Ontario, a closer season on wild turkeys was declared in the years 1902 to 1905 but by this time the turkey was virtually gone, known as the Eastern turkey. Finding a wild turkey in the 1900's was seen near the Balmy Beach Canoe Club, outside Toronto.

Domestic birds, imported, tried to make friends but the birds didn't get on together. Early in the year, the Toronto Anglers and Hunters Assn. has imported 200 wild turkeys from Texas, released them, hoping they will take up residence within reasonable distance.

Just about the time the last wild Massachusetts turkey was laid to a heavenly roost, an unknown farmer on Prince Island found that a new breed of turkey by crossing imported Scandinavian birds with the island's native birds. Then in 1860, Rev. R. H. Avery of New York State decided to produced the present Bronze breed by taking the best birds he could find mixing it again with the wild line. This Bronze breed is the turkey you see in your stores around Thanksgiving or Christmas, and, so, it's a fact that if you pound turkey, the chances are that it is, or was, a Bronze.

While the Bronze is the most popular, there are actually a dozen breeds of turkey currently being raised by farmers, who keep turkeys as a sideline or doubtful specialty. The Toms supple living on small acreages who raise them for pin-money. There is the heavier, more-white-meat Broad-breasted Bronze; the pure-white Beltsville; the Dutch White Holland; the venerable Narragansett; the Bourbon Red; the Lesser Bronze; the Black; the small Nittany; and the Bronze-touched with the wild turkey. Some people raise wild turkeys, in fact—the "native" wild turkey, which rather a strain descended from the original wild turkey. Turkeys are succeeding in early writers on the subject, was proud and untameable.

Rhino's Kiss Hard on Paint

(BBC Weekly Talks Summary)

Lions at close quarters are an almost everyday occurrence for Mr. Mervyn Cowie, director of the Royal National Parks of Kenya. When he was a boy he played recently in the BBC's "In Town Tonight" program and told listeners about visitors to the parks who are not content to come here to see any animals they can find. Lions are the main attraction and are as much photographed as film stars.

Usually they take little notice of the cars in which the visitors sit, but sometimes matters take a different turn. Mr. Cowie was driving through the Serengeti and drove between some lions and their cubs; one of the cubs squealed and the lions immediately charged his station-wagon. The unsuspecting dazzled the animals in the hunting season. Later on the Conservation Department may have some figures on the kill.

emerged from without help. At last he pulled himself and rolled off all directions but him for settled down, lost his fear and resolved to have a look at the truck, a confiding and friendly gesture that undoubtedly upset the rest of the pair.

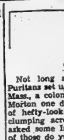
Elephants, if unprovoked, are very gentle. Mr. Cowie surveyed by an old native woman who lost herself in the bush. She was too feeble to climb a tree and curled round the base of a thick stem for the night. A herd of elephants came along, smelt her, then covered her in such a thick bower of branches and grass that she was unable to get out until she was found by hotpot next morning, frightened but unfortunately uninhurt.

1950 Storm Helped Bears

(Utica Observer Dispatch)

Our backwoods department is going around saying, "I told you so."

It appears the department was responsible for a piece in the paper last spring in which it warned that a num-ber of 1950 spring tumbled trees would make warm homes for bears in the fall and weather they were born in the wintry month of March, perhaps the bear population would increase. The idea was based on the possibility that more than usual animals, no larger than a rat and quite helpless, do not survive unless they have warm, dry, protected quarters.



There are virtually no deep caves in the Adirondacks, consequently the mother bear "dens up" in a hollow log. If the log is dry, all is chi can find one.

Well, now the black bear is coming out-doors with bundfalls and the animals are reported to be unusually plentiful, due to favorable

THE KARRELL "CURE" IMPROVED

Dr. Brady

In the days when feminine patients who wished to see the doctor recolled when they learned that he was be-ing by a young doctors probably got a break in Penn Yan now — the old-fashioned "cure" was routine in essentially complicated with ede-ma (dropsical swelling) from heart weakness of kidney trouble.

For one thing this regimen appealed to some of those Penn Yan farmers who were bent by the strain of providing their wives and sometimes even children with all meals a week, for, unless my prices (75c to $1 for office consultation, including medicine, of course) it was quite "reasonable", consisting of nothing more than 1½ pints of milk a day. However, if they had only known it, they might have cut even that cost appreciably. At the time I prescribed Karrell diet — my innate meanness was already evident — I directed that the milk be skimmed.

A good many young persons who, for some reason beyond my comprehension, prefer to drink or take whole milk cultivate a fondness for skim milk and at least a pint of it daily.

This is nearly if not quite as commendable from the standpoint of nutrition and health, as the drinking of whole milk. Insofar as nutrition, health and beauty the young person should take not less than 1½ pints (three glasses) of whole milk daily the year round.

The Karrell diet is too austere for people who are always (talking about) "going on a diet" next week, but it is uniformly effective for those who really mean to reduce.

As Karrell prescribed it, the only nourishment one can have on Karrell days is approximately half a glass (4 fluid ounces) of milk, sipped leisurely, not gulped down, at intervals of 3 hours, six times a day. Not even a piece of toast, not even water. Or if you prefer, make it a full glass of skim or separator milk (comfat, what's left after the cream or butter-fat has been skimmed off or removed by the separator) every three hours for five or six times in the day.

Use skim milk instead of whole milk.

One restricting his or her diet in any way should not forget how important it is to supplement the restricted diet with the essential vitamins and minerals. A good vitamin pill every day at least limit it to one day a week until you find out whether you have enough stamina. If you really feel better the day after a Karrell day, then perhaps you can profitably have two Karrell days each week—not successive days. Never more than two in a week, unless you are staying abed or just lounging.

WE GIVE WHAT WE HAVE

"I delivered unto you that which also I received." Paul used these words in describing the institution of the Lord's Supper to his fellow Christians.

But, entirely apart from the Sacrament, these words embody a great religious truth. Everything we have spiritually is given to us. We do not achieve anything. We simply get ourselves into a position to accept what God is will and anxious to give us. This statement applies particularly to any desire we may have to be spiritual. We cannot give them any spiritual gift unless we have first received it ourselves.

That is the reason why the preaching of some ministers is barren—they have not had a transforming religious experience which as they would tell others is open to have the same experience. Allegedly pious parents often wonder why their children do not share their interest in spiritual things. The answer is, in most cases, religion because their parents had no real religion to pass on to them. Sunday-school teachers try and fail—for reasons sometimes in which no blame attaches to them. But very often Sunday-school teachers have nothing but boredom and misbehavior on their hands every Sunday because they have nothing real to give to their pupils.

We can pass on only what we have received. "I delivered . . . that which I received."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEWS ADAMS

I BELIEVE IN YOU

Just before Robert E. Peary sailed in a ship for the north with the idea of reaching the pole, Theodore Roosevelt met him to say "Good-Bye" and to wish him well. Taking Peary by the hand, Roosevelt said: "I believe in you, Peary." April 6, 1909, Peary raised the American flag at the North Pole!

How far would any of us go or get with no one to speed us on or to say: "I believe in you"? I had a friend who came to this country as I went to Chicago after graduating from college to hunt for a job. I was told by a man in my church to "anyone who can win anywhere can win in Chicago."

That sounded reasonable so to Chicago I went. My first job was peddling pills for a church paper. The pay was one dollar for each day that I worked. When I went for my first dollar the good preacher said: "Here's your dollar. I believe in you."

Of course all mothers, and most fathers believe in their sons. I well how impressed I was with that famous painting at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. It was entitled "Breaking Home Ties." There was the boy standing at the door of his home, the boy on the step landing, and there was that look in his mother's face as she waved "Good-bye, my boy, come again! "My boy, come again! "My boy, come again!"

Each of us needs at least one person to believe in us, or we are not apt to do our best work. But, of course, the more people we can win to believe in us the better and more encouraging. It's an inspiring thing just to be the means of backing someone else and helping him to help himself. I like that word I use so often: "climbs highest who helps another up!"

Wouldn't it be wonderful if nations believed in each other, winning each other well, saying so—and kept their word. That would be the end of all world wars!

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

New Eight-Room Addition Is Planned for Bancroft H. S.

A new eight-roomed addition for the north Hastings High School at Bancroft is being planned with approval of the Department of Education currently being sought by its construction.

This was made known to Hastings county councillors at their morning session Wednesday through a communication from the High Hastings High School Board asking the county to issue debentures. A motion was later passed in council assuring that the county would issue the debentures when required.

Reeve Theodore Tyron, reeve of Bancroft noted that four additional rooms at the school were required immediately and that by the time the proposed addition was completed, all eight rooms would be filled. Due to present overcrowding classes are now being held in a basement room, in the auditorium, the cafeteria and in a storage room, all of which were very unsatisfactory for classroom use.

Reeve William Davis noted that a school population survey had shown that by 1960 twelve classrooms in addition to those now in use would be required.

High school accommodation is also tight in the Centre Hastings area, according to Reeve I. McCoy of Marmora township. Mr. McCoy said that four-roomed additions to schools were necessary to accommodate pupils now attending classes.

County council turned down a request from the department of reform institutions asking that the salary of the jail physician be increased to $1,100, an increase of $400 from the present figure.

SOME DISCUSSION

There was some discussion on the request before it was noted that the county had already this year spent over $20,000 in repairs and equipment at the county buildings, a considerable amount of which on the recommendation of department officials.

The report of the juvenile and family court committee was given by Chairman James Sprackett, reeve of Tudor township.

The report which showed that Children's Aid Society costs this year would go over $43,000 urged that the C.A.S. be called in only as a last resort as when a family was broken up it was difficult to re-establish.

Mr. Sprackett noted that a little assistance from the municipality in a time of hardship might avert some of the C.A.S. cases and in the end would save money.

Reeve T. G. Graham, as chairman of the county home board of management committee, gave the report of his committee which showed there were 198 residents, 120 male and 78 female now in the home. Of these 154 were from the county and 44 were from the city.

The committee chairman noted the home was now filled to capacity and all single rooms in the building had been made into double rooms and the increased home capacity was now 215 persons.

He stressed that this was definitely the capacity of the home and urged that from this point on special attention would have to be given to the screening of applicants as to their property owned, extra pensions, or other means of subsistence in some other homes.

PURCHASE THRESHER

He urged that this should be done by the reeves of the municipalities concerned.

Continuing his report Mr. Graham noted a used threshing machine had been purchased for use at the home at a cost of $1100. The machine was felt to be a necessity due to the scarcity of custom threshers and the need for conserving all straw on the county home farm.

No action had been taken with respect to the construction of new entrance gates, but it was hoped this work could be undertaken in the early spring. He noted the committee had seen fit to increase the car and truck allowance for the home superintendent, Kenneth York, by $300 per year.

Following Reeve Graham's report there was a spirited discussion on whether "paying" patients should be accepted at the home and on the advisability of having persons able to pay their own way go to private nursing homes.

Reeve Graham noted that previously this matter had not been a problem but he stressed that some definite policy would have to be established for the future. At the present time old age pensioners and those with private means pay $35 per month for their keep at the county home.

"The county home was never intended as a boarding home," noted Reeve Theodore County of Rawdon.

Reeve Theodore Tyron, Bancroft, said the aged population of the county was growing so fast that the time may very well come when the county would be faced with providing additional accommodation.

It was pointed out there was now some government assistance in addition to pension that elderly people could obtain to help pay their keep at private nursing homes.

Deputy Reeve C. Ketcheson of Thurlow cited an instance where a woman from his township was being accommodated at a private home and was "perfectly happy."

But Reeve McCoy was a bit dubious of elderly people being accommodated in private homes due to their likelihood of becoming ill and the township becoming liable for medical and hospital bills.

Reeve Price of Elzivir referred to the Hastings county resolution which is asking that the government pay hospitalization costs for needy pensioners and regretted if this went through it would be of great assistance to nursing homes as it may even make it necessary for the county to build any additional accommodation for old people.

No action was taken on the matter of "paying patience" at the county home and the committee report was adopted without further discussion.

RCAF Auxiliary Donates $500 To Relief Fund

Mrs. Ramsey Parks, president of the Trenton Memorial Hospital Women's Auxiliary, attended the Christmas party of the RCAF station Trenton Women's Auxiliary. Mrs. Parks thanked the ladies for the help the hospital had received from the RCAF Women's Auxiliary in the responsibilities assumed by the ladies for the hospital nursery.

$500 DONATION

At the business meeting of the W.A., which preceded the Christmas party, it was voted that a donation of $500 be sent to the Hurricane Relief.

It was reported that the Poppy Day proceeds of Station Trenton and Middleton Park, a total of $363, was turned over to the Canadian Legion.

After the meeting closed, the RCAF Choral Group, directed by Mr. H. Prudden, of Trenton, entertained the ladies with a program of carols.

The WA will provide layettes for the first air force baby born on Christmas Day and for the first New Year's Day.

There will also be Christmas gifts for hospitalized personnel on the station.

Says Hotel Suite Was Arranged For Privately

TORONTO (CP) — City clerk George Weale said yesterday that a 17th-floor suite in the Royal York Hotel was arranged privately through former mayor Allan Lamport.

Mr. Weale, in a signed statement, said the suite was for Mr. Lamport's use and entertainment, at "no cost to the city."

The suite became a burning election issue when mayoralty candidates Arthur Brown and Nathan Phillips both asked Mayor Leslie Saunders to open the city books.

They charged the rooms were being maintained at the taxpayers' expense.

Mr. Weale said any expenditures by the city in connection with the suite, such as food, was "authorized" by Mr. Lamport.

Mr. Phillips, who was elected Mayor Monday in the three man contest, promised Tuesday to clear up the mystery surrounding the suite. He said that, unless he gets "a full explanation" concerning the suite he claims was the plush headquarters of a city hall clique, he will press for an official inquiry.

Mr. Lamport resigned as mayor in mid-term this year to become a member of the Toronto Transit Commission. He was succeeded by Mr. Saunders.

CIO Convention Expected to Back Annual Wage Plan

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The CIO convention was expected today to adopt a resolution pledging support for the guaranteed annual wage.

The practical effects of the resolution would be to get the backing of all CIO unions behind the United Auto workers, led by Walter Reuther, CIO president, in its announced fight to win the plan in the automobile industry next year. Reuther has said it will be his major demand.

A new economic analysis by CIO economists, conceding that there will be somewhat improved economic conditions in 1955, has apparently stiffened the labor body's determination to win bigger wage and other gains next year, even if it requires strike action.

Grain Shipping From Lakehead Nearly Complete

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — Grain shipping out of the Lakehead will likely come to a halt Monday and other ship movements will cease next week as the 1954 season draws to a halt, a survey finalized Wednesday.

Twenty-one ships — expected to be the biggest daily movement of grain before the season's end—left Wednesday with more than 6,000,000 bushels of grain in their holds. Four of the largest, the R. Home Angus, John E. F. Misener, Scott Misener and Sir James Dunn, loaded close to half the total figure.

R. D. Milligan, manager of the Lake Shippers Clearance Association, said "a half-dozen boats are loading today" and will continue to drfiloie out until Monday when they will head for their winter berths.

Approximately 300,000,000 bushels of grain is the anticipated total movement for the season, a figure well below 1953 when 448,000,000 bushels moved down the lakes from elevators here. Up to Thursday night, the total was about 275,000,000 bushels.

Ore shipping wound up Dec. 1 when two boats pulled away from the C. N. ore dock with the last of 1,135,000 tons of Steep Rock production. Last year's total was 1,301,68 tons.

Weddings

BEDELL—CRISP

A pretty wedding of wide interest took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Plunkett, 117 Ferguson Avenue, Toronto, 3, on Saturday, November 27, at 3.00 p.m., when their daughter, Hannah Margaret Crisp, of Toronto, became the bride of Glen Bedell, of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bedell of Belleville, R.R. 2. The Rev. Allan H. Ferry, pastor of the Davenport United church, officiated during a recording of "The Wedding March" from Wagner's "Lohengrin."

The bride was becomingly attired in aqua blue, in street length with matching accessories. She carried a hand bouquet of mixed flowers.

Following the reception, which was held at the bride's parents' home, where the bride's mother received, gowned in mauve crepe with matching accessories, sequinlal, and corsage of yellow roses. She was assisted by the bride groom's mother, who wore taupe grey with navy blue accessories and corsage of red roses. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. A. Crisp, was also in the receiving line, gowned in navy blue with red rose corsage.

Guests were present from Hamilton, Toronto, Burlington and Belleville.

$100 Hankie Is Something To Admire But Not Use Roughly

A $100 handkerchief is nothing to sneeze at. You can sneeze at it, though, if you are the gay type with a great disdain for the rites usually reserved for $100.

We hasten to assure those readers of the great family journal who picture a handkerchief as a great swatch of sturdy cotton at 25 cents a square yard that there is such a thing as a $100 hankie. Proof is on display at Georgia Salon where a 10x10 inch square of immaculate linen is priced at $1.00 a square inch and not for sale.

This work of art was constructed, thread-by-thread, and stitch at a time, by nuns in a Swiss convent. The work proceeded under a magnifying glass.

Such painstaking detail is not overlooked when the work is completed. Prospective buyers examine each handkerchief under a magnifying glass, much like Harry Winston views his diamonds, and the price is arrived at, without any haggling, according to the number, quality and evenness of the stitches per square inch.

For the man with a head cold or too much pepper on his filet mignon, this likely sounds like too much of a good thing for a handkerchief. But for the ladies, ah the ladies, it is merely the beginning.

There is more romance connected with handkerchiefs than any other piece of women's apparel.

"Empires have been lost and won because of handkerchiefs", said Mrs. Georgia Smith, owner of the $100 beauty currently on display.

"It is a compliment to give a woman a handkerchief. There is no more feminine gift," she said, a tip of great price to the lucky of strong men humbled by the thought of Christmas shopping in a lingerie department.

Women, however, rarely buy for themselves the elegant type of handkerchief they all covet for formal occasions. They buy the sturdy, serviceable hankies. But oh, how they love the one, two, three, and five dollar kind! Their admiration presumably increases directly with the quality of the handkerchief (i.e. for males, the price).

Lace - embroidered handkerchiefs are washable, but, according to Mrs. Smith, they should never be ironed. They should be stretched, wet, on 2 board or a piece of glass. That way they dry with their 3-D characteristics intact.

Those who can tolerate the thought of a nosebleed into a $100 handkerchief should try some of the $500 handkerchiefs for sale. Time to blow.

Rare Christening Rite Held At Christ Church

Last Sunday at 3.00 o'clock, an interesting and important ceremony took place in Christ church, when Archdeacon J. B. Creegan, rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. Everett Smith, assistant rector, baptized three little daughters of three brothers.

Those baptized were: Janet Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Folliwell, (M.S.A.) of Islington, Ontario, with the sponsparents being Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Chappell and Mrs. Mallon, Ontario; Elizabeth Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Folliwell, M.P. of Belleville- and Halloway, Ontario. The godparents were Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Duffield, of Port Credit, Ontario and Lorna Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Folliwell, of Belleville, with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Meyers, of Toronto, Ontario, as godparents.

Following the baptismal ceremony a reception for approximately 100 relatives and friends was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Folliwell, 259 George Street, to whom the door was opened by little Miss Kate Beth Folliwell after which the three mothers, Mrs. James H. Folliwell, Mrs. Frank S. Folliwell and Mrs. E. E. Folliwell, received the guests.

Miss Linda Lennox was in charge of the guest book.

The tea table was charmingly appointed with white damask, centred by a lace bassinette filled with pink carnations, mums, snapdragons and baby's breath. Tall pink and white tapers added a lovely touch to the delightful arrangement; while on the buffet was a beautifully decorated christening cake.

Serving included, Mrs. Keith Waites of Woodbridge, Ontario, Mrs. William H. Folwell, of Belleville; Miss Barbara Bateman, and Miss Helen Bateman, both of Belleville; "Miss Joan McCurdy, of Foxboro; and the Misses Lillian Courneyea, Loreen May, Doreen Ellis and Beth Folliwell all of Belleville. Mrs. Cleo B. Colling, of Belleville, replenished.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HE HAS EVERY LUXURY BUT THE MOST VITAL ONE

A young man of 30 writes me that his family give him every possible luxury except the most vital one of all—a mother. To date, he has never had but one date with a girl in his life, and that one was without his mother's knowledge.

"As long as I can remember," he says, "my mother has made fun of me when I talked to girls, and if I was thinking of taking one to a movie or party she would forbid it.

"I haven't even had any real boy friends, either, and have never gone out with any of the fellows I went to school with. I had to leave the house just five minutes before school started, and be home five minutes after school let out. The rest of the time was spent sitting around the house and only going where my family went.

"Recently I went away to school, and I sent my address to a friend who has a sister. I didn't expect it, but she started to write to me and I answered. I had seen her only once before.

"During the whole time I was at school, this girl and I wrote to each other, and gradually in this way we became better acquainted. In my letters home, I told the family that this girl was writing to me, and they said nothing about it. When I returned home, I had one date with her without my mother's knowledge, and after I did tell her, she refused to let me see the girl again. She has no reasons she gives is that the girl is of a different faith from ours.

"My folks are not mean. They try to give me every luxury they can, but I can't seem to have any friends, and it has got to the point where I do not know how to meet people.

"Should I leave home, or stay and takes what comes?"

Now it seems to me that it is high time for this young man to take a hand in his own destiny. If he happens to live in one of the states where he is not legally of age until he is 21, he may have to wait until his next birthday to take any definite step, of course. But that birthday is probably not too far off, and he should begin making plans right now, so that he can put them into effect at the earliest possible moment.

He doesn't say whether or not he is still in school, but if he is not, but is now working, I see no reason why, at 21, he shouldn't move out of his parents' home, take a room somewhere and begin to live his own life. As a matter of fact, if he really wanted to have a normal life badly enough, he could do this even while in school, either by getting a daytime job to support himself and attending classes at night, or else going to school during the day and taking on some kind of evening job.

I have in my mind one young man I know who not only supported himself with a daytime job, but supported his family on it, too, for several years, while going to college at night, until he completed his studies in engineering. Why couldn't this boy arrange his life in some similar way?

Of course he might, and immediately, give his family an opportunity to avoid this. He might tell them, not in a quarrelsome or argumentive way, but as quietly and politely as he can, that he feels he must be allowed to have any friends he pleases, to come and go as he likes, and to manage his own life as he sees fit, so long as he does so with judgment and discretion. Then he should add that, if his parents cannot see their way to give him the freedom a young man of 21 should have, he will feel it necessary, as soon as he reaches that age, to move out and go on his own.

As for what he says about not knowing how to meet people, he will soon get over that once he is able to go about in a normal way. In the meantime, he should keep his ears open to see how other young people act toward each other. He can also get help from some of the many books written on the subject of learning how to develop yourself in a social way. If he would like to have a list of some of these books, he can send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll forward it to him.

Homemade Sweets for Christmas

By Mary Moore

Ole Sourpuss doesn't have a sour disposition you know—she just does her best to eliminate or reduce your sugar consumption for health's sake.

But when it comes to Christmas time and she has some very slick recipes to give you the bars are down and the sweet fun is on.

Before I go any further I want to say to Evelyn T. that the recipe for Peanut Brittle is given in next Saturday's column, in response to her request.

Mrs. L. S. wanted recipes for chocolates. Today's little offering I hope will please her mightily.

The foundant for the homemade chocolates is uncooked, but I hope that does not put off the expert candy-makers. This uncooked foundant is exceptionally good. Approach the job with patience and a resolve to succeed and Experience is not necessary.

HOMEMADE CHOCOLATES
(5 lbs.)

FONDANT FOR CENTRES

(Uncooked)

One 15-oz. tin sweetened condensed milk, 3 lbs. icing sugar, sifted, 2 teaspoons corn syrup, 1-4 lb. butter (do not use margarine), Mix all of these ingredients in order given then knead with the hands until velvet smooth and creamy. Divide into several portions so that each portion may be coloured or flavored as extended with nuts and fruits. Some suggestions are: (1) Add chopped fresh nuts or candied fruit. Work cocoa to one portion, and mix well to blend. Shape into individual centres and let dry on wax paper. (2) Add finely shredded coconut and mix very well, then dry. (3) Add a few drops of peppermint and green colouring to flavor and color delicately and to make Peppermint Patties make balls from this peppermint flavored fondant, dip in chocolate (see below) and place on wax paper and flatten with tines of wide fork. Let harden. (4) Wrap a flattened thin round of fondant about the size of a thin small cookie, around a whole nut-stuffed choice date or piece of preserved ginger. Let dry before chocolate dipping. (5) For Maraschino Cherries do not drain juice out of the cherry, but do let juice drain from cherries. Take a small ball of fondant, flatten in palm of hand, take a drained cherry and place in centre of fondant and wrap up, cover cherry up drawing up fondant, stick and pick in top and chocolate dip. After several are made fill hole in top of each candy with a little hot chocolate from a spoon. (6) Add a few drops of vanilla, or almond flavoring or lemon or orange or pineapple essence.

DIPPING CHOCOLATE

One-half cake unsweetened chocolate (4 squares), one cake semi-sweet chocolate (4 squares), 2 tablespoons corn syrup, 1 strip parawax (1 slab or 1-4 package), Melt in double boiler over quite hot water. Add 1-4 cup boiling water.

After all fondant centres are shaped and ready and chocolate is melted for dipping, take a nut pick, stick into prepared centre, dip in chocolate, twirl it to cover completely and place on wax paper. Be sparing with the chocolate coating...professional dippers never coat centres thickly. Bowl or pan containing dipping chocolate should stand over warm, not hot, water during entire dipping process to keep it from cooling too stiff. Centres will have to add hot water to water below pan to keep chocolate thin throughout.

I will give you recipes for all fruit confections and candied grapefruit peel next week.

Beauty

By HELEN JAMIESON

FINGERNAILS ARE A HEALTH BAROMETER

Like the hair, the skin and every cell of the body, strong fingernails are dependent upon health and vitality. Wrong eating habits may affect them unfavorably. The best way to play safe in the good looks game is to partake of all the good things of the table so that every health-building element will be included.

Neuritis victims often have nails that break easily. Ridges can be caused by an injury to the matrix, that new nail substance under the flesh at the base of the nail. There should be no pressure, there, nor should the flesh ever be pushed back harshly.

Nail biting is a deplorable habit from both health and beauty standpoints. If nails are not as clean as they should be nibbling on them may invite serious infections. The cure will be found in the weekly manicure.

If the nails show sensitivity to a certain polish it does not signify that the lacquer is of objectionable quality but that the individual has an allergy. One ingredient may cause a disturbance, but as certain foods will cause skin blemishes.

Strong soaps are enemies of the nails as well as the hands. They will not only remove the gloss but have a bad effect upon the nail fabric itself, causing it to thicken or become rough or surface. If strong cleaning agents must be used in the homemaker's constant war against dirt, she should slip on rubber gloves.

A cuticle cream should be applied frequently to keep the surrounding flesh soft and pliable. Then no maddening hangnails will appear.

STRATEGIC ROUTE

JOHANNESBURG (CP) — If an atomic war should come the sea route around the Cape of Good Hope would again be of first importance, said Vice - Admiral I. M. R. Campbell, Royal Navy commander-in-chief for the south Atlantic. The eastern Mediterranean and Suez canal would be highly vulnerable to attack, he said.

HOW TO ADDRESS CHRISTMAS CARD TO CLERGYMAN, FRIEND

To a Protestant clergyman without a scholastic degree:

The Reverend Peter Brooks

The Rev. Dr. Thomas Phelps

(or: The Rev. Thomas Phelps, D.D.)

To a clergyman and wife:

The Rev. (or The Rev. Dr.)

and Mrs. Paul Leigh

(Or: The Rev. Dr. Paul Leigh and Mrs. Leigh)

To a Roman Catholic priest:

The Reverend Joseph Kenna

(This is the correct form of address also for Greek Orthodox priests, and Anglican priests who are addressed as "Father—")

The initials of the order may be added:

The Reverend Joseph Kenna, S.J.

To a Monsignor:

The Right Rev. Monsignor Paul E. Breslin

Most Important: The word The should always be written before the word Reverend used with the name of a clergyman or priest. The Reverend—. The Reverend Dr.—. The Right Reverend—. The Very Reverend—. Why? Because "Reverend" is not a title" like "Mr." or "Dr." Reverend is an adjective, an adjective of courtesy used in addressing those in the spiritual profession. Therefore never write "Reverend John Goode" but always The Reverend John Goode.

HOSTESS, HOST RISE TO GREET GUESTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In my new home I never had an opportunity to be hostess. I'm certainly a novice at entertaining, but now that I'm married (quite recently) and have my own home, I want to live up to the answers about being a good hostess. In your column the other day you answered three questions I sent you (thank you, Mrs. Beeckman, for your most helpful advice), and now I have another. Do I recall correctly that you have written that a hostess always rises to greet an arriving guest and shake hands with her or him? Also what about when a guest departs from the party?—E.C.

You, the hostess, should rise and shake hands with each arriving guest; each woman guest, each man guest. Your husband, the host, should rise and be hospitality in the same way. And when your guests say good-by, you and your husband rise to shake hands with them and to exchange with them gracious "departing" words.

Successful Child Photograhper Uses Elementary Child Psychology

By TOM McCURKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP) — When Kitty Homerston rented a basement studio in downtown Quebec City eight years ago and fulfilled a life-long ambition to photograph children, she turned for help to a doctor who had his office upstairs.

In eight years some 1,300 small fry have paraded through the studio which she moved in 1950 to an apartment in suburban Sillery.

They've been frightened, temperamental, fidgety. They've mistaken this studio for a hospital or doctor's office—something frightening," Kitty said recently. This was the reason why she never wears white when at work.

As Catharine Homerston, oldest of seven sisters and three brothers, Kitty knew some elementary child psychology. But it was the visits to the doctor that gave her the advanced technique in handling children, "half the battle in child photography."

She cluttered her studio with noisemakers, dolls, firetrucks, picture books—everything imaginable in a children's paradise.

But not ever parent accepts Miss Homerston's professional demands without argument.

"They prefer a head and shoulders picture. A young child should be taken in full or else he ends up looking like almost any other child at that age," Miss Homerston explains.

So she sits the small fry on a table or stool, depending on their age, and snaps the work. The parents usually are happy.

Kitty won her first prize at the age of 16 from the Photo Club de Quebec, of which she now is president.

Combined H-S Associations Hold Meeting

The December meeting of the Queen Victoria and Sir Winston Churchill Home and School Association was held Monday, at Queen Victoria school. This, the Christmas meeting, was chosen as religious education night and an interesting program was enjoyed by approximately 200 persons.

Mrs. N. O'Neil, president, opened the meeting. All present read the Home and School creed, the principles of which are the embodiment of social service, civic virtue, patriotism and ideals of world peace. This was followed by The Lord's Prayer. A short business session followed. Mr. W. St. Pierre gave the treasurer's report and Mrs. A. Bradford gave a summary of the skate sale; Mrs. W. VanTassel mentioned the magazines available to parents and Mrs. J. E. Dyble announced the association membership had reached the 200 mark after which she introduced the teachers and grade mothers of Sir Winston Churchill school, who were present that evening.

It was moved that the Association contribute to the maintenance of minor hockey in Belleville.

The attendance count was won by Mr. Fairman's class, grade VII at Queen Victoria school, and by Mr. Dyer's class grade V, at Sir Winston Churchill school.

DISCUSSION SYSTEM

Mr. E. Fairman spoke on the system of reporting the children's progress to the parents and urged if a parent wished to discuss a child with his teacher that an appointment be made through him in order to ensure a quiet satisfactory interview for both parent and teacher.

A choir made up from the senior classes, under the direction of Mr. H. A. Lloyd, rendered the selections "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day" and "Deck the Halls." Mr. Victor J. White led the group in a good old-fashioned sing-song of Christmas carols which was most enjoyable.

Mrs. R. H. Randell read the poem "I Am The Child," by Mamie Gene Cole, to lead up to the showing of a most interesting and provocative film entitled "For Every Child," dealing with the religious education of children. Mrs. Randell gave a short talk after the film pointing out that if one can help the children to have faith in God, a faith in their fellowman and a faith in life itself then one need not worry as to how they mature, for not only will they be happy adults but they will develop a tranquillity and peace within themselves as the years go on. This is the real Christmas message of love and Peace on Earth, Good will to Man."

An attractive table with a special Christmas cloth centred by a gaily decorated tree with angels placed round and about and tall red candles at each end of the table added just the right note of color and sparkle to the evening. Around this setting the parents chatted and were served Christmas cookies and coffee by the social committee. Mrs. S. Else and mothers of grades V and VI were hostesses.

THANK YOU!

JANE FORRESTER

Charge Against Legion Member Is Exaggerated

GANANOQUE, Ont. (CP) — A Canadian Legion official said that charges that a sergeant-at-arms locked 19 Legion members out of their hall for almost a month at Verona were exaggerated.

Ian Beresford, district commander, said the lockout was due to a misunderstanding between branch president Fred Trussell and the janitor of the hall.

The official, who attended the monthly meeting of the branch Tuesday night, said many members go duck hunting at this time of year leaving the branch relatively inactive.

He said the hall was locked as a security measure using an extra lock and bolt. Mr. Trussell apparently misinterpreted the action, Mr. Beresford said.

Mrs. Hammer, the former Angele Zevely, brought the suit against her husband, the United States, in which Hammer is president, and the ... corporations, for a total of $7,...,000.

Peterborough Mayor Dies

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Mayor Norman Graham died yesterday in hospital almost seven months after he became seriously ill with cancer.

When first elected in 1950, he resigned as alderman after criticizing various city departments. But he returned in 1951 and was re-elected for another term as alderman. After 16 months in office he resigned saying he was dissatisfied with the way the city's sanitation department was being run. He was chairman of sanitation at the time.

In the election campaign of December, 1952, he was again returned as alderman. He was named chairman of the welfare and plumbing committee. Then again in October, 1953, he announced his resignation and his intention of running for mayor. It produced one of the liveliest campaigns in Peterborough's history.

WAS "FRUSTRATED"

He said he had been "frustrated" as alderman; there was carelessness in civic affairs; a lot of departments needed cleaning up, and he intended to "clean them up if I am elected mayor."

Mayor Graham's regime lasted only four months and then he was unable to carry on because of his fatal illness. Alderman John A. Stewart succeeded him as acting mayor on May 17. Alderman Stewart was elected mayor for 1955 at Monday's elections.

No Great Danger To Democracy Says Strasser

PARADISE, N.S. (CP)—Dr. Otto Strasser, onetime collaborator of Adolf Hitler, agreed Tuesday night with a West German parliamentary official who said Strasser represents "no great danger" to German democracy.

Strasser, who fled Hitler in 1935, said the party he plans to form after his impending return to West Germany "will not be a danger to the German constitution."

It "have fought totalitarianism in the forms of Hitler and Stalin all my political life," Strasser said. "My party would be politically dangerous to other parties, of course, just as the Conservatives are politically dangerous to the Liberals."

Strasser said, "my party will always remain on paper unless the German people choose to bring it into being."

The Bonn official said Strasser's activities would be "closely watched" when he returned.

Strasser plans to rejoin his family in Switzerland around Christmas. He has not seen them for 13 years.

FRANKFORD

Lions Club Holds Annual Ladies' Night

FRANKFORD — The Frankford Lions' Club held its annual "Ladies' Night" on Wednesday in the Frankford community hall. Padre of the Hasty Pees, Rev. A. S. McConnell, of Trenton, was guest speaker. Padre McConnell, who was a former pastor of Trinity Church in Frankford, gave an interesting address on the subject of "Courtesy." The padre was graciously thanked by Lion Arnold Stickle.

The banquet was presided over by the president, W. E. Loucks who welcomed the guests and called on fellow Lion Bert Smith, who toasted the ladies. Mrs. Preston Chase responded.

The program chairman, Art Duncan, introduced the following program: the MacPortland brothers of Trenton, who impersonated the famous TV act of Liberace and his brother George; eight young women of Batawa and Frankford, under the direction of Mrs. Frank Janak, presented four folk dances, representing four provinces of Czechoslovakia. This is a specialized part of Sokol gymnastic training. The piano team closed the program with modern music and both acts were rendered thanks by Art Duncan on behalf of the Lions and their guests.

McDowell Case Still Mystery After Army Deserter Denies Story About Killing Girl

REGINA (CP)—Regina police today were trying to fit in the final pieces of a puzzling story of an army deserter who confessed the slaying of 17-year-old Marion McDowell of Toronto and then denied everything he said.

But one thing seemed certain—23-year-old Andre Lacroix of Chicoutimi, Que., had nothing to do with the McDowell case, one of Canada's top unsolved crimes.

The blonde secretary was kidnapped from a parked car Dec. 7, 1953, after her boy friend was slugged and left unconscious. She has not been seen since. Police think the girl is dead.

CHANGES MIND

Regina police chief Arthur Cookson in a statement late Wednesday said Lacroix repudiated his confession that he murdered the girl with his bare hands.

Lacroix told two Leader-Post reporters Tuesday night that he killed the girl. He repeated his confession to a detective who posed as a newspaper man.

But he quickly changed his story Wednesday after waking up in a police cell. He was held in custody on a drunk charge and remanded a week. Police said they would continue to investigate every part of his story.

Chief Cookson said Lacroix in a statement said he confessed killing Marion to see what reporters who interviewed him thought of his story. Lacroix told the story when "feeling good"—he had consumed a considerable quantity of beer.

"I am reasonably satisfied that he had nothing to do with the murder."

The chief said Lacroix was unable to pin-point his movements during the weekend in which Marion disappeared. Lacroix had said he was in Kingston serving with the Royal Canadian Signal Corps when the girl vanished.

READ NEWSPAPER REPORT

Lacroix read a story from Toronto carried in The Leader-Post on the anniversary of the girl's disappearance and decided to give reporters "a thrill," Chief Cookson said.

The chief said he could not say if Lacroix would be charged with creating a public mischief or if he would be handed over to the army. If army officials could confirm that Lacroix was in Kingston Dec. 7 the matter would be disposed of. "Until we hear from the army we'll stand pat," the chief said.

Nine Persons Lose Lives In Accidents

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two children of an unemployed laborer who plunged through a hole in the ice were among nine persons in Ontario who lost their lives in accidents Wednesday.

Near Lakefield in the Peterborough area, George A. McArthur, 17, was killed when a car he was repairing slipped from a jack on to his neck.

Thomas Featherstone, 82, of Milton was fatally injured when his car was struck by a train near Hornby, about 25 miles west of Toronto.

DIES OF BURNS

Fire from a wood stove ignited the clothing of Mrs. Hector Case, 83, of Ingersoll, who died later in hospital in this town 19 miles southwest of Woodstock.

Near Winchester, 35 miles south of Ottawa, Cecil J. Wylie, 56, was killed when he walked into the path of an automobile from a bus he had just left.

Mrs. Margarite Lauzon, 58, of St. Catharines was killed when struck by a car.

In the Toronto area, Ernest Stone, 50, of suburban Lakeview died when his car crashed into a light standard and Pasquali Falconi, 39, was killed when he was struck by a car on his way to work.

HELSINKI, Finland (AP)—Jan Sibelius, Finland's great composer, celebrated his 89th birthday Wednesday with his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren at his villa outside Helsinki. He had asked for privacy but received telegrams and telephone calls from all parts of the world.

New Legislative Deal Proposed By Major Unions

By JOHN LaBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—A new legislative deal for handling railway-union contract disputes — which have produced one general strike and a series of crises in recent years—likely will be proposed soon by the major unions.

The proposals, informants say, will involve lifting the railways' troubled industrial relations out of the normal scope of existing federal legislation and setting up a special category for an industry in which a strike hamstrings the country's economy.

The unions' suggestions, still not completely formed, will emerge from a meeting early in the New Year of the general conference committee of the railway unions. The session of the 105-man committee will open Jan. 5 at Montreal.

BOTH SIDES

The committee includes representatives, not only of the 140,000 non-operating employees who threatened to strike last summer for fringe benefits, but three of four of the running-trades unions with about 40,000 members.

The meeting was called by conference chairman Frank H. Hall of Montreal in the light of evidence from the last big dispute that the government won't stand for another rail strike of the proportions that crippled the railways for 11 days in 1950. Union leaders want to work out means of settling disputes without being forced into accepting arbitration.

Present indications are they will ask the government to speed up and otherwise improve the labor department conciliation procedure through which contract disputants must go under the federal labor code.

YEAR FOR MAYHEM

COLUMBIA, Miss. (AP) — Mrs. Gettie Lee Cook received a one-year prison sentence Wednesday for burning her five-year-old nephew with matches. Mrs. Cook pleaded guilty to a charge of mayhem—mutilating or disfiguring a person.

Federal Government Appeals To Provinces to Speed Work

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government has appealed to the provinces to speed trans-Canada highway construction partly as a means to meet the threat of unemployment, it was learned authoritatively Wednesday night.

Works Minister Winters is understood to have made the appeal in letters to provincial highway ministers in all provinces except Quebec, which did not enter the federal-provincial trans-Canada highways agreement in 1949.

The minister is understood to have expressed regret that work on the highway—now little more than one-quarter complete—has not proceeded more rapidly. But he admitted some of th edelays have been unavoidable.

WORTHWHILE PROJECT

Mr. Winters is said to have added that at this time when provincial and federal governments want to achieve a high level of employment, it would appear that the trans-Canada highway was a worthwhile project to be pushed ahead.

The 3,000-mile coast-to-coast road was begun in 1950. Under the trans-Canada highway agreement the provinces do the work and the federal government shares the cost on a 50-50 basis with the provincial governments providing construction meets federal standards.

Under the split-cost agreement with the nine signing provinces, the federal government committed itself to spend up to a maximum of $150,000,000 by Dec. 9, 1956, when the agreement expires.

Up to Dec. 4 the federal government had paid a total of $51,536,994 on trans-Canada highway work, matching a similar total from the provinces. Contractual commitments by the provinces on that date totalled $178,977,971, and by the federal government $96,491,965.

Government informants said that since it is obvious the highway cannot be finished by the 1956 deadline, another federal-provincial conference must be called to renew the agreement so the work can be continued to completion.

WARN CHILDREN

BRANTFORD (CP) — Police warned Monday that a group of schoolboys, believed to have taken 50 or 60 electric gun cartridges from a construction job here, are carrying potential death in their pockets. Police said the cartridges were taken from the new St. Mary's Catholic church project here. They look like .22 bullets, but are more sensitive and easily set off.

New Method To Kill Cancer Is Developed

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A method of killing cancer by weaving radioactive thread into the flesh of the diseased area was described here Tuesday to x-ray specialists.

The thread is a hollow nylon tube about the diameter of a big darning needle. It holds tiny bits of radioactive substances such as radium, gold, cobalt or iridium, which give off x-rays that kill cancer cells faster than normal cells.

Many threads may be run through the cancer area, like darning thread through a sock. They are left in place a week or so, then pulled out.

IMPROVED WAY

This is a new and improved way of treating malignancy by implanting radioactive materials in the affected site. The common method is to use a hollow needle with bits of the materials inside it.

The nylon tube, which is flattened into the shape of a ribbon, is more easily handled, more comfortable for the patient, easily flexed to fit the diseased area and less dangerous to the physician, said Dr. Ulrich E. Henschke of Ohio State University medical school. He reported to the Radiological Society of North America.

This method is especially useful in treating malignancies of the neck, tongue and cheek and the area under the breastbone, Dr. Henschke said. In most cases it can be administered under a local anesthetic.

Heavily-Armed Bandit Cleans North Gower Bank

NORTH GOWER, Ont. (CP)—A heavily-armed bandit trio tied up the staff of a Royal Bank of Canada branch here Wednesday, cleaned the tellers' cages of cash and then sped off in an escape car driven by a fourth man.

Unofficial estimates said the bandits obtained nearly $5,000. However, the bank manager, C. F. Nickerson, said that estimate appeared high. He was checking in to determine the amount. He added: "They pretty well cleaned us out."

Ontario provincial police sped to this village 30 miles south of Ottawa after the bank manager got free of his bonds and gave the alarm. Road blocks were established in the area.

The escape car was described as a late model green sedan bearing Quebec licence plates.

CARRIED GUNS

Mr. Nickerson quoted one of the bandits as saying "we don't want to hurt anyone" when the trio entered the bank just before closing time. All carried guns.

They quickly tied up the manager and tellers Shirley Vosburgh, Joyce Beggs and Beryl Wilson and forced them to lie on the floor at the back of the bank. Only the staff was in the bank at the time.

Then the robbers systematically went through the tellers' cages and scooped up all the cash in sight, most of it in small denomination bills. After cutting the telephone lines in the bank, they left.

Gold Mines Ask Continued Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — Five Canadian mining associations today submitted a brief to the federal government asking for continuance of federal aid to gold mines.

The brief, submitted to Finance Minister Harris and Mines Minister Prudham, asked for renewal of the Emergency Gold Mining Act which expires at the end of this year.

ADENAUER ILL

BONN (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer is ill with a cold. The federal press office said today the 78-year-old West German government chief is confined to his home in Rhoendorf, across the Rhine, on his doctor's orders.

MacKenzie Leaves Tokyo For Vancouver

MacKenzie said he is under strict orders from Ottawa not to talk to reporters. He was secluded from the press during his two-day stay in Tokyo.

Ottawa sources said the reason for the ban was to protect other prisoners still held by the Chinese Reds.

Rawdon

RAWDON. — Mrs. Margueri'a McMullen and her mother, Mrs. Ernest White, visited Mrs. Gordley Galloway and Steven, Brian, at Trenton on Friday.

Miss Ruth Linn will be in charge of the Christmas meeting of the Sombegan Mission Band on Sunday morning.

Mr. Blake Sharpe and his men were busy sanding the roads for motor travel over the week-end.

MT. PLEASANT W.A.

The quarterly meeting of Mount Pleasant Rawdon Woman's Association was held at the church hall with 22 ladies in attendance.

The president conducted the meeting and read a Christmas poem and Christmas hymns were used with Mrs. Burton Sharpe officiating at the piano.

Miss Doris Sine read an invitation to St. Paul's W.A. The treasurer reported $365 in the bank.

MEDITATION

Mrs. Will McAdam read a Christmas story. The meditation on the theme, "God's gifts to us," was presented by Mrs. L. McKeown, Mrs. D. Johnson, Mrs. Will Jeffs and Mrs. Blake Sharp.

Mrs. Margarete McMullen sang "Dear Little Stranger."

Mrs. A. Packman, Stirling, gave an interesting address on the Christmas theme. She told several interesting Christmas legends that were familiar in England beginning with that first Christmas eve and the shepherds on the hills of Bethlehem. She vividly pictured that first early church and many events that had taken place down through the years.

CUP OF PEACE

One of special interest was the story of a large community where everyone, rich or poor gathered on Christmas eve and drank from the same cup thus signifying peace and good will with no resentment, jealousy, strife or anger in the lives of those who love Jesus. Each individual began the new year with a splendid beginning after throwing off all the old encumbrances.

The speaker closed with the legend of the three kings who brought their gold, frankincense and myrrh and said "we find in Jesus Christ all that we seek, our King, our Saviour, and our God and if we find all this we shall have a wonderful Christmas with true joy."

Mrs. W. G. Fletcher voiced appreciative thanks to Mrs. Packman and the service closed with "O Little Town of Bethlehem."

Burton Wrightman of the Queen's Own Rifles, Calgary, who has been on furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milford Wrightman, Rawdon, and other relatives, left on Tuesday by plane from Trenton to return to camp.

TWO-BY-TWO CLUB

Mount Pleasant Two-by-Two club convened at the church hall on Thursday evening, with the president in charge.

The devotional was conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Richardson. The program consisted of films from "The National Film Board" and these included, "Western Wheat," "Circus at the Zoo", and "The Commodores." Mrs. Kenneth Weaver was in charge of the projector.

Plans were made for a Christmas party for the members and their families.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Pauley and Cecil recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wallace and baby, Rawdon, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Dean and family, of Thomasburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Warren and family of Corbyville, spent Sunday with her parents.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

GOOD PARTY!

There's a trite expression in sportdom that goes something like this: "They handed it to 'em on a silver platter." That literally is what happened at the Belleville Baseball Association banquet last night. This one was on the city and the sponsoring Bata Shoe Company—and it goes without saying it was a great success.

The Goyers, the Wrights, the Bastians, the Carsons, the Fitzpatricks and the rest of the Bata ball-chasing clan came in their Sunday best—and those who have fallen by the marital wayside had the little women in tow. And the gals were no seconds when it came to the pizmaze. It was Belleville, Bata, baseball and beauty that thronged the well-appointed Shrine Club and did full justice to the fine turkey dinner served by Hostess Mrs. George Woodhouse and her efficient assistants.

Maybe the femmes walked off with the handsome engraved silver platters which each player received in a distinct departure from the conventional windbreaker gift, but the co-champions of Ontario Baseball Association's senior bracket, had their big moment when Coach Vern Goyer and captain Dick Fitzpatrick staggered out of the spotlight with a trophy nearly as big as the big coach himself. It was the Toronto Daily News Trophy, emblematic of senior baseball supremacy in Ontario and on which is engraved the names of some of the province's most famous amateur teams. Included are the Belleville Grand Trunks of 1918 and the Nationals of 1928.

It was a grand party, with speeches shaved down to a minimum and the back-slapping applied in the proper places. Decidedly lucky was wiped out of existence as was the trimmings and other mouth-watering table delicacies served only as Madame Woodhouse can serve them.

And by way of extra appreciation the powers-that-be presented Coach Goyer, Manager Jack Carson, Treasurer Drury Deuzo, and Coach Chris, the bat boy, with handsome fishing reels, in excess of the silver trays. Art Duncan, the bloke who lets the outside world know what the Bata Shoe Company is doing, was the maestro of presentation.

The sponsoring Bata Shoe Company came in for all sorts of appreciation. Pundits from baseball association president Malcolm Robb, Manager Carson, Coach Goyer and others. And not to be outdone, Dr. Karl Hero, managing director of the company, and the Belleville veteran retaliated with some nice statements anent the qualities off and on the diamond of the baseball club. Another special guest was Mr. Gordon Thring, export-import manager of the Bata Shoe Company, who with Dr. Hero, was unlisely "accused" of being bene-dicts when both are still enjoying single bliss although it was stated Mr. Thring is dangerously near the jumping-off spot.

Coach Goyer and team captain Fitzpatrick spoke for the club and the players, expressing the appreciation of both to the Bata company.

Lloyd "Red" Doran, Ontario Baseball Association convener here, presented the big trophy to the club, taking the place of OBA secretary Tom Rowden, who wrote his congratulations and expressed his regret at being unable to be present to do the honors. Executive members present included Jack Vansever, aldermen-elect Ralph Graham and Frank Grandame, and Paul Hargis.

Dr. Hero said his company was proud of the accomplishment of the team in bringing the championship to Belleville. This year, he said, marked the fifteenth for his company in Batawa and it was marked with the sponsorship of the baseball club. The championship was very timely, he said.

Mr. Duncan added his appreciation, while Manager Carson spoke briefly on the fine association enjoyed by the club and the company.

President Robb said the fine co-operation of all concerned and connected with the team was one of the main factors in acquiring the championship. He had been associated with many sports bodies, he said, but he had never seen the co-operation, team play and will-to-win such as was displayed by the Batas last season.

President Robb expressed the sincere appreciation of his association, the club and the citizens of Belleville to the Bata Company for their generous co-operation in sponsorship. He hoped the same cordial relations would continue to exist.

Following the dinner and presentations, the players, their wives and guests enjoyed motion pictures of various Grey Cup games and other exciting moments in Canadian football. These films were shown through the generosity of the O'Keefe Brewing Company and its likeable representative, Jim Williamson.

WILL SPONSOR JUNIOR CLUB

Talking "shop" at the baseball banquet at the Shrine Club last night, this department was informed by executive member of the Belleville Baseball Association, Paul Hargis, that he will sponsor a junior baseball club here next season. Paul felt there were enough youngsters in the city, besides those in the district who could round out a team. He said there were some promising juvenile and midget players here who could be developed and the only way to do it is through organized baseball.

"We've got to have a feed-box for this senior club," said Paul, "and the only way to get it is to develop the youngsters."

Big Wingman Runs Wild To Score All Winners' Goals; Black Hawks Edge Rangers 2-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ron Stewart, a fellow coach King Clancy battled on the jersey as his kind of defensive player, ran wild as a National Hockey League goal scorer Wednesday night.

The six-foot-one rightwinger, one of the first men Clancy calls on when the opposition needs cooling out, scored three goals as the Maple Leafs defeated the front-running Montreal Canadiens 3-1 at Toronto.

It was the first time in three seasons that a Leaf has done that and marked Stewart as a top two-way player. A crowd of 13,376 fans nearly went wild as big Ron sank the Montrealers with some of his best hockey since hitting the league two years ago.

A BIG ONE

It was a big victory for the second-place Leafs, moving them to within two points of Canadiens. They could catch them when they meet in a return match at Montreal tonight.

In the only other game Dave Creighton, a former Leaf, scored in the third period to give the last-place Chicago Black Hawks a 2-1 victory over the Rangers at New York.

Stewart, 22-year-old native of Calgary, was given a great ovation when he beat Charlie Hodge, rookie Montreal goaltender, in each of the three periods after Eddie Litzenberger put Canadiens ahead at 7:40 of the first period.

Stewart's output for the year now stands at 12, despite the fact he has been used a lot as a penalty killer this season. That is close to his best season in the big-time. He hit a career 19 games in the 1953-54 campaign.

He scored the first at 13:34 of the first period with a 25-foot backhander that whistled past the surprised Hodge. He added another at 5:20 of the second for the winning goal and scored an insurance marker at 5:37 of the final to wind up the night.

Canadiens lost the services of forward Jackie Moore in a high-sticking duel with Rudy Migay of the Leafs in the second period. Moore dislocated his right shoulder for the fourth time in his brief career.

Maurice Richard, the great Montreal rightwinger looking for goal No. 399 of his star-studded career, missed on a couple of chances. He had a good opportunity in the second period, breaking in alone on Leaf defender Harry Lumley but Harry outguessed him on a shot to the corner.

The Hawks struck for their fourth victory of the season on Creighton's goal at 7:36 of the last session before 4,623 fans. It was also their first win in 11 games. The loss left Rangers in a fourth-place tie with Boston Bruins, who have played two games fewer.

Bill Mosienko sent the Hawks into the lead in the first period but New York defenceman Bill Gadsby tied it up in the second. That set the stage for Creighton.

Sports Magazine Charges Norris 'Fixed' Fights

NEW YORK (AP)—Sports Illustrated says that James Norris, Jr., president of the International Boxing Club, "has been a fixer of prize fights" but the charge was categorically denied by Norris.

In an article written by former heavyweight boxer Harry Thomas, the magazine says in its current issue that the 46-year-old head of the IBC fixed the Thomas-Max Schmeling fight at Madison Square Garden, Dec. 13, 1937, and his fight with Tony Galento in Philadelphia Nov. 14, 1938.

Thomas also says his Garden fight with Jimmy Adamick Feb. 18, 1938 was one in which he was supposed to "carry" Adamick but his title fight with Joe Louis April 1, 1938 at the Chicago Stadium, which he lost, was on the level. Thomas lost the decision to Adamick.

SAYS UNTRUE, ABSURD

"The charge that I participated in fixed fights that took place 17 years ago is untrue, libelous and absurd," Norris said in a statement. "It is a cheap device on the part of the magazine seeking desperately to build circulation at the expense of boxing.

"A hearing was held before the New York commission Nov. 21, 1939. At that hearing the boxer (Harry Thomas), whom the magazine quotes, refused to testify.

"Now the ridiculous story is revived at a time when most of the people mentioned in the article are dead and cannot conveniently defend themselves."

"I did not promote the fights mentioned in the article," Norris said. "I did not manage any of the fighters mentioned. The fights took place in New York and Philadelphia and my only interest in boxing at the time was as landlord of the Chicago Stadium and Detroit Olympia."

Dutchies Whip Indians 6-2 To Extend Lead

KITCHENER (CP) — Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen stretched their first-place lead in the Ontario Hockey Association senior A series Wednesday night by defeating Stratford Indians 6-2 before 2,168 fans.

All the scoring was done in the first two periods with the Twin City club outscoring the fifth place Indians 3-1 in each of them.

There were nine minor penalties, the losers getting five, four in the final period.

Says Kramer Will Wreck Amateur Tennis

MELBOURNE (AP) — An Australian tennis promoter said today Jack Kramer of the United States is courting to Australia this week-end with a scheme which "if it comes to pass will completely wreck amateur tennis."

John Brennan, director of Frank Sedgman's Australian professional tour, refused to divulge more of Kramer's plan but Alan Trengrove, tennis writer for The Argus, said he understands the American promoter will make pro offers to members of both the Australian and U.S. Davis Cup teams.

Scramble For Coach Job Down to Three

OTTAWA (CP)—A scramble for the job as coach of Ottawa Rough Riders in the Big Four appears to have been narrowed to three Americans.

The three prospective coaches invited by a committee of the club's executive for interviews are Joe Bach, Lou Zarza and Cliff Sheegle.

Bach, until recently coach of Pittsburgh Steelers in the United States National Football League, already has talked to members of the executive.

Zarza, of Wayne University, Detroit, is another would-be newcomer to Canadian football. He is expected here Friday for an interview. Sheegle, assistant coach of the Dominion champion Edmonton Eskimos, may come during the weekend or early next week.

"We expect to announce our choice before Christmas," an official of the club said Wednesday.

Track, Field Stars Get Trophy Awards

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Ontario athletes Wednesday night were named winners of the J. W. Davies and Frederick N. A. Rowell Trophies awarded annually to Canada's outstanding track and field stars.

Ken McKenzie, chairman of the national awards committee of Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, announced that Rita Ferguson, Toronto miler, had been awarded the Davies Trophy and Roy Pells, distance throwing star from Sudbury, the Rowell Trophy.

The Davies Trophy goes annually to the athlete adjudged Canada's outstanding track and field, or marathon athlete. It was won last year by Doug Clement of Vancouver. The Rowell Trophy for the country's top field event athlete was held last year by Vancouver shot put star John Pawlich and in 1953—the first year it was up for competition—by Bob Adams of Saskatoon.

FOR GAMES SHOWING

Ferguson, a student at the University of Iowa, won fame in the British Empire Games here last August when he finished third in the featured mile event behind England's Roger Bannister and Australia's John Landy. His time of four minutes, 4.8 seconds set a Canadian native record.

Pells won a second-place medal in the discus event at the Games last August with a throw of 162 feet, six inches. He also won the Canadian discus title at Toronto and set a Canadian mark of 171 feet, six inches at the Kennedy relays at Windsor, Ont., last June.

NHL Oldtimers Will Carry On

TORONTO (CP)—A group of Canada's all-time hockey greats decided Wednesday night on 'one-time playing exhibition games to raise funds for crippled children despite the death of Lionel Conacher, who collapsed from overexertion at a softball match in Ottawa last summer.

However, they appointed a doctor to keep an eye on things.

The former stars, members of the National Hockey League Old-Timers' Association, announced the move after they scheduled six games in Ontario and Manitoba cities. They lined up games for Kingston, Kitchener-Waterloo, Toronto, Fort William and Winnipeg. Dates have not yet been arranged.

In the last three years, the group raised $65,000 for children's work. Charlie Conacher of Toronto, Lionel's brother, was named president.

Ken Mosdell of Montreal and Don Raleigh of New York were the only players among the National Hockey League's leading scorers to gain ground in Wednesday night play.

Each picked up an assist as their teams went down to defeat, the Rangers bowing 3-1 to Chicago, and Montreal losing 3-1 to Toronto. Mosdell's point moved him to within two points of third place in the standings and Raleigh's assist helped him to take fifth place.

Walter (Babe) Pratt, colorful defenceman, was traded by New York Rangers to Toronto Maple Leafs of the NHL 12 years ago today for Hank Goldup and Red Garrett. Pratt won the Hart Trophy as the league's most valuable player in 1944. Later he played with Boston, with Cleveland in the AHL and Tacoma and New Westminster on the Pacific coast, hanging up his skates in 1952.

MONTREAL (CP)—Leo Dandurand, back into football again as co-owner of Montreal Alouettes, said Wednesday night that one of the reasons prompting his return was "love of the game."

The 74-year-old Montreal sportsman said the Alouette club "is kind of a sagehill of mine, and when I was approached and the opportunity thereto arose I decided to get back into it."

Dandurand said neither he nor his 28-year-old partner in the deal, wealthy Ted Workman, is prepared to discuss yet the financial arrangements and other details involved in the shift of ownership from a Montreal triumvirate of Roy Robertson, Fred Skelcher and Charlie Stone.

"Our first procedure is to organize a board meeting, and it likely will be held within a week," he said.

NO BEARING

At the same time Dandurand made it plain that the question of whether the NBC again contracts next year to televise Big Four football games—to the financial benefit of the clubs—had no bearing on the present deal.

"The NBC was not even discussed and the question was not taken into consideration at all," he said. "The whole thing was simply the matter of acquiring the club."

Dandurand was cautious when asked about any possible new moves but did say he can "see no reason why Walker shouldn't be back."

LEFT LAST WEEK

Coach Douglas (Peahead) Walker left Montreal last week to spend the winter in the South, and Dandurand said Walker had no knowledge whatever of a possible change in ownership when he left.

Before leaving, Walker said he had "rejected all offers" made to him by National Football League clubs in the United States. He didn't name them or indicate whether there was the possibility of further offers, but said he would coach in no city in Canada except Montreal.

Dandurand formerly was connected with racing here and with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League. He came into football when the Alouettes, as an entirely new organization in succession to the old Montreal Hornets, came into being in 1946. He sold out after the 1951 season.

Mackell Out With Injury

BOSTON (AP)—Fleming Mackell, Boston Bruins centre, suffered a knee injury in practice Wednesday and may be unable to oppose Chicago Black Hawks tonight in a National Hockey League game.

Gus Bodnar, another centre, did not practice because of a groin injury, and he too, may be unable to play. That would leave the club with two centres, Cal Gardner and Don McKenney.

Bruin manager-coach Lynn Patrick and player-coach Milt Schmidt pondered assigning veteran defenceman Hal Laycoe to a forward position if neither Mackell nor Bodnar can play.

'One-Platoon' Football Gets Writers' Nod

NEW YORK (AP)—College football has had two years in which to get used to limited substitutions and "one-platoon" football apparently is here to stay.

At least United States sports writers and broadcasters say so by a thumping vote in their answers to an Associated Press postseason questionnaire. But there's a solid little core of experts who demand "bring back two-platoon football," and a group of others who favor some relaxation of the substitution rule.

The count of those who said a definite yes or no in their replies was 76 in favor of the present rule and 18 for free substitution. About a dozen suggested minor modifications.

It's great. It separates the men from the boys. It enables the fans to know the players; it makes our work easier. It has brought back the stars. It's just as good football, or even better than under the two-platoon system and more interesting. Those are the favored arguments of the men favoring limited substitution.

The opposition argues that the quality of college play has dropped sharply, that fewer boys get a chance to play in games after taking a dreary pounding in practice and that there's greater danger of injury to tired players.

LONDON (AP) — Donald Malcolm Campbell leaves London today for Ullswater, the Lake Windermere with his newest Bluebird, an all-metal jet he believes will travel faster than 200 miles an hour and return the world speed-boat record to Britain.

The son of the late great land and water king, Sir Malcolm Campbell, said if all goes well he will slide Bluebird into the water for the first time Friday and switch on the turbojet power plant for preliminary tests.

"I will make no attempt tomorrow to break Stanley Sayres' world record, but I certainly hope for a good fast opening test run," said Campbell, 33.

BROKE RECORD

Sayre of Seattle, Wash., broke the 141.74 m.p.h. record set by Campbell's father, Sir Malcolm, in 1939 with a 160 m.p.h. clocking over Lake Washington in 1950. Sayres' Slo-Mo-Shun IV boosted the record by 18 mph on Lake Washington July 7, 1952.

"We know little about how Bluebird will react on the actual speed course since the boatyard only handed her over to me last month," said Campbell. "There are a great many 'ifs' to this business of speed attempts. Recent floods put a lot of our gear and the boat house 6 feet under water. Logs also washed up along the lake shore make things dangerous. I know—I hit a lot once going about 150 miles an hour."

Bosier Escorted From Arena For Second Time

A total of 149 minutes in penalties was handed out by referees Jack Shropshire and Stan Boxer as the hectic engagement between Dixie and Brampton. Dixie got 83 minutes of penalties in the last period.

The ruckus started in the third period when Brampton, trailing 3-2, scored six goals to snatch an 8-3 victory.

O.H.A. Suspends Defenceman In Junior A Loop

TORONTO (CP)—Kent Douglas, defenceman for Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A league, has been automatically suspended, the association announced today.

The suspension results from a fight between Douglas and defenceman Al McQueen of Barrie Flyers in a game at Barrie Wednesday night. Douglas hit McQueen over the head with his stick during a third period fracas.

Earlier reports said Douglas was given a match penalty for molesting an official on the ice after the battle between McQueen and Douglas.

Bill Hanley, OHA secretary, said today Douglas will be banished from playing until his case is considered before the president of the league, tentatively scheduled for Dec. 17.

Douglas, who started the season with Toronto Marlboros and later was traded to Kitchener, was suspended from hockey between Feb. 13, 1953, and May 15, 1954 for striking a referee while playing for Weston Dukes in the OHA Junior B league.

Springfield Tops American League

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Springfield Indians, the American Hockey League's newest entry, had first place all to themselves today and two rookies—Don Simmons and Jim Anderson—were the good reasons why they're atop the circuit.

Simmons played as excellent game in goal and Anderson produced a pair of scores Wednesday night as the Indians downed Pittsburgh Hornets 4-2. The triumph gave Springfield 28 points and Pittsburgh 26.

In the other league game, the Buffalo Bisons moved out of the cellar by whipping Hershey Bears 5-4. Dick Gamble paced the Bison offensive with two goals.

TO DRAIN FIELDS

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's sportsmen have set up a permanent sports turf committee to deal with maintenance and drainage of city playing fields. The action came Wednesday after an unusually wet fall season that saw the gridiron of $1,500,000 Empire Stadium made unplayable because of a breakdown in the drainage system. Several other sports fields were rendered useless.

Teepees Whip Flambeaux 7-5 In Trophy Game

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP)—St. Catharines TeePees rapped in three goals without a reply in the third period Wednesday to defeat Trois-Rivieres Flambeaux 7-5 in a Laurier Challenge Trophy game.

The win was scored for the TeePees in three starts on their swing through Quebec. They bowed to Quebec Frontenacs 2-1 Sunday but bounced back for a 5-4 overtime win over the Montreal Canadiens Tuesday night.

Alvin McDonald and Barry Cullen led the St. Catharines attack in Wednesday's holiday afternoon contest with a pair of goals each. Chester Warchol, Cecil Hockstra and Hank Ciesla got the other spicers.

The Flambeaux took a 3-2 lead in the first period and each team scored twice in the second. The TeePees took over in the third period, however, clinching the win on goals by McDonald, Ciesla and Cullen.

Shuffling Cards Get Strength In New Deal

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals, who gambled and won on Wally Moon, bolstered a sagging infield staff but took another look at the wheel of fortune today in the person of untried fielding man Ken Boyer.

The gamble developed when the Cards, sorely in need of relief pitchers for two years, parted with their regular third baseman Ray Jablonski and starting pitcher Gerry Staley Wednesday to get reliefer Frank Smith from the Cincinnati Redlegs.

Boyer, who came to the Cards from the Texas League, is the No. 1 prospect for Jablonski's third base vacancy.

Dick Meyer, Cards' general manager, explained the club gave up "a lot" to get Smith but said he and manager Eddie Stanky felt we couldn't make much progress without an adequate bullpen.

Cincinnati plans to use Jablonski, the first Cardinal rookie to drive in more than 100 runs at their regular third baseman to replace Bobby Adams. Jablonski, 28, who belied home 112 runs during his freshman year in 1953, hit .296 last season and drove in 104 runs but was been rewarded by some as a defensive liability.

Gabe Paul, Cincinnati's general manager, also believes Staley (7-13) will regain his form in new surroundings. The 31-year-old Staley, who had a 19-9 record in '53, had figured in Cardinal bullpen plans next season.

Does Not Think Texans Will Be Mad at His New Movie

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The theme song of George Stevens might well be "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You."

Stevens is the man who is producing and directing "Giant," from the Edna Ferber novel that aroused such Texas ire. But he doesn't think many Texans will be mad at his movie.

"The same thing happened when she wrote 'Cimarron'" he observed. "Oklahomans attacked her for supposedly showing that early settlers were sharpsters. Why, she was hung in effigy in one Oklahoma town.

"But when the picture was finished, the governor of Oklahoma invited her to the world premiere as guest of honor.

"I think it will be the same with 'Giant.' A lot of people got excited about the book. But I don't think that anyone who feels strongly for Texas can help but feel moved when he sees the picture."

INVADES TEXAS

Stevens is so sure that Texans will favor the film that he plans to invade the state for shooting late next month. Right now he is in secure scouting locations in five spots—San Antonio, Houston, the Panhandle, the mountains in the southwest and the west gulf coast. He'll probably pick four locations and plans to shoot about half of the film in Texas.

The producer-director, a large, rough-hewn man, spoke of the problems of converting the 447-page novel into an 180-page script. He faced the need of not only cutting, but adding material as well.

"The book covers 25 years of the lives of its characters," he remarked. "We not only have to cover that span, but we also have to build to a final 20 minutes of intense excitement, which all good movies have. We did that by building a series of climaxes, which Edna was not required to have in the book.

"Also, the characters were more or less in profile in the book. We have tried to round them out. We do not merely show you a tough man who has made 150 millions. We show you how he got that way. I feel this understanding of motivation will permit Texans to like the picture."

Stevens said he would stick to the story and not editorialize.

NHL Brass Confab Friday

TORONTO (CP) — National Hockey League club owners and governors will meet here Friday morning, it was reported Wednesday night.

Although there was no official reason given for the meeting, it apparently will be in connection with the policy of helping weak NHL clubs with playing material.

The policy was initiated at an executive meeting in New York several weeks ago. Out of that came trades affecting all six clubs except New York Rangers.

For his second bid, a cumberson system opening over bidder has a potful of rules to learn. But it is only a drop in the bucket to the inferences that his partner must figure out on the second round.

The opener must consider the qualifications for four zones and what each zone should do after each kind of first response. And the responder must then adjust himself in this decision.

One combination a day is all this space can take. So, take an opening bid of one in a suit with a response of one in a new suit; when the second bid by opener is one no-trump.

Culbertson says the second call by responder is: Pass with 1½ honor tricks or less; bid a new biddable suit; rebid a rebiddable suit with about two honor tricks; bid two game or jump to three in a rebiddable major suit with more than two honor tricks.

Green says the second call by responder is: Pass with no more than nine points; bid two no-trump with ten or 11 points; bid three no-trump with 12 or more points He avoids suit bid advices.

Accordin' to Gordon, all bids follow the "A-N" order of choices: takeout, assist, no-trump. His first bid shows three tricks inclusive of two high cards; his second bid may raise once in a suit for each added trick; raise once in no-trump for each added high card.

♥ 8 7 5 4
♣ 9 6 3 2

If your south partner opens with a heart, takeout to one spade. If partner then bids one no-trump, bid two no-trump on the next round. You lack another suit bid.

You have another high card for the raise.

This would be your correct second bid in any style. It matters not whether you decide it by honor tricks or points or high cards. It is only a question of which method you can best understand.

Some have a yearning for difficult learning.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars, for Friday, December 10, 1954.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Delightful prospects in some ways, but be warned not to seek what you know you haven't earned or what is not yet due. Matters requiring enterprise, endurance and bravery sponsored.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — Although your Venus' position advises against stressing personal desires the day can be progressive and an ouraging for government and military interests, and all useful and worthwhile matters.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — Unusual and new activities and interests are not promising, particularly for you can expect generally wholesome and stimulating influences where familiar matters are concerned.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Your Moon, Mars and Jupiter, all in grand aspect, invite you to double past returns, or at least try for them. Personal and business interests have fresh encouragement. Avoid contention but do try.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — Your planetary aspects promise an interesting and stimulating day and should inspire your best endeavors. Difficult and unusual ventures are sponsored.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo) — Your special talents and the activities over which you have charge have splendid directions and incentive now. You can introduce new ideas, new methods.

September 24 to October 22 (Libra) — Read Taurus, please. An intriguing, possibly very propitious day — or not too favorable — depending on how you plan and act. You can have fun while getting on with duties. Don't overdo or worry.

October 23 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Your Mars, in splendid position, encourages your particular interests, activities, work requiring skill as well as endurance and bravery. You have the qualifications for accomplishment, use them.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — You, too, have top-grade aspects. Jupiter smiles on good deeds, favors military and government activity. Business should yield profits. Go forward.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Your Saturn advises caution — which does not mean f ear of accomplishment. Try for new goals, Day requires stable movement that you can give it. Good luck!

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Keep within proper boundaries — neither reaching for too much nor too little. You have the innate gift for attaining more than you think possible but you don't always try hard enough.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — This should be a stimulating, productive day for you and your interests. Neptune and other major planets in auspicious aspects, Don't fear to sidestep routine matters; go truly forward.

YOU BORN TODAY are energetic, proud, capable; could be handicapped by combativeness, quick temper. Nothing could be more deleterious to achievement, health and happiness than hurry, worry and unbridgable temperament. You have great capabilities and talent. Do them justice and forge ahead. You can meet the public, handle any job that spells success once you recognize your assets and start working for the great success that can be yours. Little Benny's Notebook

Pop was happy at breakfast on account of Mr. Jones next store not having kept him awake by snoring, and he said to ma, I cant believe it, he didn't let out a single toot.

Maybe his sleeping habits have altered, ma said. Maybe he has suddinly taken to sleeping on his face and his pillow takes the whole brunt of it and muffles the sound, she said, and pop said, Let's not be carried away by folio optimism. It will only make true pessimism more paneful when he starts in again tonight, he said.

Perhaps the wind has changed permanently. Climate is such a peculiar thing, she said, and pop said, I believe in miracles, but not private miracles like that.

William, it's possible that Mr. Jones had an allergy that made him snore, and now the allergy has passed off, like Maud Hews's allergy, ma said. For years Maud had an allergy to eggs. They made her sneeze and scratch like a perfect jitterbug. But now she can eat them with relish and impunity ma said, and pop said, Well, believe in medical science, but I never heard of a snoring allergy.

G, I know, pop, said. I just remembered. I saw Mr. Jones go away in a taxi yesterday. He only had a small suitcase, so I guess he'll be home again soon, maybe today, I said, and pop said, Yes gods, there go my shattered hopes, I need more coffee.

And he took a 3rd cup, being one more than is suppose to be good for his heith.

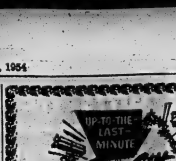
Former Deputy House Speaker Dies at London

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — George Frederic Sanderson, former Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons where he sat for the Ontario constituency of Perth, died Wednesday at the age of 85.

Mr. Sanderson, a Liberal, was first elected to the House in 1925 and served until 1942 when he did not seek re-election.

During his political career, Mr. Sanderson at various times was Liberal Whip for the province of Ontario and chief organizer for the federal Liberal party.



His son, J. F. Sanderson of Montreal, is public relations advisor for the Canadian Bankers' Association.

A grower and manufacturer, Mr. Sanderson joined St. Marys town council in 1908, became mayor in 1911, a member of the public utilities commission in 1914, and president of the Board of Trade in 1920.

He served overseas during the First World War as army captain with the 8th Reserve in England and the 87th Battalion in France. He attended St. Marys collegiate and the Ontario College of Pharmacy.

Supreme Court Dismisses Two Damage Actions

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada Wednesday dismissed an appeal of two damage actions brought as a result of a speedway accident at Kingston in which one man was killed and another injured.

The actions were brought by Mrs. Lena Depo and Glen Stevenson, both of Kingston. Mrs. Depo's husband was killed and Stevenson was injured when a racing car swerved out of a turn and struck them as they stood near the speedway track on a farm outside Kingston on July 24, 1952.

The track operators, Kingston Speedway Ltd., were sued for $15,000 on behalf of Mrs. Depo and $4,500 on behalf of Stevenson. The company argued that Mrs. Depo and Stevenson were standing in a roped-off prohibited area when struck and spectators had been warned not to go there. The respondents claimed since the company had sold tickets for entry to the track the responsibility became theirs.

The cases were dismissed in the Ontario Supreme Court. An appeal to the Ontario Court of Appeal also was dismissed.

UN Assembly Agrees to Debate Case of Airmen

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)— The United States and its 13 Korean allies pressed today for speedy action on their bid to throw the moral weight of the United Nations General Assembly behind their campaign to free 11 U.S. airmen jailed by Red China on spy charges.

The assembly's ready agreement to debate the case despite Soviet delaying tactics indicated the Allies' case would win strong support.

The world body today scheduled day and night sessions on a 16-country resolution denouncing the jailing and demanding the airmen's release.

WOULD MAKE CLEAR

Launching the debate Wednesday night, Henry Cabot Lodge, chief U.S. delegate, said an overwhelming vote in favor of the resolution would make it clear to Peiping that world opinion considers the detention of the 11 fliers a violation of the Korean armistice.

Canada's external affairs minister, L. B. Pearson, also spoke in favor of the resolution, declaring that Russia's recent new claims that Red China is not bound by the Korean armistice have been "sufficiently rebutted."

The claim proved hollow, he said when Premier Chou En-lai of Red China En-lai represented the Chinese side at the Geneva conference last June.

JAPS' WARTIME FOREIGN CHIEF BACK IN OFFICE

Peg-Legged Shigemitsu Former War Criminal

By JIM BECKER

Shigemitsu was named deputy prime minister and foreign minister by Ichiro Hatoyama, Conservative Democrat who was elected prime minister in March.

The cabinet, which will rule only until national elections in March, was announced after a day of wrangling over several cabinet posts. Ten of the 17 new cabinet members, including Hatoyama, were purged from public life by the occupation.

CHINA TRADE

Like Hatoyama, the 65-year-old Shigemitsu served a prison term as a war criminal. Envoys more trade with Red China, have said in an interview that he hopes to improve Japanese-American relations.

"We are definitely in the democratic camp," he said.

The key post of finance minister went to Hisato Ichimada, governor of the Bank of Japan. His choice makes it certain that Japan will follow its current "austerity" program to increase its foreign trade holdings.

Ichimada played a key role in boosting Japan's exports and shrinking her imports during a "dollar famine" considered by many the key to industrial recovery.

OTHER POSTS

The defence ministry went to Takeji Kuraishi, a former home minister who has no military background.

Taseran Ishibashi, one of the prime movers behind Hatoyama's drive for free enterprise, became armed ministry of trade. He is a strong proponent of trade with Red China and the Soviet Union.

But Shigemitsu said Japan's new government hopes to improve relations with Japan-Soviet relations still further.

The Communists consider us a greater enemy than former prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida," said Shigemitsu in an interview with The Associated Press.

Western Big Three Meet Soon To Reply to Kremlin Warning

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, Britain and France will consult soon on a reply to Russia's latest note warning of a buildup in Communist military power to counter the proposed rearmament of West Germany.

Washington officials are taking the view that the note does not really foreshadow any new Red military buildup, but that it has some propaganda purposes.

The note, given to the three Western powers in Moscow Thursday night, said that the Soviet Union and other peace-loving countries will carry out all necessary measures to step up their armaments and to safeguard their security."

It also said that making West Germany a partner in the western European defence system and a member of the North Atlantic alliance would weaken the unification of Germany impossible.

Both statements reflect the standard Soviet line which was developed almost a year ago at the Berlin Big Four conference and in a subsequent series of notes to Washington, London and Paris.

The Western powers have consistently presented a solid front in their replies to the Soviet Union, and officials say the practice of joint consultation which has been followed in the past will be employed again this time.

For propaganda purposes, the new Soviet warning is assumed here to be aimed at creating popular uneasiness and political division over the German rearmament issue in both France and West Germany. It holds out the threat of a permanently divided Germany, and alleges new dangers of war by referring to "the growing armed forces and the aggressive plans threatening the maintenance of peace."

As to an increase in the strength of eastern European forces, it has always been assumed here that the forces in being are about as large as the Communists can maintain, and far greater than they need for purely defensive purposes.

Moscow's warning, therefore, is not regarded as foreshadowing any real change in the balance of power as between the Atlantic alliance and the Communist bloc.

Official here believe that what is happenening in the broad picture is the hardening of a line of military strength between East and West. They think this may result in a surer balance that will last for years.

CANADIAN FIGHTER ACE REUNITED WITH HIS WIFE

Sqdn. Ldr. MacKenzie Prepares to Fly East

By KEN METHERAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Canadian fighter ace, the horrors of two years in a Communist prison camp behind him, was ready to set off on the second happiest flight of his life today accompanied by his lovely blonde wife who never stopped hoping for his safe return.

Sqdn. Ldr. A. R. (Andy) MacKenzie's happiest flight ended here Thursday as he stepped from a Canadian Pacific Airlines plane into the waiting arms of his sobbing, but overjoyed, wife Joyce.

Later today they will fly, together for the first time since the veteran RCAF pilot was shot down by Communist MIGs, to visit relatives in Montreal.

MEET CHILDREN

At Montreal the tall, slim flier, who was serving as an exchange flier with the United States Air Force when he was shot down near the Yalu river, will again meet his two young sons and two daughters that he last saw in November, 1952.

Looking fit and well in high spirits despite his long prison camp ordeal, Sqdn. Ldr. MacKenzie gave his wife a lingering embrace as he arrived from Hong Kong, where he was released from behind the Bamboo Curtain Sunday.

Then at a press conference that followed, he turned aside all questions concerning the treatment he received and of the two years in a Red China prison camp.

"Just tell the people of Canada I want to thank them for the wonderful consideration they have given my wife and myself," he said.

"And, most of all, thanks to the people of Montreal."

STRICT ORDERS

He refused to discuss his life in prison was in accordance with strict orders from RCAF headquarters at Ottawa where senior officials had announced earlier he would not be permitted to say anything to the press until after being interrogated there.

Ottawa officials said the reason for the ban was to protect other prisoners still held by Communist Reds.

Hope that MacKenzie would tell some of the details of his imprisonment and give names of U.S. fliers still held by the Reds, brought several American newspaper men here. But Ottawa's ban put an end to that.

Some of the visiting reporters wondered aloud why the Chinese should let a Canadian go, yet retain 11 U.S. fliers and sentence 3 others to life jail. Some Washington circles have described the situation as "a slap in the face for the U.S."

May Not Participate

TORONTO (CP)—Officials of the Ontario government said Thursday the province will not commit itself immediately to any definite participation in the $50,000,000 Lakeshore expressway along Toronto's lakefront.

They said they want to wait until the No. 401 highway bypass across the north end of the city is finished. That is expected by next summer.

The officials said they feel the bypass will relieve the present need of driving in the metropolitan area and will permit an orderly study of the project as hope as the expressway should be held off.

Weary Delegates Prepare To Vote Censure Of Chinese

Expect 45 of 60 UN States To Demand Airmen Be Freed

By TOM HOGE
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United Nations assembly pushed for a vote today on demands by the United States and its 15 allies of the Korean War that Red China yield up 11 American airmen held as spies. Western diplomats predicted at least 45 of the 60 member states would rally behind the call.

Weary delegates prepared to resume debate (about 10:30 a.m. EST) on the resolution after two meetings Thursday, the second lasting until nearly midnight.

Hopeful of clearing up the item before the assembly goes into its final scheduled week, they plan to remain in session until they reach a ballot on the 15-power resolution condemning imprisonment of the men and calling on Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold to work for their release.

SEE OPPOSITION

As the general debate neared a close, delegates anticipated that the resolution will encounter opposition only from the five-power Soviet bloc, which fought it bitterly every step of the way. A second group of Arab-Asian states were expected to abstain.

Observers say the resolution could have mustered 55 favorable votes if it had not included condemnation of Red China. This caused apprehension among the Arab-Asian states with little desire to go on record denouncing Peiping.

Syria reflected this feeling in Thursday's debate. Its chief delegate, Ahmed Shukairi, said he favored the speedy release of the airmen but saw little point in denouncing the Chinese if the assembly sincerely wanted to win the Americans' freedom.

Russia's Jacob Malik spearheaded the bitter Soviet-bloc attack on the resolution. Malik angrily denounced the resolution as "shameful" and declared the assembly had no right to try to intervene in Chinese justice. He hinted that the Communists would take any action the UN might take in the matter.

Henry Cabot Lodge, U.S. chief delegate, accused Malik of making hollow, misleading statements in charging that airmen were spies. He declared the plane was on a peaceful mission and that the airmen, as uniformed military personnel, should be handed over at once under the terms of the Korean armistice.

Los Angeles Arrest Provides Vancouver Crime Wave Break

VANCOUVER (CP)—Four men were held for questioning today in what police said is the first major break in the crime wave plaguing this city.

One of the men was arrested Thursday in Los Angeles, where, police said, he admitted robbing a Bank of Nova Scotia branch here of $3,600 on Nov. 5.

The other three were picked up on city streets and in a downtown hotel room and stolen police seized $2,000 in cash.

Arrested in the United States was Bruce Teetzel, Canadian-born ex-convict picked up for carrying a gun.

PROFITS BY EXCHANGE

Teetzel told police he went to Detroit after holding up the bank. He changed the Canadian money into U. S. funds and profited by four cents on the dollar.

Two of the others arrested, both 20-year-old, were employees in the Dec. 3 holdup of a Royal Bank of Canada branch. Two gunmen in that holdup were called "Merry Christmas," and made their getaway.

The fourth man was picked up by uniformed constables who recognized him from a pickup order placed by detectives. He was identified in a line-up in connection with the Dec. 1 holdup of the downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal in which a lone bandit netted $1,500.

Attacker May Be Man Wanted For Two Killings

TORONTO (CP)—Police said today they are investigating the possibility the man who dragged a 17-year-old girl into a laneway Thursday night is the person wanted for strangling the women this fall.

Det. Sgt. Salaheka told police a man grabbed her by the throat and took her into the laneway. She said the assailant was frightened off when a passer-by shouted.

Police said the girl has marks on her throat. They said they appeared to have been caused by rope or wire.

Detectives still are seeking the man responsible for the two deaths.

The man who strangled Mrs. Olga Zacharko, 29, in October is believed to be the same person.

Nicholas Bielak, 17, was charged on Mrs. Marta Ounapuu, 33, but the charge was laid only when a light was flicked on in a nearby garage.

All victims were attacked and dragged into laneways, police said.

VIEWERS ON THE ALERT

LONDON (Reuters) — Pretty Mary Malcolm, BBC television announcer, lost an earring during a program Thursday night but didn't realize it until viewers telephoned the studio. Next time she appeared on the screen she announced that she had found the earring on the floor, and expressed her thanks to watchful fans.

Falling Waters Uncover First Known Fatality of Flood

DUBLIN (AP) — Thousands of homeless moved back into their damaged and mud-covered houses today after flood waters receded in living memory receded during the night.

The falling waters uncovered the first known fatality of the flood. Rescuers workers found the body of a 70-year-old woman drowned in her bed in a lower-floor room.

At Limerick, the city stricken northern city area was a weird sight. Boats still were used in some rescue work lay stranded alongside abandoned cars.

Streets that were rivers at midnight dried out at dawn. Lord Mayor Alfred Byrne announced: "The peak point of fear is overcome."

Right across the British Isles light winds and a wintry sun took the place of the raging gales that battered Western Europe for two weeks almost without stop.

The storm took a toll in British county. Guildford, in southern England, had its first floods in 50 years after the Wey river broke bounds. Water, snow and landslides blocked many roads in 40 counties.

Britain's two biggest rivers, the Severn and Thames, were both above flood level and still rising as the storm moved north into Scotland's hillsides.

Meanwhile 1,000 Dubliners spent Thursday night in emergency rest centres set up in schools and hostels. Others moved in with relatives or spent the night huddled in upstairs rooms.

The city council's emergency committee scheduled meetings between city and transport chiefs aimed at getting the stricken city back to normal quickly.

Pope Spends Better Night, Improvement Is Progressive

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Pius "slept better last night than he did the night before," when his sleep was described as restless, a Vatican source said today.

Thursday four physicians examined the ailing 78-year-old pontiff and reported in a medical bulletin that his state of health has "improved perceptibly and progressively in the last few days."

After hearing morning mass said for him by his personal secretary, the Pope took some liquid and semi-solid food for breakfast.

His doctors, however, pronounced him still too weak to undergo a thorough x-ray examination of his stomach to detect cause of the gastric illness which endangered his life last week.

Their personal physician, Dr. Ricardo Galeazzi-Lisi, said that for the time being their course of treatment will continue in trying to increase the Pope's feeding and to build up his strength.

It was evident in the Vatican that the Pope's condition for the Pope is lessening, although he still is seriously ill.

Opposes Easing Of British Divorce Laws

LONDON (Reuters) — Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury, today opposed the easing of British divorce laws and said the Church of England believes a single act of adultery should no longer be considered sufficient justification for a divorce. He said any reconsideration of the laws "would prove" revision of present British law which makes one adulterous act grounds for divorce.

The proper response to an act of adultery, the archbishop said, is forgiveness on one side and repentance on the other. His comments were made for purposes of questions submitted by a special committee examining existing laws on questions of marriage and divorce, and are published today in a church moral welfare booklet.

Believe Teacher In North Ontario Murder Victim

DALTON, Ont. (CP) — Steve Klapouschek, 21, school teacher at this north Ontario village, identified a flagstop between Chapleau and White River in Northern Ontario, as believed to be the murdered police said today.

He is believed to have been shot while he stood at his blackboard.

Investigation began last Saturday when a friend went to visit the teacher's home. A search of a room in the back of the school, where Klapouschek lived, revealed that Klapouschek was not there to greet him, entered the school and found the bullet-riddled and dried blood.

Police said they want to question a man who lived in a local lumber company two months ago. He was recently seen boarding a train at Balkow, eight miles east of here.

'Flying Saucer' Work Continues At Avro's Plant

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Avro Canada Ltd. has reported it will continue its research into the "flying saucer" project which Production Minister Howe said recently the federal government decided to abandon.

The newspaper says scientists at the Avro plant at nearby Malton are seeking to establish the aircraft's practicability as a weapon of war. It adds:

"If the research continues, if on a somewhat more modest scale. The Avro company has reached the point where it can say precisely it has not reassigned the key engineers working on the project.

The operation to develop such an aircraft was called Project Y by the government—who from the depths of girlish bewilderment wrote a letter 37 years ago to the editor of the old New York Sun.

"Please tell me," she pleaded, "is there a Santa Claus?"

Again this year, as for several generations now, editors, among others, will search for words to reassure young children in the spirit of Christmas. And again they will turn to the words that young Virginia said a long half century ago.

"He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist. . . ."

Again this year, as for half a century, the charming woman who has devoted her life to children emerges briefly into the Christmas glow.

"This may sound unusual," she says, "but my wish for us all this Christmas is that Christmases of the future will be as happy as the past, that this new talk of war means nothing, and that peace will be something we all know."

Canada Approves Pact With Germany

PARIS (Reuters)—The influential foreign affairs committee of the French National Assembly today recommended by a single-vote majority ratification of the Paris agreements granting West Germany for Western defence.

The committee approved agreement to give West Germany sovereignty by a larger margin—16 to 15. The France-German agreement for a European status for the disputed border territory of the Saar was approved by 24 to 14.

The one-vote majority in favor of German rearmament indicates that Prime Minister Mendes-France will be faced with considerable opposition when the National Assembly opens the ratification debate Dec. 20.

But political quarters here still believe that when it comes to the crucial vote on Dec. 22 or 24 there will be a majority for Germany's entry into the European defence system. This majority is, however, expected to be a slim one.

RESERVES JUDGMENT

Germany's Upper House West Germany Bundesrat (upper house of parliament) decided today to reserve judgment on the French-German agreement on the Saar until the West German government has obtained more "clarification" of its terms.

The Bundesrat decided by a large majority not to raise any objections to the Paris treaties giving West Germany membership in NATO and in the Western European Union, allowing foreign powers the right to station troops in West Germany. The body also decided to move minor amendments to a bill ratifying the grant of sovereignty to West Germany.

Dynamite Blast Injures 45 In Quebec Suburb

STE. FOY, Que. (CP)—A dynamite explosion rocked this Quebec suburb Thursday causing $50,000 damage. The blast were heard for miles from their frames and shattered windows within a mile radius.

No one was killed, but 15 persons required hospital treatment and 30 more received aid at the scene. Eight men escaped when one spotted the fuse, struck a blazing match and warned his buddies. They got away before the shack went up.

The owners—a company building a sewage system in the suburb—could not be reached when a stove exploded.

WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: The centre of low pressure, which brought rain and snow to most of Ontario Thursday has moved off the coast this morning. A few snowflurries are still expected today. As a high pressure area moves over the province many parts of Ontario, especially in southern Ontario, will experience sharp frosts tonight but no prolonged cold spell is expected in southern Ontario.

Powerful Long-Lasting Protection Given by Salk Vaccine Is Report

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP)—Dr. Jonas E. Salk of Pittsburgh today reported new evidence that his polio vaccine can create powerful, long-lasting protection against polio.

And he hinted that knowledge being learned in the polio work may show the way some day for vaccines giving long-term protection against the common cold and influenza.

Salk polio vaccine is made out of killed polio virus—killed for safety. Salk said he finds no reason to think a vaccine made out of the real virus, altered for safety, would be better.

The Salk vaccine was given to hundreds of thousands of American children in a great test last summer. A scientific jury will announce about April 1 whether the vaccine was found actually to have prevented polio in children who got the shots.

Describing human blood studies, Salk said the first shot of vaccine did create a significant amount of antibodies which may last for a year. A second shot, usually given from four to seven months later, brings the antibodies up to a high level.

Salk said he is working on a theory that a dead virus vaccine could produce a protection that might surpass that from the real virus, altered for safety, would be better.

The Salk vaccine was given to hundreds of thousands of American children in a great test last summer. A scientific jury will announce about April 1 whether the vaccine was found actually to have prevented polio in children who got the shots.

From Yuletide Niche Beside Santa, Virginia Wishes for Peace on Earth

It is a wish for peace, and it echoes the wish of a gentle old lady of 65 who occupies a Yuletide niche as secure as Santa's himself. The lady's name is Virginia. Virginia O'Hanlon Douglas, mother of a Manhattan housewife who from the depths of girlish bewilderment wrote a letter 37 years ago to the editor of the old New York Sun.

"Please tell me," she pleaded, "is there a Santa Claus?"

Again this year, as for several

Dominion Drama Festival Enters Thirteenth Year

As the Eastern Ontario Festival at the Belleville Collegiate auditorium, commencing Tuesday, February 15-19.

Since its inception, the Dominion Drama Festival has been honored in having each succeeding Governor-General of Canada as its patron. The present patron of the D.D.F. is the Right Honorable Vincent Massey.

Quoting from the D.D.F. aims and objects of the D.D.F. are "To encourage dramatic art in Canada by the holding of a Dominion Drama Festival and such regional or other subsidiary festivals as may be deemed advisable, and by the granting of prizes and awards for distinctive efforts in any of the arts relating to drama including the writing of plays, their presentation, mounting costuming and lighting."

The Board of Governors incorporated by Royal Charter in 1935 includes in its members all the Provinces of Canada.

Coming to the rescue of the Drama Festival in 1952, Calvert Distillers accepted the invitation of the Board of Trustees to sponsor the festival for a two-year period. Calvert contributed $15,000 in cash which includes 13 regional awards of $100 each and the final festival award of $1,000. In addition to this the company will present the Calvert Festival final trophy and 13 regional trophies.

Canada is divided into 13 regions each holding an annual festival with an outstanding personality in the dramatic arts chosen to adjudicate the various regions in turn. There are three regions in the Province of Ontario, two in Quebec and one in each of the other provinces.

Eight of the best plays from Canada's thirteen regional festivals compete in the festival finals to be held this year in Regina, Each year the Drama Festival finals are moved to another large Canadian centre.

The adjudicator must be bilingual so that he may judge French and English plays with equal authority. This year's regional adjudicator is Andre Vanasse, British Drama Festival; and lecturer, who had judged many British Drama Festivals.

Suspend Sentence Of Man Convicted Of Lumber Theft

BANCROFT — After studying medical evidence and considering the near tragic conditions existing at the home of a man accused of stealing $100 and coats worth at $1,050, Magistrate R. C. Jackson imposed two years' suspended sentence on John Rogers, of Cox Hill.

On further charges of obstructing a police officer in the execution of his duty and driving a car with inadequate brakes penalties of one year's suspended sentence and $10 and costs were awarded. Pleas of guilty to all three charges were entered by counsel J. D. O'Flynn who appeared for accused.

OPP Constable Ray Hookey told the court that he investigated complaints made by John Clark, of Whitby, that timber had been stolen from his property. On Nov. 21, whilst on his way to the man accused he found Monaghan driving an old car without brakes. He put the car into a garage and drove Monaghan and his brother to their home.

TRAGIC CONDITION

Replying to a question by acting Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson, the officer said that he had lived with his mother and brother. The mother is a deaf mute and the brother is blind. When Hookey attempted his arrest, Monaghan, assisted by his brother resisted and, unable to cope with the two men, the constable left the house. He returned later, accompanied by Cpl. A. Grayling and Constables W. Perry and L. Bury. The officers were required to hold the blind brother while the others escorted accused to the cruiser.

Evidence was given that Monaghan had on one occasion to be bulldozed into the Clark property and had driven the front of the stolen timber in Madoc and Gilmour. A doctor's report stated that accused is mentally incapacity of an 8 or 9-year-old child. Defendant told the court that a sister and other members of the family had undertaken to be responsible for Monaghan in the future.

CHARGE DISMISSED

A charge of careless driving brought against Dean Laundry, of Bancroft, was dismissed by Magistrate C. J. Axford after the evidence day's court.

Crown witness A. Weise, of Bancroft, told the court that he was driving north around the 7 p.m. on highway 62 approaching a curve just south of the village he noticed another car on the left side of the road. He had almost completed the curve when his vehicle was struck by a car driven by Laundry.

Replying to defending counsel R. W. Cass, accused said he was driving about 40 miles per hour, about 40 mph. The car ahead slowed down and he passed on the pass, when the collision occurred. He did not see any signal light on the other car.

Mr. Weise, in a reply to the magistrate, said that he had checked his lights about an hour before the accident when they were working correctly. He had not noticed the working of the dash indicator at the time of the collision. When the vehicles were examined the glass in the left hand tail-lamp was found to be broken and the lamp would not light.

Special Services for Indigent Patients from County Cost Hospital $11,000 Above Fees

Belleville General Hospital during the first ten months of this year has lost over $11,000 in providing of special services for indigent patients from the County Hastings.

This was stated Thursday afternoon by members of the Hospital Board when they appeared before County Council with a request for a $11,000 grant to the special services costs for county indigents.

The original request for the grant was made during the summer session of council but no action was taken and a special committee was appointed to go into the matter with hospital officials.

Thursday morning Reeve Harry Morrow, of Sidney township, gave the report of the committee, stating that the county could not legally be compelled to pay more than the per diem rate for county indigents but he asked what of the moral responsibility. He said the committee was told the hospital had lost $15,000 in 1953, providing certain patients for the county indigents but his committee was not prepared to make a recommendation until hospital official had addressed council.

MIGHT HAVE MOTION

Reeve T. C. Graham noted the special committee was not suggesting that the county pay the $15,000 or any part of it, but possibly later would have a recommendation.

"It is a serious thing and we want to be fair to the hospital, but we also want to be fair to the county," he said.

Hospital Chairman Hospital Board chairman Jack Yanover, with finance committee chairman Frank Downie and Administrator Kenneth Box appeared before council and answered questions concerning hospital operations.

Mr. Yanover noted that the city of Belleville had been paying the special services costs for city indigents. During the first ten months of this year this cost to Belleville had been $8,340.

In the same period the county had paid $11,818.80 in per diem rates but the hospital had written off $11,389.27 in the special services provided for county indigents.

A question from Warden Fred Mitchell it was noted that the operational cost per patient day at Belleville hospital was lower than in most other centres. The cost per patient day at Belleville is $13.57, as compared with $13.07 at Trenton; $12.58 at Kingston and $17.12 at Peterborough.

BUDGET FOR DEFICIT

Mr. Donovan stressed that the hospital budget for next year had been cut as much as possible that a deficit of $7,200 had been budgeted for. However, the budget had been figured on a minimum income for the institution but as the building program for the new wing progressing items might be interruptions, which would result in loss of income.

A motion for county council to consider under ways and means the matter of a grant to the hospital was passed and the matter was scheduled for discussion on Friday.

County Grant Requested For Community Centre

A community centre created from a small beginning one year ago is filling a big spot in the social requirements of North Hastings residents in the Maynooth area.

Among its varied other uses the centre is being used on Saturday nights as a place where children may be left under supervision while parents from the district do their family shopping. Games and other entertainment are provided for the kiddies, while their parents are shopping.

Reeve Thomas Scott, of Herschel and Monteagle townships, was one of the prime movers in getting the centre under way, and he has been assisted by Reeve William J. Davis of McClure, Wicklow and Bangor townships.

The centre proper is an old school building, 40 by 60 feet, which was purchased and renovated for use as a hall, open air skating rink and a rink house for skaters to change, has been added.

The week's program at the centre includes shows once a week for the kiddies, card parties and dances with Saturday nights reserved for the organized baby sitting program, $4,000 SPENT

Thus far over $4,000 has been spent on the project, all the money being raised through private contributions or from dances and card parties held in the centre. Also hundreds of hours of free labor went into the project as has been recorded by Reeve Scott to get the work carried out.

This morning at county council Reeve Davis asked for a county grant of $500 to assist in further paying for the community centre project.

"It is a worthwhile project that is really filled a big need in our community," he assured.

Later the committee in charge of the community centre will apply for the government grant of 25 per cent, which is given for the assistance of such projects.

The application for council for a grant was referred to ways and means.

3 Men, Woman In Hospital After Quarrel

BRANTFORD (CP) — Police said three men and a woman were taken to hospital here late Thursday after a quarrel on a farm near Burford resulted in the three men suffering bullet wounds in the leg, while the woman was struck over the head.

The injured are: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Paterak, John Pierowski and Leslie Bocci. The first three are share - croppers on Bocci's farm.

A neighboring farmer, Ludwik Urbanik, told provincial police he believes the quarrel started when the three share-croppers went to Bocci, wanting some hay for their cows. Police said their investigation of the trouble was hampered because all four involved speak little English.

Federal Govt. Rejects Request Of Civil Servants

The Boxing Day holiday was requested by the civil service, Boxing Day, Dec. 26, this year falls on a Sunday.

"It is my advice that it (a Monday holiday) is not a general practice in industry," Prime Minister St. Laurent said Wednesday night after a cabinet meeting.

A civil service commission official explained later it is not the practice to give civil servants an extra day off when Boxing Day falls on a normal off-day such as Saturday or Sunday. Usually there is a holiday when Dec. 26 falls on a regular working day.

Paratroopers Make Jump In Far North

FORT CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) More than 300 paratroopers dropped Thursday to a snow-blanketed lake on the sub-arctic Tundra 20 miles east of this Hudson bay base, climax of the joint military exercise Bull Dog II.

Five jumpers were injured, none severely—three strained backs and two leg sprains—as members of the Royal Canadian Regiment of London, Ont., and the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery of Camp Shilo, Man., as well as supporting medical and signal units, streamed from six RCAF C-119 packets.

The troops gathered up equipment dropped during the first run over the south end of Norton lake, and moved off to recapture a weather and radar station, 12 miles east, taken by an "enemy" force of 80 members of the Royal 22nd Regiment of Quebec City last Friday. Final recapture, under a brilliant moon, completed the exercise.

The jump was originally scheduled to take place last Saturday but adverse weather conditions, raging from fog, strong winds, blizzards and a chinook, forced seven postponements.

INVESTING IN CANADA

How much of Canada do Canadians own?

All of it? Don't be silly. Canadians have not owned all of Canada since Jacques Cartier first brought foreign capital into the country.

There are heartening signs, though, that some time in the future we may once more approach that condition of home ownership which is found in only very primitive or very prosperous countries.

In the very nature of things, foreign investment is essential whenever the first steps are taken to develop the natural resources of a new land.

There is still much to be done before Canadians are using even a major portion of the riches with which this land has been endowed. But today the development of these resources no longer depends primarily on foreign capital.

In an address at Hollywood, Florida, the other day, the Canadian Ambassador to the United States, Arnold Heeney, quoted some highly interesting figures.

"Last year," he said, "Canadians saved more than 8 per cent of their disposable personal income; and total national savings amounted to approximately 20 per cent of the gross national product. As a result, we have been able to finance from domestic sources some 75 per cent of the net and gross capital formation in Canada—only the remaining 25 per cent being financed directly from non-resident sources."

What are these non-resident sources? Principally, the United States. The volume of the flow of money from south of the border is remarkable, Mr. Heeney said. "United States investment in Canada increased by more than three and a half billion dollars from the end of 1945 to the end of 1953. That year alone it increased by more than six hundred millions to reach a total of eight thousand six hundred millions."

From 1946 to 1953, Mr. Heeny said, 307 United States firms set up Canadian branches or companies. After a reversal of the trend in 1953, the first quarter of 1954 saw United States buying of Canadian stocks and shares again rising sharply and the demand is continuing strong. Buying ed partially by the operation of United States investment trusts."

It is pleasant to realize that our neighbors to the south, and, indeed, the world at large, are expressing their confidence in our future in the most impressive manner possible, by investing their money in that future.

At the same time, it is pleasing to be able to say that Canadians themselves are financing the major portion of our present impressive program of expansion. Nor is the fact, already quoted, that we ourselves have been able to finance 75 per cent of the net and gross capital formation in Canada the whole encouraging story.

"At the same time, of course, Canadians have been investing abroad," pointed out Mr. Heeney. "It may perhaps come as something of a surprise to you to learn that, per capita, Canadian investment in the United States is much greater than United States investment in Canada. In 1953 United States per capita long term investment in Canada amounted to $52; Canadian per capita long term investment in the United States amounted to $133. If account is taken of all Canadian investment abroad, it is accurate to say that Canadian sources of saving in the post-war period were large enough to finance all but 4 per cent of the net capital formation in Canada and all but 9 per cent of the gross capital formation."

It is well that Canadians should have a financial stake in the economic development of other countries besides their own. It is good to be a creditor nation. It would be encouraging, too, to see Canadians themselves increasing an ever increasing portion of the money required to develop the natural resources of their own country—and to note a continuing trend to process a greater percentage of raw materials at home instead of shipping them elsewhere for transformation into manufactured articles.

FAILURE IS GOOD NEWS

One of the most interesting developments of the cold war is the failure of units of the Canadian Army to carry out manoeuvres at Camp Shilo, Manitoba. That the Canadian Army should fail to carry out any mission is interesting enough as a novelty but the failure at La Perouse Bay is of more compelling concern than novelty.

For several days troops of the Royal Canadian Regiment of London, Ont., and the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery of Camp Shilo, Manitoba, have been thwarted in their efforts to penetrate to a well-staked out area of tundra because of the weather.

Regulations forbid parachute jumping when wind velocity exceeds 15 miles per hour. Seven times in four days the jump was postponed because wind velocity was from 15 to 40 miles per hour. When wind conditions were favorable fog shrouded the jumping area which was only 30 miles from the airfield and the troop carrier transports were stationed. Temperatures ranging to 22 degrees below zero froze auxiliary power units used to start the engines of the jump craft.

All-in-all weather threw the most potent punches in "the battle of La Perouse Bay." And it is still early December.

If Canadians, 30 miles from northern radar and weather stations, find it impossible to assault these stations by air under the most favorable operational conditions, then it would seem extremely unlikely that any invader could effectively attack Arctic defence installations. It also seems unlikely that, in the winter at least, any foreign power would attempt an invasion of North America through the Arctic.

RICHES

Riches come and riches go.
Some folks lend them,
Some for vanity and show
Promptly spend them.

Some, against all other gains,
Seem to choose them,
And in spite of all their pains
Some folks lose them.

Some there are who hold them fast
When they receive them,
Keep them, only at the last
To die and leave them.

Riches! Few there are on earth
Who would refuse them,
But to know their only worth
Is well to use them.

Rival to Paradise

(Pan American Airways Release)

The story goes that Mohammed the prophet refused to visit Damascus for fear it would spoil him for Paradise. Viewing its lush greenery from afar, Mohammed compared this now 3,000-year-old oasis to the Garden of Eden.

Those who follow Islamet to Damascus in the fall and winter will appreciate the comparison. The heat of the summer sun abates in October, days are warm and sunny, the air fragrant with the odor of tropical vegetation. Mild winds from the Mediterranean rustle the palms and orange groves along the Barada River. Over everything hangs the sultry scent of the East, stirring memories of Scheherazade as she sang to the doring sultan and his lavish court.

Minarets and turrets in Damascus resemble little city that has so often been a Hollywood backdrop for films dripping with intrigue. Here the romance the East and modern West is part of every street scene. Veiled women in flowing robes cool their feet in irrigation ditches during highways smooth as table tops.

Visitors can view antiquity dating from Biblical times through the windows of big, luxurious Arab buses. There are at least four first-class hostelries, two of them brand new, and prices range from $6 to $9 for a night in a room and full board. Fashionable restaurants offer a variety of Oriental and Western dishes, and a full menu of several courses, topped off with strong, black coffee, seldom runs over $2.

Syrian cuisine is lively. The favorite drink is "arag", a colorless liquid distilled from dates which, when diluted, is a pleasant, milky white. This beverage sells for about 10 cents a glass but is well to remember that the color and ferocity of "arag" are responsible for its nickname — "milk of the tiger."

Big attraction in Damascus is the Great Mosque with its vast halls and Byzantine domains. Its gun as a pagan temple, the Mosque was converted into a Christian cathedral by Theodosius in the fourth century. The present oasis is the tomb of John the Baptist. Nearby is the tomb of Saladin, the great leader of Saladin, Saracen conqueror of the Christian Crusaders.

Outside, Damascus is rich in ancient traces in Damascus as Islam. Among the Roman ruins still remain are: the "Street Called Straight" mentioned in the Bible; St. Paul's House from which the Apostle was lowered in a basket to escape the Roman soldiers, and Ananias' House, the first meeting place of Christians in Syria.

Aside from its religious aspects, Damascus is a modern and forever a city full of the color and sound and mystery of the Arabian Nights. On feast days the native Dancing Dervishes; their eyes closed and their arms outstretched like wings, whirl round and round to the eerie chant of oriental music.

Another place to visit in Damascus the atmosphere of the Arabian Nights lingers on, within Azzem Palace, a museum of Oriental palaces, built in the 18th century by Turkish governors. Here are the exotic harem with its plush divans, mosaic floors, delicate baths of marble and porcelain.

Nowhere are the sights and sounds of the city more vivid than in the bazaars, long, vault-like streets, lined with little shops. Stalls glitter with copper, brass, inlaid ivory and gold brocade. The smell of fruits and flowers inlaid with mother-of-pearl are at least one-third less than in the United States and Canada.

He Was Crazy, Not Stupid

(Atlanta Constitution)

A man drove into a filling station to have a tire repaired. Later he had driven away and gone a short piece down the road, he noticed a man lying in the ditch by the shoulder to investigate. He found that the station attendant had failed to replace the lugs and that the wheel was about to come off.

On one side of the road was a high wire fence which enclosed an insane asylum. On the other side was vacant land and no sign of habitation.

As the motorist contemplated his predicament, a patient escaped through the asylum fence, "why don't you take one lug from each of the other wheels and be on your way?"

The motorist first looked surprised, then relieved, then a little chagrined.

"Don't feel bad about it," said the fellow across the fence, "I'm in here because I'm crazy, not stupid!"

Tin Woodman Born Too Soon

(Chicago Daily News.)

The Tin Woodman who wandered around the Land of Oz seeking a heart for himself was created a generation too soon.

With such techniques developing, an an electric heart that will keep a human pump going for life on love ought to be coming along any minute.

We may even look forward to the long heralded cast-iron stomach, which would be a great boon to hard drinkers and observers of the Congressional scene.

Kodak Firm's Sharing Plan

(St. Catharines Standard)

The fact that the Eastman-Kodak Company of Rochester, N.Y., shares its earnings with the employees is undoubtedly responsible in large measure for the firm's increased earnings, and as a result the workers will share a record bonus in March.

The directors of the company have voted a wage dividend for employees estimated at $25,000,000 payable next March to about 53,000 employees in the United States. Of the total more than $20,000,000 or more than 70 per cent, will go to the 36,000 Kodak employees in Rochester.

The wage dividend was started by Kodak 42 years ago and includes all employees. Kodak employee becomes eligible for a wage dividend of one-half of one per cent of his earnings in the preceding five calendar years for each 30 cents by which cash dividends on the common stock exceed 70 cents. For each 20 cents by which cash dividends on the common stock exceed $1.80 an employee becomes eligible to receive one-tenth of one percent of his earnings in the preceding five calendar years. And they do not wait five years before receiv- ployees.

Research Good Investment

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

Never have we discovered a better example of the fact that research pays off in dollars and cents than in a short item included in a release from the Corn Belt Farm Institute.

Since 1888 one midwestern agricultural experiment station has spent a total of $13,853,000 in funds which came from state, federal and other sources.

Almost $14,000,000 seems like a powerful lot of money to invest in research but consider. We search project alone—the development of improved hog—has resulted in additional income to farmers of that state of $1,250,000,000, It is impossible to imagine a better investment!

ing a dividend. All employees of the company who started work before October 1st, 1951, and who are at work at the end of the year, will receive a dividend. And those who started work after October 1st this year and before Jan. 1, 1955, will receive their dividend if they are still working on the date payment is made.

And that is the manner in which one American company shares the good will of its em-

Personal Health Talks

THERE IS ALWAYS DOPE

Dr. Brady

Few if any of you young'uns will remember, but I remember with a good deal of bitterness the picture of the charlatan who appointed heavenward telling prospective customers "There is no pain!"

It was just an example of the shameful exploitation of popular credulity by quacks and nostrum vendors under the encouragement and protection of the federal government back in the days when Topsy was a colt and we were practically starving in Penn Yan.

Moreover the suggestion may be propagated millions of Yankee Wiseacres now believe that aspirin is a cure-all, a good remedy for countless acute and chronic, minor and major illnesses. Furthermore, in their childish innocence these sophomoronic things believe it is harmless in any circumstances.

Two years ago the St. Louis Health commissioner, alarmed by the deaths of three infants aged 2½ to 6 months from aspirin poisoning, warned parents that aspirin is a dangerous drug for the very young and should never be given to them except under medical supervision.

If a physician attending the patient prescribes aspirin, that's medical supervision. If a physician who learns by telephone from Mrs. Nuisance that little Johnny got his feet wet or ran out without his overcoat that raw cold day last week and has a temperature of 101, advises Mrs. W. to keep the child well under the covers, and give him aspirin — that, in my opinion, is malpractice, not from the legal viewpoint perhaps, but it is certainly not fale to little Johnny.

Before I mention the untoward effects of aspirin let me say here again that aspirin (acetylsalicylic acid) is the least dangerous analgesic (pain-killer) I know—notice I don't call it safe, but just less dangerous than any popular pain-killers such as c etanilid (phenylacetamide), phenacetin (acetophenetidin), antipyrin, antipyrin, etc. In an emergency I would use tablets of five or ten grains of aspirin to relieve severe neuralgic ache or pain, provided I could obtain an M.D. for an hour after the dose.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Christmas coming up, it is time we gave a few thoughts carving, a good time to buy carving sets.

The first item I that fine steel blade, the longer the better one available. During and after the war steel was so scarce, and public had been accustomed to hanging and using poor steel knives that it took the manufacturers some time to get over the bad habit of handing out second-rate goods. Indeed, there is a new generation of young men, married and settled down since the war, who don't know what a good carving knife is. A carving set has the habit of lasting ten or twenty years or more. And that means that many a post-war carving outfit, good looking but light gardening or maybe prying the lids off pickles, is still bedridding after a few years' use. Sometimes, when I go by these new homes with the children, my hands of young wartime brides and grooms are seeking happiness, I feel an overwhelming desire to become a tinker, and call at their back doors and ask to see their carving knives. With one whisk of the blade over the steel I would carry in my shabby old bip pocket, I would tell whether the knife sang a good time to be should sing to the sharpening steel. It should not sound dead, as a brass rule, or cheap steel. Maybe instead of a tinker, I ought to be a peddler of good knives!

The next rule of carving has to do with platters. Never overload the carver. If there is anything more paralyzing, whilst standing over the platter, I don't know what it is. Never overload, of course, if only out of reverence for the food that is to be eaten or twelve and sixteen pairs of eyes glued on you. And here's wishing all tinkers pairs of eyes for Christmas dinner! It is time to be invisible at least. Draw.

The second to last rule about carving is to get a pair of those twenty-five cent white gardening gloves, and wear them to carve.

The last rule is one for the last rule; and that is to go at the bird without fear. Grab him by the drumstick! Yoo off the wing. Lay that keen blade along the crisp breast. Draw.

Nobody is watching. It's your bird.

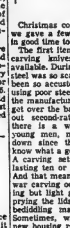
THE SMALL TOWN

Small towns have always interested me for I was born in one—a very small one. Later on the largest town in which I lived was Belleville with a population of 12,000. Most of them were under 2,000. Most of my life from youth, however, has been spent in the large cities—Chicago and New York.

I shall never forget my youthful days in the small town. Everyone was a friend and neighbor. We all knew the intimate family affairs of every man with the big star prominently displayed on his breast, the town's druggist, clothier, undertaker, and High School principal. In most of the small towns there was a volunteer fire department to act in emergencies, and there were usually either three or four churches. My father was a minister in one of them.



The small town was a good one for growing boy a great deal of latitude. He knew the town's population and doctors as extremely important men, as they were. I rode our little pony, and drove her on many a mission in a little red gig. In the autumn, with other boys, I went to the country to gather nuts—walnuts, butter nuts, hickory nuts, and hazel nuts.

I used to do things just a little different—and in a bigger way than most boys. One of the biggest kite ever flown in our town, and performed on the tallest stilts! I learned all of leather in the harness shop, where two brothers lived who loved to make things and work with tools.

The small town's contribution to the Nation is a very important one. From all those small communities, there come many of the greatest of our men and women. President Eisenhower came from a small Kansas town, and he is proud of it. The late Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn, came from small Tennessee and Texas town. Never can the small town short! William Allen White became famous as a small town newspaperman, publishing a newspaper that he made famous. He also wrote two of the best books on the small town ever written—"The Court of Boyville" and "In our Town."

WILL THE CHURCH SURVIVE?

A church leader was talking some time ago with a Christian Chinese refugee. "Will the church ever rise again in China?" asked he.

The Chinese Christian answered very quickly, "Of course the church will rise again. In fact it will never be destroyed, for we have the promise that the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. Most of our church buildings have been torn down. In one city the communists took down a church, built by one of the early Christians. Then after a moment's reflection he continued: "But they will begin in Phoebe's kitchen, in the back room of some man's home, in the cellar of some big home. Groups of people will meet in the fields. Christianity has its roots underground, but the church does not merely go out of existence. It will be present closer together. Its spiritual potential will rise. The power of the Spirit will come to supplement the weakness of the flesh." "The church's one foundation' has not been destroyed and will not be destroyed."

Marmora Twp. Reeve Claims Farmers Losing Money By Marketing Over-Weight Hogs

Hastings county councillors turned their attention to agricultural problems Thursday morning as the reports of their agricultural committee, county weed inspector, and the county agricultural representative were heard.

Reeve Irwin McCoy of Marmora township reported on the activities of the county agricultural committee and later stressed the importance of farmers not over-finishing their market hogs. He claimed that farmers were losing money by marketing over-weight hogs.

Reporting on the recent hog producers' meeting in Toronto, Mr. McCoy noted that educating farmers to market the proper bacon type hogs was one of the goals items on their program. A hog weighing not more than 195 to 200 pounds was preferred to the heavier type. He said if the over-finishing of hogs was eliminated the percentage of grade-A hogs would be up to at least 90 per cent.

Pork surpluses could be largely overcome by reducing the weight of market hogs by about 10 per cent.

Both Reeve T. C. Graham and Agricultural representative A. O. Dalrymple concurred with Reeve McCoy, the former noting that over-weight hogs was one of the big packing house problems. Lighter finished hogs would in the end benefit the farmer, he said.

Mr. Dalrymple also agreed that bacon type hogs were much preferred to the heavier type but said the problem was to educate farmers to this fact. He thought that greater premiums paid for bacon type hogs might be the answer.

FARMERS FORTUNATE

Continuing his report Reeve McCoy noted that county farmers had been fortunate in the weather conditions as compared with other parts of the province, where grain in some sections was still standing in the stook in the field.

Growers of clover seed had been hit by bad weather with result that in some instance 50 per cent of the seed had been lost.

He noted that American buyers were not purchasing clover seed in Ontario but farmers were advised not to be in a hurry to sell their supplies as there was a definite shortage. It was possible that Ontario grown clover seed would be sold back to Ontario in the spring at a considerable increase in price.

Reeve McCoy referred to cheese and butter surpluses piling up and also to the fact that the Canadian farm income had dropped this year.

"The $300,000,000 drop in farm income this year is not exactly chaff in the pocket," he said.

Agricultural Representative A. O. Dalrymple in his report referred to the constant increase in the volume of office work in connection with his department, in 1953 a total of 3,835 letters were received at his office at Stirling and 3,070 letters were written in addition to 23,564 circular letters being mailed out.

Staff cars driven by himself and Allen Francis, assistant agricultural representative, roll up an imposing mileage each year, in connection with office duties. Close to 60,000 miles were clocked by their two cars last year as Mr. Dalrymple himself attended 117 meetings and Mr. Francis attended 148 meetings in addition to regular office duties.

OFFICE WORK DOUBLED

In each instance office work had doubled and in some cases more than trebled since 1951.

Mr. Dalrymple noted there had been a continued change from dairy to beef cattle in the county, this being due to the fact that the number of older men, who normally would continue with dairy herds, have been unable to secure suitable farm labor. These men feel it is easier to keep beef cattle than continue with dairy herds.

This is reflected in the fact that in 1947 there were 54 cheese factories in the county, while this year there were less than half that number operating.

He noted, however, that to the end of September this county had produced 2,785,302 pounds of butter as compared with 2,690,744 for the same nine-month period last year. In the same period 2,926,578 pounds of cheese had been produced compared with 2,944,227 for the same period last year.

Mr. Dalrymple stated there were two dairy herd improvement associations operating in the county while during the past year the brucellosis control act was passed and enforced in the townships of Madoc and Tyendinaga. Thurlow township was working on a canvass.

There had been considerable interest in soil and crop improvement, while a number of county farmers had also applied for the farm planning service. Highlight of the crop improvement meetings was the cornland tour held in October.

During the year there was an 11 per cent increase in membership of 4-H Clubs. There were ten clubs, including five calf clubs, two each potato and grain clubs and one swine club with a total membership of 152.

HONORS DID WELL

There were nine 4-H garden clubs for girls.

County honors did well at provincial inter-club competitions and also at the Ottawa Winter Fair where 22 club members were represented. Highlight of the Ottawa winnings was that the swine club section, where the Hastings club won the Kiwanis Club trophy for the best pair of gilts. The club members were: Grant Ketcheson, Harold Harris, Kenneth Sager and Douglas Rollins.

Rural community night schools at Bancroft and Madoc are receiving wide rural interest with close to 250 now attending the courses at Madoc. The Ontario Department of Agriculture is bringing instructors from Kemptville each Wednesday evening to instruct in motor mechanics and in electrical wiring.

Harry Coulter, county weed inspector, noted that 204 miles of county road had been sprayed on one side at a cost of about $11.90 per mile. Chemicals used cost $1,408.95 with use of spray units and labor costing another $1093.

Reeve James Spracklett was interested in whether spray could be used to kill roadside brush. He was told this was possible, although spraying for three consecutive years was necessary to make a thorough kill. Councillors were told that wild carrot and certain other obnoxious weeds had not yet gained much foothold in the county although boundary areas to the east were infected.

Bancroft Man Is Acquitted

LINDSAY (CP)—Everette Vader of Bancroft Thursday was acquitted of a charge of dangerous driving in connection with an accident which took three lives at Easter last Labor Day.

Police said a truck driven by Vader and loaded with two tons of feed, crashed through a bridge over the Dorset river. Passengers Gary Evans, 18, and Haskell Sweet, 62, both of Bancroft, were drowned. Mary Grace Moore, 16, of the Toronto suburb of New Toronto, who had been walking on the bridge sidewalk, suffered fatal injuries.

Vader said his brakes failed.

Youth Thrown From Toboggan, Fractures Leg

TRENTON (Special) — Tommy Robertson, 12, son of Mrs. Helena Robertson, Metcalfe street, Trenton, suffered a fractured leg three inches above the ankle on Tuesday night in a winter accident on Mount Pelion.

The youth with a party of young people was riding down the mountain when their toboggan went out of control and crashed into a tree. His chums conveyed their injured friends home on the toboggan.

Dr. J. V. Byrne is treating the lad who is resting comfortably in the Trenton Memorial Hospital.

PARTY IS PLANNED

Christmas in Trenton would not be Christmas without Jim Uttley's annual party with all proceeds in aid of the local Salvation Army branch.

This year the night for singing Christmas carols in the Country Club has been set for Friday, December 17. Genial host and song leader Uttley has many surprises in store for the expected large crowds.

Climax to the usual elaborate program is the appearance of Santa Claus at Midnight. Many prizes are distributed among the revelers.

The festivities wind up by dancers taking over until the small hours on the following morning.

KINSMEN CLUB DISBANDS

The Trenton Kinsmen Club has disbanded after 11 years of service in the town and surrounding district. The club was founded in 1943 and once boasted 30 members. A spokesman for the organization said that membership reached the point where it was impossible for the club to carry on with accepted projects.

Section of Foxboro-Madoc Road as Development Project Will Be Started Next Spring

Preliminary surveys preparatory to the re-building of the initial section of the Foxboro-Madoc road as a development road project by the Ontario Department of Highways have now been completed, members of the Hastings County Council were told Thursday afternoon by Roads and Bridges Committee chairman Reeve Elmer Wood, of Huntingdon township.

Reading the roads and bridges report, Reeve Wood noted that the initial field work by a Toronto firm of surveyors had recently been completed and it is expected that during the winter tenders will be called to have the actual work started by contract next spring.

HIGHWAYS STANDARDS

Following many years of representations to the highways department to have the Madoc road taken over as a highway, last summer the department agreed to re-build the artery to highway standards as a road development program. It is understood that two-and-a-half miles south of Madoc and a small section through the village of Hallowry will be the first to be constructed. Survey on the latter section was done by J. T. Ransom, of Belleville.

The road report also indicated that the Frankford-Foxboro road, currently being rebuilt as a development road project, has now been almost completed with the exception of about half-a-mile across the Longwell farm two miles west of Foxboro.

This road has been rebuilt in three sections, with one section being done each year for the past three years. The work was done by county forces with the highways department paying for the actual construction.

SEE ROADS RESURFACED

Reeve Wood noted that considerable resurfacing work had been done during the year. Construction work included the elimination of a sharp turn in a steep hill on the McFaul property north of Marmora. In Madoc township a sharp right angle turns were eliminated with the building of a reverse curve, and also two sharp knolls were cut down near Hazard's Corners.

Paving had been done on Forsythe street in Marmora at a cost of slightly over $5,000.

Slightly over 21 miles of surface treating was done, the longest stretch of road being the six miles from Stirling to Hoard's. Cost of the surface treatment will be about $23,000.

No new bridge construction or major repairs were undertaken during the year but three county bridges were cleaned and replinished during the summer.

SAND SPREADER HELPFUL

A switch to the use of salt instead of calcium chloride to prevent winter slick piles from freezing was reported. The new special type sand spreader purchased primarily for use on the Madoc road had proven very satisfactory. The county has four complete snow plowing units.

Negotiations are currently underway with the C.N.R. board of transport with respect to easing the approach grades at the Foxboro crossing.

The various reeves of municipalities in which county road work was done this year expressed their appreciation to the road committee with Reeve Lloyd Price noting that the small jobs such as cutting down hills and eliminating curves made roads much safer to drive and as much of this work should be done as possible.

Reeve Bernard Hunt of Huntingdon asked the roads and bridge committee to keep in mind the building of the Marlbank road as a development road. He said this matter should be kept in the mind of provincial members of parliament. He also asked more prompt service in the sanding of the bad hill on the Tweed-Delphiske road, where many accidents occurred during slippery weather.

Reeve Charles Bunkard asked that the county take into consideration the road approach to Deloro where a bad dip made it impossible to see approaching cars.

Reeve Victor Rughson of Wollaston asked that the application of oil to the Coe Hill road leading to highway 62 be considered by the county.

Grants of $15 each to the Women's Institutes of East, West and North Hastings were recommended, as were grants of $100 each to the North and Central Hastings school associations. All grants were referred to ways and means.

Energetic Club Holds Annual Christmas Party

On Wednesday evening the Energetic Club of Holloway St. United Church held its annual Christmas family dinner and concert. The tables and Sunday School hall were beautifully decorated for the gala occasion, and a sumptuous turkey dinner was served to the club members and their families.

President Lloyd Townsend thanked the ladies of Centenary W.A. for their excellent meal in serving. An amusing film was shown, "Santa and the Snow Queen."

With Maitland Duff acting as chairman, nearly—all the children took part in the concert that followed with recitations, musical selections and tap dancing. A tableau of girls in white, with lighted candles, called "Light Eternal," was a beautiful number on the program.

Christmas carols were sung by the group and while singing "Santa Claus is Coming to Town" the old whiskered fellow appeared and sleigh bells and a hearty welcome was apparent on all the faces of the children. He distributed girls and bags of candy to the 67 children present and so brought to a conclusion a most enjoyable evening for all.

Keen Age Club Elects Officers

The Keen Age Club of Tabernacle United Church held its regular meeting in the form of a turkey dinner with all the trimmings.

The president, Kit Cornish, brought the meeting under way with a vote of thanks to Eileen Pogue and Jo Douglas and their committee for the fine dinner served. She also thanked all girls who helped her so willingly throughout her year of office.

The president turned the meeting over to Rev. Ray A. Rowley for installation of the officers for 1955, which are as follows:

Britain's Womenfolk Shared In Most Prosperous Year Since Second World War

TORONTO (CP)—Biggest problem for eight women members of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra is to find black dresses, subdued but still attractive, for public concerts.

"Dresses can't be decorated with jewelry and must not be strapless," said violinist Stephanie Chymyk. "So that narrows the field considerably right away."

But dress is a secondary consideration for these players, who enjoy the public concerts that follow intensive work and exhausting rehearsals.

Violinist Pat Adams, who was born in Kerrobert, Sask., started study at five and at 17 was the first violinist to get her licentiate by the Royal School of Music in London.

SPURNS MODERN ART

Lady Nye enjoys painting child portraits, she said in an interview. She is not a modern art enthusiast. "It's not that so much that I don't like it as that I don't understand it," she said.

A tall woman with brown hair and brown eyes, who favors tweed suits and oxfords for informal wear, Lady Nye was born 49 years ago in India. She left at the age of 18 and returned eight years ago when her husband was appointed governor of Madras.

While there, Lady Nye was active in social welfare work, setting up clinics and child welfare services for the Indian population.

Lady Nye's duties as wife of the British high commissioner have ranged from opening a Toronto office building—her husband had a fractured vertebra and couldn't officiate—to entertaining distinguished visitors such as Queen Mother Elizabeth and Sir Winston Churchill.

Lady Nye has two daughters, Sheila, 23, is working in London and Harriet, 9, is in Ottawa.

'Behavior Disorders In Children' Topic At St. Michael's P.T.A.

A meeting of St. Michael's Parents-Teachers' Association was held on Monday evening with Mr. Paul Cleary presiding.

Mrs. G. O'Brien read letters of thanks from Belinda, Bobbie Rollins, and Rose Marie Hawkins, for the misnia and scholarship which they had received.

It was decided to give the school children a Christmas treat as has been the custom in previous years.

Mr. Cleary suggested that study groups be formed.

GUEST SPEAKER

The guest speaker for the evening, Dr. Edith Peterkin, pediatrician, introduced by Mr. Carl Casey, gave a most interesting and enlightening talk on "Behavior Disorders in Children".

Mrs. Canty's room won the plaque for the most parents present.

The meeting closed with refreshments.

Plastic Used In Designing Skaters' Dresses

MONTREAL (CP) — A skater's costume trimmed with 30,000 sequins may be attractive and a perfect fit, but one of the most important considerations involved is weight.

Celine Faur, costume designer for the travelling "Ice Capades" show, said in an interview here, "I sometimes feel I am as much a research scientist as I am a designer."

"In one production number this year," Miss Faur said, "there are as many as 30,000 sequins for each costume. But it is surprising how little some of these costumes weigh."

Miss Faur said plastic is used a great deal in the designing of skater's outfits.

For this season's show, Miss Faur was required to design a costume to display 3,000 dollar-sized mirrors.

"Of course they couldn't be glass," she said. "So we selected a light plastic. The material itself, which requires 34 yards of material for each skater, is a silver lurex fabric."

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IT'S EASY TO STOP THIS, IF YOU REALLY WANT TO

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been quite a little while, I have been going out with a fellow and we have planned on marriage when we are older. He is almost 19 and I am 17.

Until just recently, we have been happy, but now a problem has come up. This is that a young man who is a friend of the family has begun to take an interest in me, and is forever trying to attract my attention. He drives me home after school and also phones me at home quite a bit. My parents do not know it is he who phones so much, and I can't tell them, because he is married.

I am just about at my wits' end to know how I can avoid him. I've tried making all sorts of excuses, but he never seems to take the hint. Also, I've begun to find myself liking him, and I'm afraid of what this might do to my boy friend and myself. I don't want to spoil our happiness, but I certainly don't want the other fellow's home to be broken.

Please give me any advice you can, and I will follow it as carefully as possible.—L.M.

Dear C.M.:

You sound to me as though you were getting quite a kick out of this situation, and, also, as though you felt very grown-up and sophisticated to have a married man pursuing you. Just in case you do feel this way, I might tell you that it's neither grown-up nor sophisticated to let yourself get involved in such a situation. It's extremely adolescent, like hazardous. For no honorable man with a wife, at home would chase a teenage girl.

If you want to show this fellow that you know your way around, you will stop trying to make him "take a hint," sit down right out and tell him to let you alone. This sort of thing calls for direct action, not subtle.

I'm sure you know very well yourself that you have no business letting anything like this run on. You don't have to accept rides home from school in his car, you know, and you can always hang up when you'd be in the other end of the telephone.

If you really want to, you can put an end to this nonsense in no time at all.

HER BOY FRIEND "ACTS FUNNY" TOWARD HER

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a troubled teen-ager, because there is a boy I like very much who acts very funny towards me.

Usually he brings me home from meetings or parties, but the other night when my girl friend asked if he was going to take me home, he said No. She told him I wanted him to, and he said it was just too bad. Then, when I was on my way home, he came along and walked me home. I can't understand why he did that when he had first said he wouldn't. I hope you know.

Another thing is that his sister told my girl friend that he just hated me. I told him about this, and he said he'd have to see his sister about it.

What makes him act like that, because when we're together he acts as though he likes me, and what should I do? — C.C.

Dear C.C.:

While I can hardly claim to be a mind reader, my guess would be that the reason your boy friend walked you home and saying he wouldn't was because he felt sorry he had been so rude and unkind, and wanted to make up for it. Perhaps he wasn't feeling up to par that night, or had something else on and so was in more of a hurry than usual. But the fact that he thought better of having refused to go with you shows that he didn't want you to feel hurt, which shows he is a nice thoughtful boy, I'd say.

If he really did tell his sister he "just hated" you, do you think you have done anything that might have annoyed him—like chasing him, for instance? Perhaps you may have acted a little possessive toward him, or seemed to expect more attention from him than he really wanted to give you, and he didn't like it.

I think it would be a very good idea if you went out with other boys, too, and didn't give this boy any reason to feel that you considered him your one and only boy friend. Don't you think this would be sensible?

MARSH HILL W.M.S.

MARSH HILL — Marsh Hill W.M.S. Auxiliary met Tuesday afternoon for the December meeting at the home of Mrs. Frank Finkle, and Mrs. Leslie Finkle, with ten members, two visitors and two Baby Band members present.

The president, Mrs. Leslie Finkle, opened the meeting with the singing of the Christmas carol, "Silent Night, Holy Night," followed by prayer.

Business period was conducted. The president thanked all members who had helped with the quiltings. A letter was read by Mrs. David Hollinger, supply secretary, thanking the W.M.S. for money to send the parcel for overseas relief.

A letter was also read from Mrs. R. G. Coulter, Belleville, stating that the missionary study prayer for the year 1955 was Miss Lillian J. Brown, B.A., at Hat Peples, India, and the allocation is the same as before.

The members had sent cards, three letters and made sight calls and six hospital visits during the past month.

The members also turned in their mite boxes, Christmas stockings at this meeting and the birthday box was opened and the receipts from all were most gratifying.

Mrs. G. Bartindale read "The Shepherd's Story." Mrs. Fred Campbell gave some facts concerning "Temperance," and as group leader was in charge of the Christmas program and opened with a Christmas reading, "Remember the Good and Forget the Bad."

Mrs. Harry Coulter read "Emptiness and Sham in Christmas Today." Mrs. Farley Lindenfield read "Ready for Christmas."

Mrs. Campbell was assisted in the candle-lighting service by Mrs. Alvin Finkle, representing India and Mrs. Harry Finkle representing Canada.

The Christian worship service from the Missionary Monthly was followed with Mrs. David Hollinger, Mrs. Alex. Tanner, Mrs. G. Bartindale and Mrs. Frank Finkle giving the prayers.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Allyn Finkle.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

THE IDEA: TO YOU-TWO FROM US—TWO

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have a special problem about signing our Christmas cards. We were married last June, the Christmas cards, and although we are both in our early forties, it is the first time each of us for only about a year before we were married, we each had many friends, and what with being so busy buying and furnishing our new home, we haven't had much opportunity of meeting many of each other's friends. We have bought our Christmas cards, and we are going to sign them ourselves. But one problem:

(1) When Phillip or I send a card to a married couple, is it proper to address it to both the husband and wife, even though we know only one of them? (2) Also, when only one of us knows the couple, should only that one's name be signed to the card? (3) Should we, for instance: Phillip and Mary or Mary and Phillip's Wife Two?

This Christmas the way you sign your cards and the way you address them is particularly important, for you are now stepping for-ward to establish your "Two" social relationships. Also address a card to both husband and wife, even though you know only one. The idea is: To You-Two from Us-Two. (2) Both of your names should be signed to a Christmas card to a married couple, even when only one of you knows the couple. (3) The one signing a card should write, for instance: "Phillip and . . . that's the Rule of Courtesy. So you sign Phillip and Mary . . . and Phillip should sign Mary and Phillip.

DON'T ADDRESS HIM AS "DOCTOR"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please answer this question which arose last evening at our Christmas party? When you speak to a doctor, is it always necessary to add his surname, for example, "Doctor Bryan"? In other words, isn't it all right to address him as "Doctor," as many people do? — E.M.

No matter how many people do it, it just isn't correct or courteous to address a doctor as "Doctor," without his last name. His name should always be added to the title — "Doctor Bryan."

WHAT FORM OF NAME?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have recently been married. When I order an article to be sent to my house-address, what form of name should I give to the salesperson? "Mrs. John Hale" or "Mrs. John Hale"? —Reader

Give your formal name . . . Mrs. John Hale. (Your charge-account in a store should also be in this formal name.)

NO REPLY REQUIRED TO INVITATION TO CHURCH

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I've just received a formal invitation to the church wedding of a friend of mine. I am planning to go to this wedding. It is, I understand, to be a large wedding, but there is to be a small reception, just for the members of the two families and a few relatives and very close friends. (I did not receive an invitation to the reception, didn't expect to.) But I would like to know how I should reply to the invitation to the church? — S.H.

This formal invitation, to the church only, does not require an answer.

Readers' Friday Column

As Conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

Being a constant reader of your most helpful column I have come to the conclusion you must be the happiest and busiest person on God's good earth. I would like to have a recipe for whole wheat bread, also Lemon Squares, which I have heard so much about lately but fail to find a recipe for in my cook-book. . . . I think they have graham wafers in them.—Mrs. W. H.

ANSWER:

If I agree with you about that "happiest and busiest" it may sound smug; if I don't agree I may sound sour. So I'll not certainly not sour!

I've mailed you the recipe for whole wheat bread but I suppose you saw the recipe for three loaves that appeared in Nov. 1.

I have a recipe for Lemon Cuts or Bars, and I have two alternate bottom layers for it.

LEMON CUTS

Bottom Layer No 1—Mix together thoroughly 1-2 cup soft shortening which is half butter, 1-2 cup brown sugar, then mix in 1 cup sifted all purpose flour until all are blended.

Bottom Layer No. 2 — 1 1-2 cups fine sifted graham cracker crumbs, 1-3 cup melted butter, 1-2 cup sugar. Mix all well together.

Using either of the above bottom layers press and flatten with hand to cover bottom of ungreased, 13x9-inch oblong pan. Bake in moderate oven at 350 deg. Fahr. Let it stand a few minutes before spreading with

LEMON TOPPING

Beat well 2 eggs and stir in 1 cup light brown sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Stir in 1 cup each moist shredded coconut and cut up or shredded dates (pitted and cored) or walnuts or pecans. If desired 1-3 cup light sultana raisins or (for special occasions) 1-2 cup mixed glace red and green cherries and fruit peel—candied pineapple may be added. When this is mixed well pour evenly over the prepared bottom layer and return to oven and bake 23 minutes at 350 deg. Fahr. Cool slightly before cutting into bars with sharp knife.

QUESTION:

. . . I certainly find the cream sauce mix excellent. . . . I have a few puzzlers: Just what is the flavor in those honey-dipped yeast donuts the bakers put out? I can make raised donuts but they don't have much flavor and are too elastic. Can you help me on this? Do you have a basic cake mix. Third: How do you make crunchy peanut brittle? It looks as though it were full of tiny bubbles.—Evelyn T.

ANSWER:

I have a friend who is a professional baker. When I want to copy a commercial formula I telephone him and guess at the ingredients. When I'm right he says "yes"; and when wrong "no". The following is very close, to the honey-dipped doughnuts I am familiar with in my home town.

HONEY-DIPPED DOUGHNUTS

One cup lukewarm milk, 1-3 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cake compressed yeast, 1 egg, soft shortening 2 tablespoons, 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg or mace, 3 1-2 to 3 3-4 cups sifted all-purpose flour. Mix together the lukewarm milk, sugar and salt and crumble into them the yeast cake. Stir slowly until yeast is dissolved. Stir in egg and soft shortening. Mix in first with spoon then with hand the flour and spice—adding just enough flour to make a dough easy to handle. Knead dough for 1 minute, let rise covered until doubled. Punch down, let rise again, Roll out to 1-3-inch thickness. Cut with floured 3-inch doughnut cutter. Let rise on floured board until very light uncovered as crust will form. Drop into deep hot fat at 375 deg Fahr. turning over when bottom is deep gold and finish second side. Drain on absorbent paper. Thin a little crystallized honey with hot water until it melts; quickly dip warm doughnuts in, then heat chaped lips. If your powder, in addition to its cosmetic purpose, is expected to perform such acts as a protective agent against strong sunlight and harsh winds that is good budgeting.

Many women waste their toiletries. They apply powder lavishly, then remove the surplus with a powder brush. A better way is to puff on a light film, then add more if necessary.

Only a certain amount of cream will be lapped up by the flesh. Apply it sparingly and friction well. It is the message that counts most because it stimulates the blood streams and normalizes the functions of the glands. Any residue left on the fingers should be worked into the hands, rubbed on your nails and the surrounding cuticle.

Beauty

By HELEN JAMIESON

BEAUTY ON A BUDGET

Cosmetics and perfumes are expensive, but why not? May is the time to stretch the beauty budget and it is well to know how to do it. After all, toiletries are not luxuries these days; they are necessities. How a woman feels depends a lot on how she looks, and the war against Father Time must be continued without lapses or let-ups.

There is not a great deal of difference in the materials used in a moderately-priced cream and one that costs more, but there is a big more expensive product you are paying for costly fragrance and the elegant container that so ornaments your vanity table. You are not paying for the ingredients alone.

In purchasing toiletries, it pays to cut on the essentials. Faces must be kept clean even if nothing else is done for them so use a high grade soap and put cleansing lotion next on the list.

You may find that one preparation will do double duty. If a cream is rich enough to make your skin smooth and soft and also serves as a foundation, no more is needed.

If your lipstick keeps your lips in smooth condition as well as imparting the lure, you have a well-chosen lipstick. If your powder, in addition to its cosmetic purpose, is expected to perform such acts as a protective agent against strong

The Christmas meeting of the Bridge St. United Church Evening Auxiliary was held in the church parlors on Tuesday evening, with Mrs. Kenyon and group serving a delicious supper.

Miss Gertrude Lazier welcomed all the members and guests most graciously and conducted the business part of the meeting.

Familiar Christmas carols were sung by the group.

Miss Ryan Coleman, assisted by Mrs. Fothergill, Mrs. O'Neil, Mrs. Bird, Miss J. Nicholls and Miss G. Lazier were in charge of the worship service.

Miss H. Salman introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Ralph Morden, who gave a most inspiring reading, "The Other Wiseman."

Thousands of Blue, Snow Geese Seen at Moosonee, James Bay

On Monday evening, the members of the Quinte Field Naturalists' club enjoyed hearing a humorous and delightful talk by Mrs. F. W. Wallis, Trent Road.

Last October Mrs. Wallis and her son went on a hunting trip to Moosonee and the James Bay area. They travelled to Cochrane by way of the Northland Express, then to Moosonee by the Blue Goose Special, which runs three days a week in the hunting season and by boat to their camp site.

THOUSANDS OF GEESE

There they saw thousands and thousands of blue and snow geese feeding along the shores of James Bay. The blue and snow geese intermingle but it was necessary to look elsewhere for the Canada geese which keep by themselves. Thousands of these big birds, some weighing as heavy as 12 pounds, were seen also.

Then were hundreds of plover, goldeneye ducks or whistlers, as they are sometimes called, mallards, black ducks and spruce grouse. The latter never breed in the south. They are quite easily snared but make poor eating.

Mrs. Wallis is an expert taxidermist, and had several beautifully mounted specimens of his handiwork— three snow geese; a Canada goose, spruce grouse and a mallard duck.

HURRICANE HAZEL'S EVIDENCE

Evidence of Hurricane Hazel which blew itself out in that area was seen by an exceptionally high tide one day, which remained all day then receded out of sight completely the second day and remained out of sight for two days.

The secretary read a letter confirming the date, January 25, for a lecture by Stuart Thompson, a naturalist of Toronto. This lecture to be held in Queen Victoria school.

The report of the nominating committee was as follows: past president, Miss Lillian Hart; president, H. James; 1st vice-president, Miss L. Burnside; 2nd vice-president, J. Deer; secretary, Miss K. Daly; treasurer, Miss F. Young; pianist, Gordon James; press secretaries, Miss G. Houston and Miss Joy Nicholls; membership convener, Miss G. Tucker; liaison officer for O.F.N., Mr. Quiglay; transportation convener, Miss J. Mackintosh; member of Film Council, H. James.

CORAL WONDERLAND

Refreshments were served.

Presbyterian S.S. Holds Enjoyable Christmas Party

A Christmas party by the Foxboro Presbyterian Sunday school was held on Wednesday night in the Sunday school hall, Mr. McMurray, the minister, acted as chairman. Several Christmas carols were sung by the school and Mr. McMurray gave a few brief remarks. The following pupils took part:

Reading, Brian Skinner; instrumental, Sharon Chappelle; solo, Bobby Skinner; recitation, Paul Sharpe; instrumental, Bobby Skinner; solo, "Rose of Trales", by Mr. McMurray; solo, Christmas carol, Sheila Wardhaugh; recitation, Sharon Chappelle; Mr. McMurray favored with two lovely Irish songs "Rose of Tralee" and "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen"; solo, Miss Barrie; sacred duet by John and David Skinner; solo, Sharon Chappelle.

The second part of the program consisted of pictures, Mr. William Barrie having spent the last year up in Alaska, showed many beautiful pictures, mostly taken from the air flying above the clouds through the different provinces, right through to the Pacific coast, then on to the Arctic also showing how the Eskimos celebrated Christmas last year, and of the customs and habits of the people at the North Pole.

Some of their homes were practically buried in the snow, No trees grow there, owing to the intense cold.

Mrs. Johnston thanked Mr. Barrie on behalf of the Sunday school.

Women's Bureau of Federal Labor Dept. Is New Venture

By PEGGY THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—A women's bureau is a new venture for the federal labor department but the sort of work it will do is as old as women's rights.

The bureau was established last year and Miss Marion Royce, a slim, grey-haired former teacher and social worker, has been named its first director. She also is the bureau staff just now.

Miss Royce is responsible for getting the bureau into operation and deciding what sort of projects it will undertake. She says it's too early to talk much about the bureau's plans but the first step will be a survey of women and employment.

COMPREHENSIVE STUDY

"We should find out what the situation is in Canada regarding wage rates for women, whether they are given equal pay for equal work, and their chances of advancement which can sometimes be an even greater problem for women workers," she said in an interview.

"I am also interested in the economic and social implications of the trend towards married women working outside the home."

Miss Royce, a native of St. Thomas, Ont., has made this sort of survey before. After she left school teaching for social work she went to Washington in 1943 to the world YWCA office. One of her first jobs was to study the effects of the Second World War on the life of women.

The world YWCA office was shifted back to Geneva following the war and Miss Royce, who previously served as educational secretary for the YWCA in Montreal, went with it.

She continued her studies on women's place in the modern world and wrote a number of articles of interest to women on economic and social problems. She represented the world YWCA in dealings with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, particularly the social commission and the commission on the status of women.

AT MOULTON COLLEGE

But Miss Hoyer's desire to keep in touch with Canada drew her home again. She returned in 1952 and spent the last two years as principal of Moulton College, a Toronto girls' school.

A women's bureau was sought for several years by a number of women's organizations in Canada. Labor Minister Gregg outlined the general program when he announced last year that it would be established.

Higher Income, Cupid's Darts Creating Shortage of Nurses

By BOB JOYCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Higher incomes and Cupid's darts are combining to create a growing shortage of nurses in Canada's hospitals.

With money jangling in their pockets as never before, more Canadians are discovering they are sick and can do something about it.

The shift to city living with its small houses and help shortages, greater use of companies of voluntary health plans for employees and better diagnosis are all crowding hospital wards.

And although one girl in every four graduating from high school sets out to be a nurse, casualties are high with marriage the biggest occupational hazard.

HIGH PERCENTAGE

Officials of the Canadian Nurses' Association estimate 50 per cent of nursing graduates are married within a year of graduation. Few continue full-time in the profession long after marriage.

The shortage of nurses varies across the country. In Quebec, the problem is not the same as elsewhere because of the number of hospitals staffed by Roman Catholic nuns.

In rural areas the scarcity is acute, and small country hospitals often find it difficult to get help. Even country girls who enter the profession gravitate to the city in search of more varied training facilities and better scope for advancement. Once city dwellers, they seldom return to the country.

Certain fields, such as psychiatry are particularly badly hit. Frances McQuarrie, CNA education secretary, said in an interview.

HAS 45,000

Canada today has 45,000 registered nurses—36,000 of them members of the association. Ontario tops the list with 21,000. Quebec has little more than 9,000 and British Columbia, 4,243. Newfoundland has only 583 registered nurses.

There are about 15,000 now in training and most can expect to get $200 a month starting pay.

However, officials see little chance of increasing the number of entrants.

"With 35 per cent of high school graduates already enrolling in nursing schools or taking nursing courses at universities, prospects of getting a greater percentage are poor," Miss McQuarrie said.

BETTER USE

"One thing we are studying is whether the existing nursing force, which appears to be growing at a rate of about 1,000 a year, can't be used to better advantage."

She said a recent study by the research division of the department of national health and welfare showed that 40 per cent of work done by head nurses could be delegated to subordinates.

Some hospital authorities estimate that for round-the-clock duty one nurse is required for every two patients and much of her time is taken up with non-medical routine and administration.

Furriers Indulging Women's Craze for Mink Items

By PAULIN KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Furriers are indulging women's craze for mink. Milady now can buy a small mink item—a bodyonizer for suits and dresses—for $4.50.

Women today have gone practical one furrier reported. They get more cape stoles and jackets because they want to wear them 10 months of the year.

CAPE STOLE POPULAR

Stoles range from $395 to $7,965 but the straight variety is not as popular as the cape stole. It has fallen from favor since last year. Women now demand a stole deep enough to hide the elbow.

Mink collars are popular too. They range in price from $18.50 to $22.50 and thousands are being sold to dress up suits and coats.

Neat bear news in furs is that prices this year have dropped 15 to 30 per cent from last year's high level.

Price reductions are reflected in lamb which has made a strong comeback. Charcoal grey lamb coats range from $395 jackets to $965 full length coats. Black lamb has dropped even lower ranging from $225 to $465.

THE FOX SERDO

But high-fashion furs remain high in price. Style leaders this year are fox shrugs worn with suits and plain but expensively-tailored cloth coats. The long, fitted fox coat is still highly regarded although the trend in long coats is to slimmer fashioning with less bulk in the back and sleeves.

The finger-tip coat, a casually styled coat which falls just below the hips, is a perennial favorite, furriers say. It is not costly and right for either evening or casual wear. Such coats are being made up for $255 in muskrat, $495 in grey lamb and from $345 to $365 in sheared raccoon.

What of the imitation fur fabrics which have flooded markets in the last four years? Furriers don't show any fear for their business and say smuggle-furs are still a gal's best friend.

HOW GOALIES MAKE GREAT SAVES

When a goalie makes a sensational save on a hard shot, he's not so surprised. He probably had it tagged all the way! Cool-nerved and sharp-eyed, the agile netminder forces the puck-carrier to make his move first—even leaves an opening to shoot at. Then, in a flash, the goalie closes the opening with his pads or glove. Another sensational save!

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1954

Total of $47,613 Spent By City on Entertainment Since 1952 Toronto Learns

TORONTO (CP) — The "hideaway" room has flared into prominence again with the disclosure that the city of Toronto paid $47,613 for parties, services and official receptions by a downtown hotel in 2½ years.

A tab for that amount was picked up by the city since Jan. 1, 1952, newspaper reporters learned Thursday night.

The city accounts that dealt with the now-famous Suite 1732 at the Royal York Hotel were thrown open to the public. This was despite refusals of Mayor Leslie Saunders and city clerk George Weale to make them available after charges that a city hall clique was ruling from the hotel room. Mr. Saunders was not at the meeting.

SOME ITEMS

Shown in the accounts were such items as:

Tips from 50 cents to $10, $15 and more under the heading of "news stand" and $2.50 for a quart of lemon juice.

Reporters from three Toronto daily newspapers examined the bills for 2½ years. Of the nearly $48,000 spent at the hotel, $11,221 was authorized by Mayor Saunders when he was mayor. This was listed under items labelled "Mayor's account of the mayors' visitors."

Board of control ordered the books opened after a hot-tempered debate during which Mr. Weale and city solicitor F. C. Angus were ordered to appear before board members. The board overrode an edict by Mr. Saunders that the books were to remain closed in connection with charges that Suite 1732 is a hideaway for city officials.

The charges were made by two municipally-minded citizens, Nicholas Philips and Arthur Brown, in campaign statements before Monday's election. Mr. Phillips was elected mayor, displacing Mr. Saunders.

NO BREAKDOWN

A close check of the accounts could not be made of any entry other than under headings such as restaurant, tips, newsstand, special purchases and special entertaining. Mr. Weale said most of these headings referred to "miscellaneous" in connection with the suite. Payments were authorized either by Mr. Lamport or by himself on instructions of the mayor, Mr. Weale said.

Mr. Lamport was not immediately available for comment.

In the 1952-54 years, $65,000 was allocated by city council for civic receptions and entertainment. Mr. Lamport resigned last June 28 to become vice-chairman of the Toronto Transit Commission.

SEVERAL PAYMENTS

In 1952, the city paid the hotel $16,432. In 1953 it paid $17,797 and in 1952, $13,383. The figures include payments for various city functions.

There were several special purchases amounting anywhere from $30 to $180.

Board of control ordered the books opened after Ford Brand, acting as mayor for the holidaying Mr. Saunders, called a special meeting. Mr. Saunders is in Detroit.

It was the first time a public inspection of city accounts was authorized, said Mr. Angus. He has been with the legal department since 1920 and the Municipal Act permits any person to inspect the civic accounts.

Given Five Years

COBOURG (CP)—Two men were each sentenced to penitentiary for five years in jail when they were convicted of the $1,500 armed holdup of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Orono.

The two, Leonard Robert Lemon, 28, of Toronto and James Hutchinson, 27, of Oshawa, were arrested in an Oshawa hotel Oct. 21, a few hours after the bank was held up. Orono is 15 miles east of Oshawa.

Wife Given Estate

HALIFAX (CP)—The will of the late Angus L. Macdonald probated in county court here Thursday showed an estate valued at $103,000 in real estate, personal effects and securities.

COMPLETE EVIDENCE

OTTAWA (CP)—A one-man royal commission studying the agreed charge method of setting railway freight rates completed hearing evidence Thursday after sitting for 35 days in Ottawa and four western cities. Hon. W. F. A. Turgeon, the commissioner, said further hearings until Tuesday to give counsel time to prepare final arguments. This phase of the inquiry is expected to end next Friday.

Canso Causeway Finish Delayed By Swift Current

By DON MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Correspondent

PORT HASTINGS, N. S. (CP)—A strong current swirled through the narrow remaining gap today and delayed expected completion of the rock fill for the Canso causeway.

Earlier, engineers had expected the last load might be dumped this morning. But after several hours of work they said the final line-up of mainland Nova Scotia and the industrial island of Cape Breton might be delayed until this afternoon.

Work on the rock span across the Strait of Canso started 27 months ago. When completed the causeway will have cost an estimated $20,000,000.

MUCH TO BE DONE

Much remains to be done on the $20,000,000 project. A swing bridge will open to permit ships through the strait have yet to be installed and the formal opening for traffic is not expected until next spring.

The causeway will fulfill an urgent transportation need for Cape Breton whose open hearth furnaces and steel mills turn out one quarter of Canada's steel—and whose coal mines employ 11,000 men.

But it wrecks the strait for which the Micmac Indians and early transcontinental French and British fought and which protected their Atlantic coast fishing grounds. Engineers were anybody not from Cape Breton.

Nevertheless, they relish the not-so-long-ago times that Cape Breton transferred secession as a possibility for real or imagined injustices.

SHOWS DISGUST

One excited Scot in the crowd on shore Thursday spat into the dirt at his feet and called he guessed the causeway's completion should finally see "confederation."

Cape Breton Island actually was a separate British colony at one point in her history. Many of the Island's Gaelic-descended inhabitants never lost their sense of independence, even after they were incorporated into Nova Scotia.

Nobel Prizes Are Awarded At Stockholm

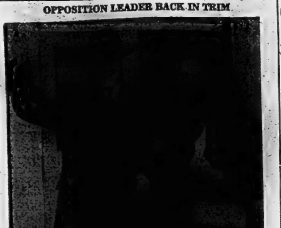
Poor health prevented the 55-year-old American author from leaving his home in Cuba, and King Gustaf Adolf handed the prize of 181,646 Swedish crowns ($35,000) to John Moores Cabot, United States ambassador to Sweden.

Other Nobel prizes were presented in the open assembly hall—Professor Linus Pauling, chemistry, professor John Enders, Frederick Robbins and Thomas Weller, sharing the award for medicine—and Hjalmar Hirger Ekeberg, president of the Nobel Foundation, explained some of the difficulties of deciding a prize-winner — difficulties that divided the Swedish Academy of Literature between Hemingway and Halldor Kilian Laxness, a left-wing Icelandic author.

In a speech upon the presentation ceremony, he pointed out that the Nobel laid down in his will that the prize should go to "the person who in the field of literature had produced the most outstanding work of an ideal tendency."

"During discussions in the Swedish Academy in years gone by the words 'of an ideal tendency' in Nobel's will have been cited as a leading argument against some of the greatest figures in the history of world literature."



Anders Oesterling, president of the academy of literature, told the audience it may be true that Hemingway's earlier writings "display brutality, cynicism and sadism which may be considered at variance with the Nobel prize's requirements for work of an ideal tendency."

"But on the other hand, he also possesses an heroic pathos which forms the basis of respect in his awareness of life, a manly love of danger and adventure with a natural admiration for every individual who fights the good fight in a spirit of resignedness by violence and death."

Canada Not Planning to Pull All Her Troops Out of Korea

VANCOUVER (CP)—Brig. F. A. Clift of Meiford, Sask., on his first return from Korea Thursday that Canada is not planning to pull all her troops out of that war-torn country.

Back in Canada since serving as commander of the 25th Canadian Infantry Brigade in Korea since June, 1954, Brig. Clift said he queried army headquarters at Ottawa after reading newspaper reports indicating that Canadian soldier probably will be out of Korea by spring.

"I can say that I have received word from Ottawa that the report is incorrect," said Brig. Clift, who will shortly take up his new duties as director-general of personnel at army headquarters.

"Canada has no plans for pulling all Canadian troops out of Korea."

(The Canadian Press in a report from Ottawa earlier this week quoted a defence department official as saying: "We expect that all Canadian troops will be out of Korea early next year and that we can clear Korea off our books.")

Asked by The Canadian Press if his statement meant that more Canadian soldiers would be sent to Korea in the future as replacements for those now serving there, Brig. Clift replied:

"It may mean more troops will be going out. I should think that depends on what transpires in the future."

Sheppard Faces Acid Test In Fight for Life in Court

By RELMAN MORIN

CLEVELAND (AP)—Dr. Samuel Sheppard was scheduled to go back to the witness stand today to tell his story of the night of July 4, when the wind howled outside his home and a killer struck within.

It was the climax of his long trial on a charge of murdering his wife, Marilyn Reese Sheppard.

His life could depend on what he said today, how he said it, and the effect of his words on the jury.

Three state's attorneys waited to cross-examine him, to attack his story. The prosecution alleges that Sheppard killed his wife, and that his affairs with other women prompted him to the crime.

He denied everything. It was a prowler, he said, who battered Marilyn to death as she lay in bed that summer night, and the killer, lurking in the dark, struck him down when he tried to save her screaming and rushed into the room.

Moreover, he told a story of love and romance going all the way back to the time when he and Marilyn were high school sweethearts.

Sheppard is a slim, dark-haired osteopath. He will be 31 next December. His hair is beginning to recede above the temples, but he keeps a trim, graceful figure of an athlete.

When he stepped up to the witness stand Thursday, a woman spectator murmured, "He's a doll."

The tiny courtroom was packed tight. Five jurors, some of whom have been heavy-eyed herciofore in the afternoon, leaned forward looking at him intently. A heavy silence filled the room.

Sheppard testified in a high-pitched, slightly nasal voice. He gave every evidence of marital calm.

Once or twice, the shadow of a smile flickered across his face. Once or twice he swallowed and drew a deep breath before answering a question put by his chief defense counsel, William J. Corrigan.

Sheppard seemed eager, anxious to talk. Judge Edward Blythin admonished him against giving "too many of theso details."

Corrigan did not attempt, in the main, to have Sheppard tell his story in sequence, started from the time the doctor met and fell in love with Marilyn Reese, as he told it, and went "Three to 14."

Instead, the lawyer pushed swiftly into areas which the prosecution has emphasized. He asked:

"Did you tell your wife that you had brought Susan Hayes the watch?"

Canadian UN Association Quits World Federation

OTTAWA (CP)—The United Nations Association in Canada, apparently alone in its feeling, has decided that membership in the World Federation of UN Associations is, time largely wasted in useless discussion and has dropped out of the 30-nation organization.

A spokesman for the Canadian association said Thursday it feels the federation has tried to become a duplicate of the UN and spends its time discussing questions and making decisions that only governments can deal with.

The prelence of making international decisions was pointless since the federation has no power to take any action.

IDEA EXCHANGE

The 4,000-member Canadian association, a member of the world federation since its organization in 1945, believes the federation should be a clearing house for exchange of ideas and how the member associations could operate within their own countries. The federation has ceased to do this. Only the Canadian association took the view that federation discussion of political and economic problems was largely a waste of time.

A newsletter from the executive of the Canadian association is to be sent to members explaining them of the decision in a few days.

The spokesman for the Canadian body said the main reason for the withdrawal is insistence by the world federation on spending unanimous decisions, a desire to achieve political unanimity that was unrealistic and led to attempts at extraordinary concessions to the Communist point of view because the federation includes associations from five Communist - controlled countries.

Lake and Peaks Named After Alta. Pioneers

EDMONTON (CP)—The names of 12 Alberta pioneers, including two publishers, have been given to a lake and 11 peaks in the Canadian Rockies.

Edith Gostick, secretary of the geographical board of Alberta, on Thursday the names of the pioneers, all dead, have been approved and in keeping with a policy established for Alberta's jubilee year in 1955.

The eleventh mountain, in Waterton Lakes National Park in southwestern Alberta, was named after the late senator William A. Buchanan, publisher of the Lethbridge Herald, who died last July.

One mountain in the Jasper area was named after Frank Oliver, a lawyer, statesman and journalist who in 1880 founded the former Edmonton Bulletin.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Frank Sinatra and publicity man Jim Byron swapped wild punches early Thursday in the latest Sunset Strip night club fight. Observers called it a draw. Sinatra landed once on Byron's cheek as the press agent countered with a right to Sinatra's nose. There was no bloodshed.

Prosecutor and Ex-Deputy Indicted as Killer of Man Who Crusaded Against Vice

By REX THOMAS

PHENIX CITY, Ala. (AP)—A prosecuting attorney and a former sheriff's deputy who rose to power during the racketeering heyday in Phenix City have been indicted as the killers of the man whose crusade against vice had won the approval of Alabama voters.

Circuit solicitor Arch Ferrell and Albert Fuller, former chief deputy sheriff, are being held without bond on first-degree murder charges for the slaying June 18 of A. E. Patterson, nominated as state attorney-general.

Neither indictment sought to spell out which, of the two men the state contends fired three 38-calibre shots into Patterson's body. Under Alabama law a murderer by accomplice is as fully guilty, and can be put to death in the electric chair.

THIRD INDICTED

A third unidentified defendant was indicted together with Ferrell and Fuller Thursday by the same grand jury which smashed the vice empire that reigned here for many years. The name of the other defendant, and the charge against him, were kept secret because the law provides such disclosure until an arrest is made.

Special trials appear likely for the 37-year-old Ferrell, described by Patterson and his associates as "the brains" of the Phenix City political organization, and Fuller, described as the "strong arm" man.

Acting attorney-general Bernard Sykes said he hopes to start the trials early in January.

IN ALLEY

Patterson's crime-fighting career ended the night of June 18 when a gunman waylaid him in an alley outside his law office. He had won the Democratic nomination for attorney-general in a bitterly contested primary election and his win is equivalent to election in Alabama.

Gamblers, desperate after the self-styled "man against crime" had led a three-man field in the first primary, spent untold thousands of dollars throughout the state in the runoff campaign.

In Birmingham, a grand jury finally accepted a vote manipulation in an effort to count Patterson out of the race. And Patterson had announced only a few hours before his death that he would testify before the Birmingham jury.

Both Ferrell and Fuller also had been indicted during the vice cleanup in Phenix City.

HONORED FOR BRAVERY

Lieut. W. C. Robertson, 31, of Saskatoon and Calgary, has been awarded the Queen's Commendation for Brave Conduct. A parachute instructor at the Joint air training centre at Rivers, Man., he risked his life to save a student whose parachute collapsed during a jump. Lieut. Robertson, previously awarded the Military Cross and the United States Air Medal for gallantry in Korea, descended the falling student and both landed safely on the single-chute. Awards Contract

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario department of highways Thursday awarded the contract for the construction of about 2½ miles of the Toronto-Canada highway from Footes Bay to the Muskoka rivers to Bracebridge Construction Ltd. of Toronto.

The Sturrns tender, for $709,818 was the lowest of 12 received.

Another contract, for construction of a Canadian Pacific Railway overhead bridge near Newcastle, was awarded to Blyth Construction Company of Toronto. The Blyth tender was for $68,375, the lowest of 12 received.

True-Blue Tory, Sir W. Smithers Dies in London

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Sir Waldron Smithers, 74, known as the True-Blue Tory, died Thursday. He had been a Conservative member of Parliament for 30 years.

Sir Waldron held a special place in British parliamentary life. He cried himself the "Only Real Tory." Opponents called him a political dinosaur and the chill terror of the back benches. But there was a grudging affection for him among his severest critics.

A thick-set man with a woebegone expression, the member for Orpington, Kent, habitually wore the same seat in the top row on the Conservative side, a lonely eyrie from which he glowered across at his Labor enemies. When he rose to speak in a high, strangled voice midway between a sob and a shout, the House knew what to expect — another uninhibited blast in his private war against almost all the world.

"There is no difference between socialism and communism — they are all the same thing," he used to say.

He once proposed that the "Red" Dean of Canterbury be publicly hanged.

Farmers Require More Immigrant Help Next Year

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian farmers may require more immigrant farm help next year, but the government believes they will have a difficult time getting it.

H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, Thursday told the annual federal-provincial farm labor conference that demand for farm workers will possibly increase next year. He suggested that a slight increase in farm immigrants may be required.

However, A. H. Brown, deputy labor minister, said selection standards for immigrant farm workers have been raised as a result of conference discussions last year and that this has resulted in a reduction in the immigration flow.

He said there may be increasing difficulty in 1955 in finding adequate supply of suitable immigrants from Europe and that Canadian farmers themselves must place greater emphasis on recruiting labor within Canada.

Judge Calls Jury's Award 'Niggardly'

TORONTO (CP)—Judge Egerton Lovering Thursday criticized as niggardly the award of $500 in damages to a child described as mortured by nightmares since a traffic accident last June 9.

Evidence was that a car driven by John Trockoff hit Richard Page, 8, and tossed him 56 feet. It was thought at first the child might not live.

Besides the award to the child, the jury awarded special damages to the boy's father, Hubert Page, to cover hospital and medical expenses.

Martin Warns U.S.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (CP)—Health Minister Martin Thursday warned against the possibility that trade relations between Canada and the United States might become a "big corporation."

"In our efforts to work out better trading relations with one another we should not do so at the expense of other nations with which of us must trade," he said in a speech before a study conference of the Michigan Farmers Association.

AIR-MINDED PAKISTAN

KARACHI (CP) —Prime Minister Mohammed Ali in a speech at the Karachi Aero Club pointed out the wide separation between East and West Pakistan necessitates greater stress on development of aviation. The two areas of Pakistan are divided by 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

Ostrich Rancher Turned Politician Strong for Racial Segregation

PRETORIA, South Africa (CP)—Johannes G. Strijdom, 61, an ostrich rancher turned politician, brings an uncompromising faith in racial segregation and a fruculent willingness to fight for his ideals to big new post as prime minister of South Africa.

He is expected to battle for all-out segregation and creation of a South African republic with all the unbending determination of his Dutch settler ancestors, who stood off the armed might of the British Empire for almost three years before succumbing to British rule in 1902.

Strijdom's support for an "apartheid" segregation of South Africa's huge non-white population follows the lines laid down by his retired predecessor, Daniel Malan. But Malan's controversial apartheid program was too slow for Strijdom, whose demands for faster, more sweeping legislation earned him the label of an extremist inside Malan's Nationalist party.

Despite Malan's support for another candidate, Strijdom was chosen premier with heavy Nationalist backing.

With that mandate, he now is expected to abandon Malan's tactics of compromise and negotiation and may call for legislation ending the power of constitutional courts to stave off apartheid laws.

Strijdom already has given evidence of the fighting qualities he can bring to bear in support of his ideals.

In Parliament, he frequently lashed out at opponents with fanatical bitterness. But he was also capable of disinheartening opposition with the cold logic of a trained lawyer and with a vast fund of quotations from political writings drawn from an apparently inexhaustible memory.

His aggressive leadership, combed with a willingness to listen to anyone, has won him a strong following in Nationalist party ranks. Some moderate members fear his influence. But youthful members of the party back Strijdom.

A key factor in Strijdom's strength is this consciously - assumed role of intellectual and spiritual heir of the early Boers. He constantly reminds their "Afrikaner" descendants of this national heritage.

He makes all his speeches, inside Parliament and outside, in the Afrikaans dialect and has criticized the neglect of Afrikaans as a language in hotels and on menus. His attractive wife is the daughter of a clergyman of the Dutch Reformed church, which is a guiding influence among Nationalist Afrikaners.

Such die-hard Nationalist sentiments have antagonized many South Africans of British descent, who make up slightly less than half the country's white population. But they have also won him admiring supporters among the Afrikaner majority of the population.

Opponents admit that no one can question Strijdom's utter sincerity and integrity, although many feel his nationalist fervor is too limited a doctrine for South Africa and fear his plans to weaken the country's British Commonwealth ties through making it a republic.

Sunday School Lesson:

Inner Forces That Drive Us

By ROY L. SMITH

Alexander Pope's famous epigram that "the greatest study of mankind is man" remains as one of the most incisive words ever spoken in the field of human relations. No man is ever quite as deeply interested as when he is investigating himself.

The salmon returns to the stream in which it was spawned, the swallows return to Capistrano with checklike regularity, and man instinctively cries out "Oh that I knew where I might find Him."

To ignore man's inner urge to find and know the Creator of the universe, is as unscientific and as unrealistic as to ignore the law of chemical cohesion in the laboratory, or to ignore blood pressure in treating disease.

CERTAIN BASIC INNER URGES

The old proverb that "self-preservation is the first law of nature" may be just a trifle overstated but it represents one of the basic facts of human experience in all ages and among all people. Despite our differences in color, racial heritage, and cultural experience, there are certain common urges which move all men profoundly and alike, and the instinct to save one's own life is but one of them.

Alongside the instinct to survive must be placed the instinct to save others. The tigress fights for her young, the mother bird will lay down her life for her fledglings, but men will die for other men's young.

William Parker, chief of police of Los Angeles, declares that four instinctive urges drive all boys and girls—the desire to achieve, the desire to belong, and the desire to hold something in respect. This latter, being translated into theological terms, means "the instinct to worship." And it appears in every human being in some form, manifesting itself in some holy fashion.

IMAGE OF GOD

It is this outreach of the human spirit—a fact which distinguishes man from all the rest of creation—that the ancient Bible writer described when he said God has made man in His own image.

The child is in no way responsible for the fact that he bears his father's features, or that he reacts to the experiences of life as his mother does. He had no chance to choose his heritage.

Similarly, man had no chance to choose his instincts, and this impulsive groping for "something or someone" outside himself which he calls God, is a manifestation of the divine image in which he was created.

CLIMATE OF THE SOUL

The bird is at home only in the air, and the fish survives only in the stream or the sea. Man, in turn, lives in the realm of the spirit. His highest joys and deepest pains are not those of his body, or even of his mind. The sense of achievement, of worth, are satisfactions no other creature knows, and they are common to all men, even the most inconspicuous. The Apostle Paul once said, "in Him we live and move and have our being" (Acts 17:28—RSV).

It is the function of good religion to chart the ways of the spiritual life, analyze the forces and factors of spiritual success and satisfaction, and lead men into an intelligent understanding of the God within him and outside him.

The Uniform Sunday school lesson for December 12: "Yearning For the Living God." Psalms 42; 84; 103: 25-27.

For any man to ignore guidance in this area of his existence is more serious than if he were indifferent to his physical health. (Copyright 1954 by the Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America.)

MOIRA

40th Anniversary Marked by An 'At Home'

MOIRA — On Sunday afternoon a delightful "At Home" was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Thompson, of Moira, on the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary.

The tea table was attractively appointed with tall, white candles in crystal holders centred with the wedding cake, beautifully decorated with rosebuds and silver leaves.

Tea and dainty refreshments were served to the many relatives, friends and neighbors who called during the afternoon and evening to congratulate the bridegroom and to extend best wishes to the bride of 40 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have 11 children, ten of whom were present: Kenneth, Earl, Elmer, Francis, Melville, of Moira; Milton, Viola (Reid), Ada (Hughes), of Toronto; Douglas, Iva, of Belleville; Dorothy (Armstrong), of Foxboro. Mrs. Hughes (Ada), of Toronto, was unable to be present. There are 13 grandchildren.

They received many messages of congratulations and also many gifts among which were a space-saver, presented from their family; a wool blanket and pillowcases from the brothers and sisters of the bride.

TEA-TIME OPPONENT

BOLTON, England (CP) — C. H. Lucas, chairman of this Lancashire town's libraries committee, described tea as "one of the curses of this country" during a discussion on whether tea should be served at committee meetings. Despite his comment the vote was 4 to 3 in favor of tea.

MANY THANKS . . .

TO THE PEOPLE OF BELLEVILLE FOR THE SUPPORT AND CO-OPERATION GIVEN TO ME ON MONDAY, DEC. 6th.

Willing to Play Anywhere Says Yogi Berra

NEW YORK (AP)—Yogi Berra, still expressing surprise at being named the American League's most valuable player, said today he's willing to play the outfield for the New York Giants in 1955.

"I'll play anywhere they want me," said Yogi, "third base, catcher, outfield. Just say the word. But I wouldn't mind the outfield a bit if this boy Howard comes along."

"This boy Howard" is Elston Howard, regarded as one of the hottest Yankee rookie prospects in years. Normally an outfielder, the young Negro spent his past year at Toronto learning to be a catcher.

"I know Bill (Dickey) will work hard with him," Yogi said. "Bill taught me an awful lot when I came up and he probably can do the same for Howard. The only time I've seen Howard was at spring training last year but I know he's a hard worker."

Berra, the MVP in 1951, is the first repeater for the honor since Ted Williams won in 1946 and 1949. He polled 220 points in the balloting by 24 members of the Baseball Writers Association from the eight American League cities. Larry Doby of Cleveland was a close second with 210 and Bobby Avila of Cleveland was third with 203.

Charges Russians Use Sport As Political Weapon

LONDON (AP)—A leading British tennis official Thursday sharply criticized Russia for what he called its conception of sports as a political and propaganda weapon.

Viscount Templewood, president of the British Lawn Tennis Association, said:

"The Russians evidently regard athletic victories as evidence of their national superiority. We must refuse to accept this conception of sport and maintain our own principle that sport is sport, and neither a department of government nor an instrument of national prestige."

He told the association's annual meeting that if the Russians wish to play in the Wimbledon lawn tennis championships it should be on two conditions.

MUST JOIN

1. They must join the International Lawn Tennis Federation.

2. They must meet the Wimbledon standard of competition.

Lord Templewood's comments came after a recent visit to Wimbledon by Nikolai Orezov, the 1953 singles champion of Russia. Orezov asked if his country would be welcome at the world's biggest tennis tournament.

Lord Templewood told the LTA: "We like to win championships and of course we shall try to win them. But if we do not win them, we shall entirely refuse to regard defeat as a sign of national inferiority. Nor, if we do win them, shall we claim a victory of national importance."

Sanders Named Coach of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry (Red) Sanders of unbeaten UCLA, Pacific coast conference football champions, was named "Coach of the Year" today in the annual poll of the New York World-Telegram and Sun and the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

The former Vanderbilt quarterback, who has coached for 18 years, received 173 first place votes out of 538 ballots cast by members of the American Football Coaches Association.

'Scott Frost' Named Top Two-Year-Old

COLUMBUS, O. (AP) — Scott Frost, winter book favorite for the $100,000 Hambletonian next August, has been named the champion two-year-old colt of 1954, the U.S. Trotting Association said Thursday.

The USTA announced champions in six divisions voted upon in the annual poll of turf writers. They also voted for harness horse of the year, the winner to be announced next week.

Scott Frost, a son of Hoot Mon who won the 1947 Hambletonian, is owned by Sol Camp of Shafter, Calif. The colt rolled up the biggest margin of all, gaining 86 of the 95 votes cast.

Stenographer, owned by Max Hempt of Mechanicsburg, Pa., was voted the best three-year-old trotter and Kimberly Kid, from the Allwood Stables, Far Hills, N.J., was named champion aged trotter.

You can't go ALL-OUT If you feel ALL-IN

These days most people work under pressure, worry more, sleep less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's home living, lowered resistance, overwork, worry—any of these may affect normal kidney action. When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and waste remain in the system. Then backache, disturbed rest, that "tired-out" hungry-headed feeling often follow. Don't wait time to take Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. Then you feel better—sleep better—work better. Ask for Doan's Kidney Pills at any drug counter. 53

Schmeling Says 'Fixed' Story Is Ridiculous

NEW YORK (AP)—Max Schmeling, one-time world heavyweight boxing champion, Thursday again called ridiculous a magazine story that he had won a fixed fight from Harry Thomas in New York Dec. 14, 1937.

The charge was made in Sports Illustrated by Thomas, who also said that James D. Norris, jr., now president of the International Boxing Club, and Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's American manager, had conspired to fix the fight. Thomas listed Norris as his silent manager. His manager of record was Nate Lewis. Both Lewis and Jacobs now are dead.

Schmeling, speaking from his mink farm near Hamburg, Germany, said 'Thomas' charges were ridiculous and "illogical."

"Don't forget that this bout took place in 1937, at a time when nobody in the United States could have been interested to bring me, the German, more into the spotlight than I already was after my knockout of Joe Louis."

Norris, who formed the story "untrue, libelous and absurd," said he had turned the case over to his lawyers.

Branca Goes To Minneapolis

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Giants Thursday signed pitcher Ralph Branca to a Minneapolis contract in the American Association.

"He'll be given every chance to show he's ready for a major league comeback," a Giant spokesman said.

Branca, one-time star of Brooklyn Dodgers, will be 29 next month. He had a 3-3 record at Detroit and 1-0 with New York Yankees in 1954 before being given his outright release at the end of the season.

Allan McFater Makes Comeback

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Allan McFater, young Toronto lightweight who retired from the ring more than a year ago, came back Thursday night with a series of hard left hooks to win a decision from Wesley Lowry of Saginaw, Mich., in the 10-round main bout of a professional boxing card here.

It was the first professional boxing match in London in two years, before a crowd of about 1,000 fans. McFater weighed 143 pounds, Lowry 143.

Cataracts Blank Valleyfield 9-0; Quebec Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

While Shawinigan Falls seems intent on showing how much of a runaway they can make of the Quebec Hockey League, Quebec Aces tag stubbornly along almost unnoticed.

The Cataracts did it again Thursday night, this time shellacking the last-place Valleyfield Braves 9-0. But so did Quebec—they took a 4-3 decision from Chicoutimi Saguenenns and slipped up to sole possession of second place, two points ahead of Montreal Royals. They're still seven points behind Shawinigan Falls, however.

WHITBY TONIGHT!

Wren Blair, sheilleal manager of the Whitby "Wrens," brings his six-victorious hero tonight for a clash with the Mimms, in what should be one of the brawliest bouts of the season. The "Wrens" have had the Indian sign on our side in the last two meetings, winning the first 9-6, which they later had un-yoked, and edging the Beachbomb 8-7 in an overtime battle in the second get-together.

The Whitbyites are breathing down the necks of the Mimms and Clinton Comets with fifteen points and with six teams in puck action tonight the entire standing picture may change by morning. On other fronts Cornwall visits the Peterborough Petes and Clinton Comets tackle the Goodyears in Kingston.

The Goodies are perched precariously atop the loop leader, one point in front of the Cornwall Colts and Art Casterton's crew can forge to a three-point lead with a win and a Cornwall defeat. Clinton can take over sole possession of third slot with a win and a Mimms' defeat, while Whitby will vault into fourth under these circumstances. It looks like a must for the Mimms tonight if they want to stay in the first division.

* * *

A BATTLER!

Roly Sarault, the good looking Ottawa youngster, who regarded the nets for the Mimms last season, and is now doing the same job for the Wembley Lions in the British Hockey League "over 'ome", hasn't lost any of his spunk, it seems.

The other day Roly punched a talkative bloke in the snout during a game and the bonk managed him three quid in court.

The Lions were playing a Scottish team, the Ayr Raiders, when the incident happened. Roly puked the talkative gent with his gloved hand opening a three-quarter inch cut on the cull's face. The cove must have been using some rare old Limehouse invectives for Roly told the bench he had heard some pretty fine abusive language in his ten years of hockey-playing, but "I guess this fellow went a little bit too far."

The funny part of the whole schmozzle is that neither Roly nor the Bobbies knew if the injured man was the guilty party.

QUEER GOINGS-ON

The next time that guy tells you "a bird cannot fly with one wing," take it for what it is worth, but you can give him an argument if you feel so inclined.

Here's a story out of Texas that a hunter shot an airborn teal duck which was discovered to have only one wing. And here's the truth of the matter—as related by Ducks Unlimited manager George Freeman declares he found a tiny teal with only a single wing. The female duck, nothing daunted about being born with only a periodic flipper diminished the airways, was bringing northward in determined fashion when found. It is now an object of interest in a Calgary zoo.

And while on this hunting subject, the boys of the Tweed office of the Department of Lands and Forests came up with a story about a pet deer that, had it lived, would have won the Grand National going away. The story says the deer jumped a twelve-foot fence (without benefit of a pole), and was found later dining from garbage cans in nearby Sharbot Lake. Three local nimrods discovered the deer and immediately developed a yen for venison. Somehow got a gun unaware of the fact that the village gendarme in his unofficial witness. The officer carefully loaded the deer carcass in the trunk of a car and were about to ready the dinner when the heavy hand of the law fell upon them. Later they appeared in court and paid penalties ranging from $10 to $50. Meanwhile the good remains of the Hasbrings County Home for the Aged dined off venison steaks and stews.

Duckhunters hereabouts may think the district environment is a little hard on the constitution, but it is all beer and skittles compared to conditions down in Louisiana. Here's how the United States Wildlife Management describes it:

"To have a two-day hunt on the 65,000-acre Pass-a-Loutre public shooting grounds, Louisianans need rock-ribbed stomachs and $2. This delta area, accessible by plane or boat, is in the initial stages of development.

"The hunters' troubles begin soon after they shell out their $2. The State Fish and Game-Commission ferries them to the shooting headquarters and, once there, provides a bunkhouse, beds, cooking utensils, stoves, fuel and lights.

"To make things even more rugged, each two hunters are allotted one duck boat, paddles, 12 decoys and a single blind. But there's a catch to all this. Shooters must bring their own towels and bedding. What's more, inspirational field and ladies must be left at home."

YOUR FRIDAY SMILER:

The demure young bride, the picture of innocence and charm, moved slowly down the aisle, clinging daintily to the arm of her father. As she reached the platform before the altar, her petite foot brushed a potted flower, upsetting it. She looked at the mess gravely, then, raising her large childlike eyes to the sedate face of the minister, she said, "That's a hell of a place to put a lily."

Sugar Jim Henry, shaken out of the National Hockey League by jumpy nerves, came back to Boston Bruins Thursday night. The 11-game rest was like a million-dollar treatment.

Henry and the Bruins stumped Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 in Boston to take over sole possession of fourth place in the league race and mark Sugar Jim's return to the big time. He was benched several weeks ago to help ease twanging nerves.

Henry was steady as the Bruins grabbed their ninth victory 25 starts of the 1954-55 campaign. He got plenty of support from the unpredictable Bullets Richards and allowed only Nick Mickoski to beat him in the last period.

HABS, WINGS WIN

In two other games Thursday night, the league-leading Montreal Canadiens, vengeful after a 3-3 ticklish at Toronto Wednesday, hung a 2-0 shutout on Toronto Maple Leafs before 14,013 delighted fans at Montreal Forum. And the third-place Red Wings edged New York Rangers 2-1 in Detroit.

Henry, 34-year-old native of Winnipeg, made several good stops to turn back the last-place Hawks. Quick second-period goals by Cal Gardner and Dave Mahon gave him the victory. Mickoski's goal robbed him of his first shutout of the season.

It was the Hawks' 17th defeat this year. They have won only 3 victories and five deadlocks.

Bruins started their game with only three centres. Team captain Milt Schmidt and Fleming Mackell were on the sidelines with injuries. They lost centre Gus Bodnar in the first period when he pulled a leg muscle. Defencemen Hal Laycoe finished up as a pivot man.

ONE INJURY

Leftwinger Dickie Moore and rightwinger Floyd Curry fired the only goals in the backfilling frenzy onto-Montreal' engagement. Canadiens moved into a four-point lead over the second-place Leafs but they were hit with an injury.

Rookie centre Jacques Plante had two throat arteries severed when he was cut by defencemen Larry Cahan's skate in the first period. He was taken to hospital and will be out for at least two weeks.

Moore, 23-year-old 170-pounder plagued with injuries during his brief NHL career, was nursing a pulled shoulder muscle when he snapped a backhander past Toronto netminder Harry Lumley at 6:57 of the first period. That proved good enough to win. Curry made it 2-0 at 13:36 of the second.

It was a big night for Moore. Hodge in the Montreal cage. He stopped 31 shots in racking up his first shutout since he took over for the injured Jacques Plante. He has played 13 games for Canadiens.

11TH VICTORY

Lumley handled 32 Montreal shots as Canadiens waltzed to their 17th victory in 29 starts.

Leftwinger Ted Lindsay broke up the game at Detroit before 8,395 fans when he whipped the puck behind New York goalie Gump Worsley at 18:10 of the third period. It gave the Detroit Red Wings their 15th win in 36 games and moved them to within three points of Leafs.

Marty Pavelich and Alex Delvecchio were the other Detroit goals. Pavelich in the first period and Delvecchio in the second.

Danny Lewicki and Wally Hergesheimer accounted for the Rangers' goals. Lewicki beat goaltender Terry Sawchuk at 8:48 to make it 1-1 for his 18th goal of the year. Hergesheimer tied it 2-2 at 13:52 of the third but that was it for the Broadway Blues. Rangers lost 11th place, two points behind Boston.

PROMOTER DIES

LONDON (AP)—Dan Sullivan, 73, British boxing manager and promoter in the days when the featured bout always was a 20-rounder, died Thursday. Sullivan was connected with British boxing for 50 years and managed such world famous fighters as Len Harvey and Jack Doyle.

Hamilton Cubs Whip Marlies

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Cubs defeated Toronto Marlboros 5-2 Thursday night to move into a fifth-place tie with Galt Black Hawks in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The Cubs' rookie line of Jerry Sullivan, Jim Stanford and Billy Binnie got four of Hamilton's goals, Sterling pacing the attack with a pair. Jim Stanford scored while Cubs were playing a man short. Sullivan netted the other singler while another newcomer, Gary Sharpe, got the other counter for the winners.

Larry Hillman and Jerry Janes tangled in a first-period fight, both drawing major penalties.

Cubs, who have lost twice to the Dukes and tied in a third game, thus took their first victory of the season over York Broda's club.

Art Stevenson's kick to the deadline was the deciding point as Winnipeg Blue Bombers beat Ottawa Rough Riders 8-7 in the Canadian football championship 25 years ago today on a frozen field at Ottawa. Andy Bathgate's interception touchdown was the big scoring play for Winnipeg, while Ottawa's points came on a converted safety by Andy Tommy and a missed placement that went to the deadline.

Swedes Have Outside Chance Of Beating US

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—Gunnar Gunnarsson, diminutive sports magazine executive who captains the Swedish Davis Cup team, conceded today his boys have only an outside chance to upsetting the United States in the inter-zone finals here next week.

"Analyzing the situation coolly I must not forget we are playing two of the five best amateurs in the world," Gallu said today. "We have only a 20-per-cent chance of winning the series and 40-per-cent chance of taking one match."

The Swedes, winner of the European zone championship, probably will play two veteran internationalists, Sven Davidson and Lennart Bergelin, in both the singles and doubles, holding young Stefan Stockenberg, Sweden's champion, as an emergency reserve.

Bill Talbert, non-playing U. S. Davis Cup captain, nominated national champion Vic Seixas and Tony Trabert for both the singles and doubles, when the draw is made Wednesday.

Say Obeck Signed As Larks' G. M.

MONTREAL (CP)—The Garette says today that Vic Obeck, director of athletics at McGill University, is expected to have signed as general manager of the Montreal Alouettes.

The report follows the resignation Thursday of Lew Hayman as managing director of the club.

"While neither Obeck nor the new owners of the Montreal Big Four club could be reached for comment early this morning, a source close to the Alouettes said that Vic has definitely accepted the job," the Gazette says.

Boros Leads Miami Field

An accident last week with a shotgun almost prevented Boros the winner of the U.S. Open in 1952, from competing in the $50,000 tourney at the par 35-35—70 Miami Springs course.

The heavy, discharged prematurely and the recoil caused a deep gash in the left thumb. Boros had the four stitches removed Thursday morning, taped the wound and shot his way into the lead.

Rangy Roger Bannister to Retire, Trades in Track Suit for Scalpel

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Rangy Roger Bannister is trading in track suit for a surgical scalpel—probably for good.

The phenomenal British athlete, described as a Plato of the cinder paths, made his official Thursday night. Regretfully, he said he doesn't think he'll be able to go on taking medicine-and racing as a double dose.

"I don't think I shall be able to continue in international competition," said the first of the four-minute milers. Bannister, who is about to take up a resident appointment at St. Mary's Hospital, in London's Paddington district.

Dr. Bannister made his announcement—"a sad piece of news"—at a sportswriters' dinner in London. He said he had found it "increasingly difficult" to combine the strenuous life of a track star with the even more demanding schedule of a budding surgeon on call at virtually any hour.

CLOSES BOOK

The tall, fair-haired Oxford graduate, who seven years ago was more interested in sports than running, thus quietly closed the book on an athletic career that may not be equalled for a long time. From now on it seems certain, Bannister will be a dedicated life of the young house surgeon at work in the 16 hours a day and leaving the world of spiked shoes open to such great runners as Chris Chataway, Eric and Bannister's close friend, Chris Chataway, a great middle-distance runner.

It was Chataway who acted as pace-setter almost perfectly in that four-minute mile at Oxford in May, 1954—and stepped into the history books.

GIVEN TRIBUTES

Tributes to Bannister's stature as an athlete flowed freely Thursday night as the annual dinner of the British Sportswriters Association.

Philip Noel-Baker, Labor MP who has a special interest in athletics, told how sport reached great heights under the ancient Greeks—and said that Plato was "almost as intellectual" as Bannister, an Oxford man who had plainly indicated that sport is only a sideline to him, compared with the more serious aspects of life.

When Bannister entered Oxford in 1947, his main sporting interest was rowing. Entered a forlorn third string in the annual Oxford-Cambridge mile race that year, he came from last place to win easily, starting on the long road which he led last May to the dream mile and athletics immortality.

Alouettes Lew Hayman Resigns Authority Curtailed, Reason

MONTREAL (CP) — Lew Hayman, the man who built football into a major sport in Montreal, resigned Thursday as managing director of the Big Four Alouettes rather than have the new owners curtail his powers.

Hayman, one of the leading figures in Canadian football since coming to this country from Syracuse University in 1932, announced his resignation after a meeting with Ted Workman, who earlier this week joined veteran sportsman Leo Dandurand in buying control of the team.

"... I would continue only if I could have the same authority and responsibility I have had since I helped to give birth to the club in 1946," Hayman said. "Mr. Workman wants to become an active part of the organization and cannot fully my responsibility and authority."

EXPRESS REGRET

Both Workman and Dandurand expressed regret that Hayman had turned down a new contract.

"We would have liked to have Lew stay on," Workman said, "but we have a few new ideas we want to put into effect and he wanted complete control."

Hayman's contract, along with that of coach Doug (Peahead) Walker, expires Dec. 31. Dandurand said he and Workman hope to retain Walker, however.

"Plans in connection with the reorganization of the club will be announced shortly," Dandurand said. "This will include the formation of a new directorate and a new contract with coach Walker."

Workman said the sort of managing director will disappear.

GENERAL CHANGE

"There will be a general reshuffling of personnel to fill the vacancy," he said.

"I met with Lew twice this week," the wealthy 35-year-old Workman said. "I offered him first a one-year contract and then a two-year contract, but he wanted one for three years."

"The main reason for the resignation, however, was that he wanted a free hand and we weren't prepared to give him that."

Hayman said he has no plans for the future.

"I have sold all my stock in the club except one share. I would have had to have at least one share to retain the managing directorship."

SORRY TO LEAVE

"I am sorry to leave Alouettes. It's like leaving your own baby. But under present conditions I think it best for all concerned. I think the fans will get a better shot at things and that my personal feelings need not be considered."

Hayman coached five Grey Cup teams, a record still unmatched, before retiring from the playing field to the front office at the start of the 1952 season. He won the prized trophy in 1933, 1937 and 1938 with Toronto Argonauts, in 1942 with Toronto RCAF Hurricanes, and in 1949 with the Alouettes.

He never coached a loser in the fall classic. This years' Montreal team, which bowed 36-35 to Edmonton, was the first losing squad he has ever connected with in the Grey Cup game.

BEGAN AT VARSITY

Hayman came to Canada in 1932 on the invitation of Warren Stevens, now director of athletics at the University of Toronto. Hayman served as assistant to Stevens in coaching the Varsity football team until Buck McKenna quit as coach of the Argos in mid-season. Hayman took over.

In 1933 he piloted his team to the Grey Cup and kept the Argos at or near the top of the league for the rest of his long stay with them. In 1941, the team folded up for the war years and Hayman took over as director of physical fitness for the RCAF.

Hayman joined with Dandurand and Eric Gilmour, Toronto mining man, to start the Alouettes in 1946. At that time, interest in Montreal's pro football team—the Hornets—had dwindled badly.

Hayman revived fan support and played on as coach and general manager until 1951, when the team was sold to the Montreal trio of Roy Robertson, Fred Gardiner and Charlie Sinnot. Walker was hired as coach and Hayman became managing director.

Bill McGowan Mask and Padman Dies at 58

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bill McGowan, the most durable umpire in major league history, died Thursday after suffering his second stroke in less than a week.

He was 58.

Griffith recommended McGowan as a referee back in 1925.

Peppery little McGowan retired earlier this year after illness cut short his career. He had been an American League umpire for 30 years and had set a record that will be difficult for anyone to equal.

From the time he joined the American League in 1925, McGowan didn't miss an inning for 16½ years. He umpired 2,451 consecutive games, nearly 400 games more than the playing record achieved by the late Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees.

Eddie LaBaron Quits Stamps; Back to 'Skins'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Eddie LaBaron, 34, one of the slickest T-formation ball handlers in the business, jumped back to Washington Redskins Thursday after a season of playing in Canada.

"I feel fine about coming back," Lebaron said after signing his 1955 contract. "I feel sure I can help the Redskins."

Lebaron quarterbacked Calgary Stampeders of the Western Interprovincial Football Union — whose brand of football, he said, isn't as "tough or rough" as the U.S. style.

"Some of the players are very good," he said, "but most of them are a cut under what you'll find here."

QUIT LAST YEAR

A resident of Lodi, Calif., LaBaron quit the Skins last year after a long feud with Curly Lambeau, then coach of the club. LeBaron and Lambeau had decidedly different ideas about how the game should be played.

While a number of players have completed the circuit of jumping to Canada and back to the National Football League, Lebaron is the biggest name to make the switch.

He was a three-time little all-America at the College of the Pacific, a standout player in the big-league All-Stars victory over Philadelphia Eagles in 1950 and a first-string signal caller for Redskins in 1952 and 1953.

Seven Rinks In Running

SARNIA (CP)—Seven rinks were still in the running for the main event trophy in the Sarnia Curling Club's 26th annual Imperial bonspiel after the completion of two rounds of play.

The defending champion rink from Sarnia, skipped by Jim Lennox, was defeated by Andy Grant's Toronto Royals quarter 10-4 in second-round play.

Finals for the five events will be held Saturday.

A rarity in curling, a perfect eight-rock end was scored by Owen Loveless, Brantford entry, in a first-round match against a Chicago foursome a skipped by Charles Watson. The Loveless rink won 13-4. Other members of the foursome were J. C. Preston, G.M. Clemons and J. H. Malcolm.

Thirty-six rinks are competing in the bonspiel, the out-of-town entries including seven Toronto rinks, one each from Hamilton, Detroit, Brantford, Lindsay, Orillia, London and Chatham; and one each from Oshawa, Kirkland Lake, Woodstock, Galt, Welland, Chicago, Forest, Kitchener and Fergus.

Giant Tug of War Looms Between Professional Tennis Promoters

By WILL GRIMSLEY

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—A giant tug of war between rival professional tennis promoters Jack Kramer and John Brennan was seen shaping up today for the services of many of the game's leading amateurs.

Lacking one dominant figure with gate appeal to carry a new tour both apparently are interested in a plan for a world-wide round robin, which would be a sort of a Harlem Globetrotters of tennis with eight or so playing tournaments in capitals of the world.

Brennan, who is promoting the Frank Sedgman-Pancho Gonzales tour in Australia, apparently tipped his hand when he warned Kramer, coming to Australia with a value of greenbacks to lure top Davis Cup stars of both Australia and the United States.

It developed today that Brennan has been making his own overtures. He communicated with the United States Tony Trabert and set a conference for later this month in Sydney.

...And Lew Head's father, Alan Head, disclosed in Sydney that his son has been offered approximately $25,000 but said the offer didn't come from Kramer.

Head's father said his son would want $60,000 to accept a pro offer.

...Head himself said: "I would have to consider any offer Kramer made but it would have to be solid."

Ken Rosewall, Australia's other young ace, said: "I may not remain an amateur all my life but the decision whether I turn pro would depend whether I am approached and how much I am offered."

Trabert said he would be interested in turning pro only when he felt he had measured up to it. He which was not now, and added: "I am a very good friend and have the utmost respect for Jack Kramer. I would definitely talk with him before making up my mind."

Hoch Trabert said Seixas said they have not been made any offers.

Andrews Scoffs At 2-1 Odds

NEW YORK (AP)—Al Andrews scoffed at the 2-1 odds favoring Vince Martinez and predicted he would break the welterweight contender's victory streak in Madison Square Garden tonight.

The two meet over the 10-round route starting at 10 p.m. EST. The bout will be broadcast (NBC) and telecast (NBC) coast to coast.

"His style is made for me," said the 23-year-old Andrews. "The way to beat Martinez is to keep the pressure on him and throw punches. He likes to lay back and call his shots. I'm not going to give him any time to rest and he's not going to get any punching room if I can help it."

Martinez' long range style of fighting has carried him to 12 straight victories, a 30-3 record, and a No. 7 ranking among the welterweight contenders. The Paterson, N.J., pictures puncher has won seven this year, four by knockouts.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

It bridge seems complicated, you are trying to cope with too many rules. Use simple methods and every your second bid as a responder can be decided without great mental disturbance.

Suppose your first response to an opening suit bid of one is one no-trump. What if opener then bids two in a new suit? It is not a signal that forces you to bid 4spade. So, what will you do?

Culbertson says: Your response warned of weakness; bid two in no-trump with two honor tricks including Q X, J 10, etc, in at least one of opener's suits; otherwise, pass or show preference.

Goren says: With less than eight points you should pass; with eight or nine tricks bid again if partner urges with a strong bid. With more than nine your first response would not be one no-trump.

According to Gordon: Never increase the partnership number if you lack enough tricks. All bids follow T-A-N; with nothing more to say, pass unless a forcing bid is in effect.

In my coming series you will read my second good reason for a second bid. From such explanations you can decide which is best or stick to any rules that matches your nature.

Your south partner opens with a bid of one heart when the 13 card in your own North hand are what you see here:

♠K 9 3
♥8 6 3
♣K 4 3 2

Your first response is one no-trump because you lack a bid-able suit for a takeout; have not adequate support for an assist; have a count of three high cards (no-trump limit).

If opener then bids two spades your second bid is three spades. You have adequate support for an assist. You have a third trick for it in trump. Your one no-trump was not a raise in number.

There is no difference in the result. The difference is only in the way you understand it, or the way you do not.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE

OTTAWA. (CP)—Another spirited few hits into town Tuesday for the coaching job Clem Crowe left open when he resigned as member of Ottawa Rough Riders. He's Lou Zarza, head coach at Wayne University for the last six years, and he's due to confer with the executive of the Big Four football club today.

RINK SLOW UP

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—One of the weirdest things pro ever heard of has happened to big league baseball this winter. When the baseball baffled fraternity probing the vagaries of the baseball mind say quite frankly that they believe the boys have finally set a record for mental commotions which will stand indefinitely.

To state the facts briefly, major league clubs find themselves bound not to start training next spring until March 1. Not weeks later than they began their labors last year. And they hate it! So do the players. No one connected with the game will say that he approves of the mystery measure, much less that he had anything to do with its passage.

The 16 executives, forced to postpone lucrative exhibition schedules for a week, claim the rule was forced down their throats by the players. The latter, through their official representatives, swear they didn't do any such thing. They say the sooner they can start getting free bed and board and $25 per week spending money, the better.

PROPOSED LAST SUMMER

As best we have been able to piece them together, the events leading up to this situation went something like this:

When their players' representatives of the various clubs met during last summer's all-star game in Cleveland, one or more of them did propose that training not start before March 1. It is also said that these players (whoever they were) were acting on the theory "cheaper" clubs that wished to cut down their training expenses and save perhaps $50,000.

The proposal somehow was brought before the two majority meeting here last September and, apparently in a huff, they adopted it. Perhaps unfortunately, a way of the game's head men still are not too happy about the players' organization. Both Ellis Reynolds and Ralph Kiner, official spokesmen for the players, have denied they pressed the measure upon the owners.

PLAYERS GET CONCERNED

As the time approached for the joint league meeting here this week, word went around that the players, having awakened belatedly to the fact they were going to have to spend their own money for an extra week or 10 days, were going to try hard to have the rule rescinded. Some owners, too, realized they had acted hastily and hoped the situation could yet be saved.

But the majority didn't feel that way. The players' request to forget all about the March 1 deadline was voted down resoundingly, and Commissioner Ford Frick announced that the edict would be "rigidly enforced." In other words, no preliminary reporting for batterymen, no cheating at all.

It would have been impossible, we are told, to have dropped the rule at this late date. New exhibition schedules have long since been drawn up and approved, putting off openers until around March 12, and to try to change them now would bring chaos.

TOUGH ON OLDSTERS

"It's going to be tough on everybody," said a National League official. "It means that the older players, the pitchers especially, are not going to be able to take things easy and get themselves into shape gradually the way they did before. They're going to have to pitch in. It's got some of our fellows worried. They would like to know who did it to them."

One thing is certain, our informant says: It won't ever happen again. The rule will be quietly disposed of after next season.

NO TAX

'The Halls of Ivy' Goes Against Trend in TV Comedy

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can a gentle, literate comedy succeed on television?

Ronald Colman is gambling a year of his time and $1,000,000 that it can. He and his lovely wife, Benita Hume, are starring in a filmed series based on their radio show, "The Halls of Ivy."

Ronnie, the Colman name is getting paid for their efforts. But the profit on the first run of a TV series is minor compared to what can be made when the films are re-broadcast. That's where the gamble lies. A show has to prove a draw on its first showing in order to get a second run on video.

"The Halls of Ivy" goes against the trend in TV comedy. There are no hurried plots, splashing seltzer bottles or beefy pratfalls. The Colmans have no educated human beings, still managing to get into humorous situations. The show has to fight for its audience with three of the broadest of comics — Milton Berle, Martin Kaye and Bob Hope.

ELIMINATES CANNED LAUGHS

"But our sponsors seem to feel that there are a number of viewers who would like less raucous entertainment," said Colman during a brief rest between scenes. "They are the ones we are aiming at."

The greying English-born actor, as handsome as ever, admitted he had been contending to make the show even gentler than it had been on radio, which concerns the academic life of a college president and his actress wife. First used canned laughter.

"I didn't feel it was necessary, but the advertising agency insisted on the laugh track," Colman said. "Finally I got them to shoot out the laughs, and I feel the show was better that way."

LITERARY LIFE

Except for his radio show, Colman had been leading a fairly leisurely life in recent years. He has made only one picture since he won the Academy Award for "A Double Life," in 1947. That was an unsuccessful comedy, "Champagne Charlie," in 1950. Such an absence seems like a waste of talent to Hollywood, but Colman has himself seems unconcerned.

"They didn't seem to make the kind of pictures I used to do," he remarked, referring to such memorable films as "Lost Horizon" and "I Were King" and "Random Harvest."

Whatever leisure Colman enjoyed is gone now. He and Benita are on a rugged schedule. They spend about 10 days here, preparing and filming two shows. Then they get three days off at their Santa Barbara home. But part of that time is spent in preparing scripts for future shows.

CAMPBELLFORD

All Sitting Council Members Are Returned

CAMPBELLFORD — Polling in Campbellford on Monday was comparatively light since there was no contest for the two top positions in Council. The contest for Deputy-reeve attracted interest as F. M. Rutherford, councillor for several terms, defeated the sitting deputy-reeve, George H. Free by a comfortable margin.

The other sitting members were returned. Councillors Tatham, Nicholls, Linton and Vice, seeking re-election, were all successful, along with other old campaigners and former members, Peter H. Macmillan and William H. Nicholas. Mr. Macmillan headed the polls.

The 1955 Council for Campbellford will consist of: Mayor, Ralph J. Locke; Reeve, D. R. Mayhew; Deputy-Reeve, F. M. Rutherford; Councillors, P. H. Macmillan, Mrs. W. C. Tatham, Wm. Nicholas, George Vice, Franklin Linton.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars, for Saturday, December 11, 1954.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — You may be faced with some responsibilities you don't like but are obliged to shoulder, so conquer with a smile and the ultimate results and recognition will be worthwhile.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — Stability, genially stressed. Have faith in the goals for which you work; others will help. Forethought is necessary to success.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — You may encounter people, things that could disturb your mind, but overcome a temptation to "chuck" it. Stay with your problems until you have conquered. The return will be more satisfying.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Stimulating aspects should make the outcome of projects as big as your aspirations. Don't allow petty matters to spoil your big chances; be amenable, cooperative.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Your knack for turning annoying situations into a bit of fun could be a strong ally now.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Speaking when you should is as important as being silent at times. Act according to your best judgment and ask God's guidance. There is little to fear if you control your own imagination.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — The prospects are bright if you use your foresight and even balance. Express your ideas; cooperate in business matters, community enterprises, invention. Heart interests are favored now.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Don't allow glamor, fine words from supposedly authorities people to sway you; analyze first.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — You might find that this day's achievements are mainly up to you — how you use time, talents. To make final records you need principle and honest, intelligent effort. Aim high!

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Though major problems confront you, you can manage them if you are firm, wise and your usual thoughtful, mentally bright self. Evaluate available opportunities.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Give this day's possibilities a fair chance and you should achieve good results. New offers, fresh openings may cause some change in plans. Don't be adamant; be open to suggestions.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Indifference and ignorance of what's going on around you could be obstacles in your path. Stop, think, be concerned if you want to achieve. Avoid restless worry.

YOU BORN TODAY are capable, usually energetic, and have "oodles" of ambition and a willingness to work to attain your goals. Fine, but the course you choose must be in accordance with your fine characteristics and sound principles. High achievement can be yours if you keep this in mind and work at it conscientiously. Don't become careless in habits or with assets. You have executive ability, can achieve success in many fields of endeavor. Keep the Golden Rule foremost in your thoughts.

Little Benny's Notebook

Pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers; saying, Goodness, William, some men have climbed another mountain. When are they going to get tired of that sort of thing? she said.

Never as long as men have the urge to pit their skill against danger, pop said. Why did Percy give the best years of his life to discovering the North Pole? he said, and ma said, Goodness knows. Nobody ever really believed there was actually a pole there, I'm sure, she said.

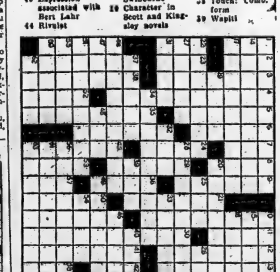
He did it to prove that man's skill is more than a match for icebergs and glaciers and the freezing blasts of sub zero weather, pop said. Percy probably didn't give a hang about geogrifty. Why do you suppose men go in for sports? he said, and ma said, Just to wear themselves out.

Not at all, they merely want to pit their skill against the obstinacy of a little golf ball, or a big bowling ball, pop said, and ma said, Why, William, that's quite remarkable. Now I'm beginning to understand men's attithyde tords mountaim, she said.

That's very discerning of you, my dear, pop said, and ma said, Thank you, William. And that being the case, I can discern why you cant imagine the root to a dangerous mountain peek, and use your skill to mount a shaky, dizzy, perilless ladder and tighten the shingles before we have another leek, she said.

My dear, you've got a point there, pop said. I'll dig out my old spiked climbing boots and go to it, he said, and ma said, Now William, you know those spikes will ruin the shingles.

Oh well, if you're going to display courage me, pop said, and ma said, Oh, such a man.



Meaning him.

Newsmen Found Willing Subject In Ace Fighter

VANCOUVER (CP) — Newspaper photographers and newsreel and television cameramen found a willing subject in Sqdn. Ldr. F. R. Scarfe here on his return here Thursday after two years' imprisonment in Red China.

Photographers and cameramen, unsatisfied despite a long, lingering embrace between the Canadian fighter ace and his pretty blonde wife as they were reunited, raised a pleading chant of "Kiss her, kiss her" during a brief press interview at Vancouver's International airport.

"You bet I'll kiss her," said the co-operative pilot with a broad grin. "After all it has been more than two years."

Bank Robbers' Get-Away Car Is Located

OTTAWA (CP)—Police have the get-away car four men used for their escape from North Gower, a village 20 miles south of Ottawa, after they robbed a bank there of $32,300; but it is believed the bandits may have fled to Montreal.

Police found the car, stolen in Montreal Dec. 2, on a quiet Ottawa street Thursday and in it books taken from the Royal Bank of Canada branch in North Gower. They also found a metal cash box in the car.

But the big money, the three armed men who entered the bank and the fourth who waited outside in an automobile are still missing. At gunpoint, the three men forced bookkeeper F. Richerson and three girl clerks to the rear of the bank, tied them and scooped money out of the safe and till.

Seven Remanded In Alleged Pay Book Fraud

TORONTO (CP)—Seven of 15 men arrested in connection with an alleged vacation pay book fraud expected to cost the provincial government $100,000 were remanded Thursday to Dec. 14.

Eight of the prisoners arrested Thursday in connection with the case, police said, are:

Remanded on bail were John Serednak, 34, and Richard Kostiuk, 36, who face charges of conspiracy to defraud; John Trachuk, 33, and Todd charged with false pretences; and Frank Desbrey, 33, charged with attempted fraud. Bail for the five was set at $10,000 each.

NO BAIL

Harold Hill, 25, and Harry Hewson, 38, remanded in custody for sentences, were not given bail as they were brought to Toronto from Stratford where they were serving a term for breaking and entering. Police said the ring of which Seale has been going on for at least two years. They said it was a well-planned plan, sponsored by the government, whereby workers save for vacations. The book of words is $100 when filled with stamps. The plan is intended for persons such as carpenters who may have several different employers in the course of a year.

Pay books were rigged by mending punched stamps with pieces of other stamps, police said.

Florida Likely To Get Franchise Of Ottawa A's

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The Kansas City Athletics may transfer their Ottawa franchise in the International Baseball League to the state of Pennsylvania, Lee Ayres, Parke Carroll, Athletics' business manager, said Saturday night he may go to Tampa next week to talk to city officials about the transfer. A club committee is campaigning at Tampa for Triple-A baseball.

Also under consideration is Columbus, Otto, which seems likely to be added to the Association club to Omaha, Neb. However, the Kansas City star says the Texas-St. Petersburg move "is a much more likely possibility."

CAHA Turns DownRedRequest For Hockey Series

WINNIPEG (CP) — Terry Hind, manager of the Winnipeg Maroons, said Saturday in Montreal that last season, today said his club had been nominated to fulfill a Russian request for a Canadian hockey club play an exhibition series in Russia. But the request of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association turned down the Red offer.

Hind said the request came as it was that the Russians had offered no less than $20,000 forward to expenses for the tour."

He said the CAHA's decision "has not been revealed. I can't understand why they turned down the offer."

It was through the efforts of Jimmy Sons of Winnipeg, CAHA first vice-president, that Maroons received the nomination, but he was the only association official to support the move, in a mailed vote.

The tour tentatively called for games in England and Stockholm before or after two games in Russia Jan. 13 and 14.

Hind said the Maroons, stranded without a league this year, would have fitted the bill perfectly.

Fourteen Simple Precautions To Prevent Holiday Fires

CHICAGO. — Don't let your holiday go up in smoke!

That warning comes from the National Safety Council as the nation approaches the Christmas tree season. The Christmas tree, filled with natural pitch and resin, is one of the most combustible objects known, the Council says. Ignited, it burns so rapidly it is virtually impossible to extinguish the flame by methods ordinarily available.

2.—Keep your tree in a cold place—an unheated garage is fine—until ready to set it up. And do not set it up until you are ready to use it.

3.—Before setting up the tree, saw off diagonally at least an inch of trunk, and place base in a water-containing holder. Keep water reservoir filled.

4.—Locate your tree well away from fireplaces, radiators, television sets, powerful electric lights and other sources of heat.

5.—Never use candles for decorations. Use only electric lights and be sure these bear the Underwriter's Laboratories label. Always check wires for defects and loose sockets before putting them on the tree.

6.—Too many light circuits on one outlet may overload the house wiring and blow a fuse. Reduce the load or connect part to another circuit outlet. Never increase size of fuse, or substitute a penny for a blown fuse.

7.—Turn off the tree lights when no one is to be in the room for any length of time.

8.—Do not operate electric trains or other electrical toys which may spark under the tree.

9.—Dispose of Christmas gift wrapping at once.

10.—Use only artificial "snow" and decorations of the flameproofed or noncombustible type for trimming your tree.

11.—Be sure the ends of metallic icicles or other hanging decorations do not dangle into light sockets where they can cause a short circuit and flash fire.

12.—Move the Christmas tree lights if the tree's needles near them turn brown. And when the needles start to fall, take the tree down and discard it.

14.—In case of fire, call the fire department immediately.

Rush to Evacuate Hundreds As Irish Flood Waters Rise

ATHLONE, Ireland (Reuters)—Flood - weary rescue workers spurred efforts to bring in hundreds of stranded people today as watched the Shannon river inch steadily higher over 30 square miles of once-rich farm land here.

The peak crisis point in the week-old flood is expected during the weekend. A state of emergency was declared by the Irish government hundreds of families.

Col. E. Coffins Power of the Irish National Army, here in charge of rescue operations, said the Shannon will be down five feet above its normal level at the peak.

The area under water has grad-ually increased and it now reaches the outskirts of Athlone itself. The town was expected to be pene-trated by the floods later today.

CAMP REOPENED

Troops and Red Cross workers used armored cars and trucks and commandeered flat - bottom punts in rescue work today. A wartime military camp near here was re-opened to accommodate people driven from their homes by the floods.

Powell said only prompt action by rescue teams prevented what could have been a "very difficult situation."

People living in single-storey cot-tages doted around the area call it "the creeping flood." It actually began in the middle of October when the Shannon brimmed over its banks for the first time this winter, and it has been flowing and ebbing ever since.

Across the Irish sea in England, mopping-up operations had by to-day repaired most of the damage wrought across the country by this week's storms.

WALLS BREACHED

In the seaport port of Fleet-wood, rebuilding was pressed to-day in an effort to close a wide gap torn by a 20-foot wall of ex-pected high tides tonight. People in 600 threatened homes carried their belongings to upstairs rooms and prepared to evaluate to the town's big ballroom if necessary.

At Wallasey, near Fleetwood, a gale-driven high tide swept 300 yards inland through a 30-yard gap during the night to lap the walls of a big children's hospital.

The weather today in Britain was mostly cold and clear.

COLLABORATION WITH WEST FIRST JAP OBJECTIVE

Will Be Given Priority Over Trade With Reds

By FORREST EDWARDS

TOKYO (AP)—Japan's new gov-ernment promised today that con-tinued collaboration with the United States and other non-Com-munist countries will get first priority over expanding trade with Russia and Red China.

Foreign Minister Mamoru Shige-mitsu formally enunciated the pol-icy following Prime Minister Ich-iro Hatoyama's first meeting with his cabinet.

Shigemitsu, back in a place of power again after being convicted as a war criminal, said Japan is willing to restore normal relations with Russia and China as long as such negotiations do not "prejudice our basic collabora-tion with the free nations."

He added that the new govern-ment does not "necessarily expect much from (trade with Commun-ist nations) for the present." Pre-sure but . . . we shall welcome opportunities of expanding the vol-ume which now is a rather small."

Shigemitsu's statement appears to bear out predictions of Japanese editors, writers and politicians that the Hatoyama government will-ually expects to accomplish little, if anything, in promoting trade with the Red Reims before the promised dissolution of Parliament in Janu-ary.

To get the left-wing votes neces-sary to elect him prime minister last Thursday, Hatoyama had to promise Japan's Socialists he would dissolve the Diet by the end of January and call elections to be completed by March 10.

Plan to Expand Hospital Will Cost $15,000,000

TORONTO (CP) — A $15,000,000 expansion program will make To-ronto General Hospital the biggest hospital in the British Commonwealth, H. M. Turner, chairman of the hos-pital's building committee said Fri-day.

A new 7-storey addition, in part 13 stories high, is included in the plans. Construction on the new wing has already begun, Turner said.

The new building will incorpora-ate obstetrical and surgical floors, research laboratories and physic-therapy and eye departments.

The structure, behind the present buildings on College street, will add 425 beds to the hospital's present total of 1,100.

Committed for Trial

TORONTO (CP)—David Cleve-don, 28, and his wife, Margaret, 29, Friday were committed for trial on a charge of failing to pro-vide the necessities of life for their daughter Patricia, infant critically in the Hospital for Sick Children.

Dr. Chester McLean, a pathol-ogist at the hospital, testified Wed-nesday that the girl died from acute bronchitis. He found she was suffer-almost to the point of being emac-iated." There were bruises of vary-ing age on her body and broken arm.

60 PC Not Inspected

HAMILTON (CP) — Dr. L. A. Clarke, medical officer of health, said Friday more than 60 per cent of meat sold in Hamilton stores is not inspected. He supported a motion by the board to ask the province to assume responsibility for inspection.

Dr. Clarke said he thought such an inspection plan would be sup-ported by Ottawa, Windsor, Oshe-awa, Kingston and London.

New York State Indians Get Help In Fight for Right to Fish and Hunt

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The hereditary chiefs of the Iroquois Confederation appeared today to have won the first skirmish in their uprising against the New York state conservation department's right to fish and game orders.

The federal Indian bureau came to the chiefs' rescue Friday after the New York department's law en-forcement bureau declared that "We're going to enforce the con-servation law both on and off the reservations."

The chiefs had decided at a pow-wow at the Onondaga reservation last Monday that their braves did not need to obey the state fish and game laws while hunting or trap-ping on tribal lands. They declared "void and unfounded" a recent order that they must.

IRAN'S SHAH AND WIFE ARRIVE IN U.S.

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi of Iran and his wife, Queen Soraya, have arrived in New York for a two-months' stay in the United States. Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Will Seek Extension of Deadline

OTTAWA (CP) — Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. is expected to seek an extension of a month or six weeks to the Dec. 31 deadline by which it was to complete pre-con-struction arrangements for the $300,000,000 project to pipe Alberta natural gas to fuel-hungry eastern Canada.

Trouble in negotiating supply and sales contracts has put the project behind schedule. No major Canadian contracts have been signed yet, although the big deal for subsidiary piping of gas to the mid-west United States has been signed.

The Dec. 31 deadline was set last summer when the company received conditional permits from the Alberta government for gas ex-port and from the board of trans-port commissioners for pipeline construction.

The board and Alberta's petrol-eum and natural gas conservation board stipulated that the company would have to show contracts for the supply and sale of the gas by that date if it was to receive final go-ahead permits.

It is virtually certain, inform-ants say, that the company will ask the transport board to extend the deadline.

With the additional time it would try to clinch contracts so that it could line up its financing before the 1955 construction season. Fin-ancial backers have agreed to un-derwrite Trans-Canada securities once the contracts are negotiated.

It is difficult for the company to complete contracts with custom-ers along the pipeline route with-out deals at the producing end. which will give the initial cost of the gas.

A company spokesman said Fri-day it should not take long to "tidy up" customer contracts af-ter the producers' price is fixed. Negotiations with the Consumers' Gas Company in the Toronto mar-ket area, keystone of the 2,300-mile line, are reported close to completion.

Earlier this month, Dr. George S. Hume, the federal government's fuel expert, said arrangements in-side Alberta for a grid system to supply gas for the eastern lines were "complicating" completion of fin-ancing plans. The Alberta conser-vation board did not open hear-ings on this system until Nov. 23.

64 Indian Miners Trapped As Water Collapses Walls

Indian miners, trapped in a flooded, coal mine since Friday morning, faced the added danger of carbon dioxide gas today as rescue crews fought an apparently losing battle to save them, according to reports from Nagpur, central India.

Reports said this story of the accident, which may prove to be India's worst mine disaster in re-cent years.

Friday 112 men entered a pit near Parasia, 100 miles north of Nagpur. A few hours later 48 of them struggled out, leaving 64 com-rades, behind them.

Those who escaped said they saw water seeping into the pit through the sides.

They all rushed to escape, but before most of them could get out the mine walls collapsed and the water rushed in, trapping the re-maining miners.

Reports from Bombay said po-lice and mining officials declared at least 64 persons were definitely dead in the disaster. Rescue oper-ations, however, were still going-ing 30 hours after the flooding started.

Sinatra Gives His Version Of Brawl on Sunset Strip

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Frank Si-atra gave his version Friday night of the tussle he had with a press agent on Hollywood's Sunset Strip Thursday morning—and his story proved far different.

James Byron, free-lance press agent, told reporters that the commencement-order had accosted him in front of a night club and engaged in a fist fight. Byron has claimed Sinatra had objected to questions about a friend's date and had Byron was either a cop or a newspaper man — "and I hate both."

The press agent also claimed Si-atra and his party tried to sneak drinks out of the night club early.

In an exclusive interview, Si-atra gave me this account of the incident:

"Bob-Neal and his date and I had spent the evening at the birth-day party for Sammy Davis Jr. We were leaving about midnight when we decided to drop in on Mel Torme's show at the Crescendo. We thought Judy Garland might want to join us since her husband, Sid Luft, is in the East. So we called her and she joined us.

"We arrived at the Crescendo about 12:30 and ran into Byron. The story that we tried to sneak cham-pagne out of the place is an out-right lie. . . .

"As we were leaving, this guy Byron called Bob Neal over and told him to come 'around' to see me. Bob told me about it and I went over and asked Byron who he was. He told me his name and he had to tell me.

"He was trying to make it seem an illicit date or something. Any-body who thinks that has got to be pretty sick guy. Especially when Judy was six months pregnant.

"Then when I resented his calling Judy a 'broad.'

"We had a couple more words, and he said something like, 'We'll take care of you.' I couldn't under-stand that and I asked him what he meant. He said, 'Never mind.' I told him it was obvious that he was looking for a quarrel. . . .

"I told him to take his glasses off. Then suddenly two guys held my arms and Byron tried to knee me. He succeeded in denting my shin bone and clawing my hand. I couldn't do anything because I was held.

"I broke loose. It ended when I gave him a left hook and dumped him on his fanny. Then I got scared. It was obvious he didn't know how to defend himself and I didn't want any trouble. It ended then."

Sinatra added that such events as these limit his night club ap-pearances. He denied he said any-thing derogatory about newspaper men or policemen.

WILL SCRUTINIZE RECEPTION COSTS FOR SEVEN YEARS

Toronto Newspapers Get Right to View Books

TORONTO (CP) — More civic entertainment accounts will be opened for public inspection to deter-mine how much two former To-ronto mayors paid for receptions during the seven years they held office.

Accounts will be opened Monday at the request of newspaper re-porters who want to compare them with expenditures incurred during Allan Lamport's fifth years in of-fice, which ended last summer.

The entertainment records cover the years former mayors Hiram E. Saunders and Hiram E. Mc-Callum held office. Mr. Saunders was mayor from 1945 to 1948 and Mr. McCallum 1949-1951.

The decision to examine ex-penses followed disclosures that $47,813 was spent during the last 2½ years for parties, receptions and normal city functions at the Royal York Hotel. The amount in-cluded more than $11,000 Mr. Lam-port's farewell party paid in con-nection with Suite 1735.

RESIGNED THIS YEAR

Mr. Lamport served as mayor from Jan. 1, 1952 to June 28, 1954 when he resigned to become a Toronto police commissioner.

Also to be examined Monday are accounts showing that more than $11,000 in entertainment expendi-tures was personally authorized by the mayor's office. Individual entries headed "Entertainment of Visit-ing Dignitaries . . ."

CLERK'S STATEMENT

City Clerk George Weale said that while Mr. Lamport was ab-sent for the first two weeks in June, 1953, attending the Coron-ation of the Queen, and in April, 1954, on a visit to Greece, he, as city clerk, was responsible for civic entertainment in Suite 1735.

The accounts include such items for banquets and civic en-tertainments but included entries for 50 cent meals for city re-porters found no items personally authorized by Mayor Lamport.

Mr. Lamport said he had footed the bill for many of the expendi-tures.

"I loved being mayor but couldn't afford to. That's why I gave up the job," he said. He indi-cated later, however, that he might run again for mayor.

MANY FUNCTIONS

Mr. Lamport said the suite was necessary because he had to at-tend as many as five or six func-tions a night in Toronto.

Meanwhile, Mr. McCallum, now general manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, said he had nothing to hide in connection with the examination of his entertain-ment expense record. He added:

"Any public inquiry would suit me 100 per cent."

Robert Saunders, chairman of the Ontario hydro-electric power commission, was out of town and could not be reached for records incurred by Mr. Saunders and Mr. McCallum.

Would Allow High Schools to Expel Students Not Profiting from Course

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto school principal says all Ontario school boards should have bylaws enabling them to expel students not profiting from secondary school at-tendance.

David L. Tough, principal of sub-urban Forest Hill Collegiate, said in an article in The Bulletin, magazine of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, that schools would be improved if stu-dents who lacked ability or moti-vation were removed.

He also suggested students be directed into four courses: one ending at Grade 10 for students who plan to go out to work; a general course ending at Grade 12 for students "misplaced" in other courses now; a college prepara-tory course; and a vocational and commercial course for those with proven aptitude.

The principal also urged com-pulsory examinations for all stu-dents.

UN Head Seeks Talks With China About 11 Airmen

Hammarskjold Undertakes Effort to Free Americans

By TOM HOGE

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) UN secretary-general Dag Ham-marskjold was reliably reported today to have made a bid to Red China for direct talks on the 11 American fliers held as spies.

A diplomatic source said the secretary-general had sent a com-munication to Peiping asking whether the Chinese Communists would be willing to discuss the case. He was understood to have indicated he would make himself available for such talks if Peiping would talk.

This, it was understood, included the possibility of a trip to Peiping, if necessary.

Hammarskjold quickly accepted the mission after the assembly Friday approved, 47 to 5, a resolu-tion introduced by the United States and its 15 Korean allies condemning Peiping for jailing the fliers, and demanding their re-lease.

The vote was taken after two days of bitter East-west debate. The only accepted to the move was cast by the Soviet bloc, which fought the resolution step by step. Yugoslavia and six Arab-states abstained, apparently be-cause the claims condemning Peiping.

TRAFFIC JAM

The assembly poll originally stood at 45 to 5, but delegates for Israel and Iceland said they were caught in a traffic jam and missed the ballot. They persuaded assembly President Eelco Van Kleffens to record them as sup-porting the resolution.

Hammarskjold is known to con-sider the best outcome to him in one of the gravest challenges to face a secretary-general since the UN came into being eight years ago. He told the assembly "I will do all in my power to serve the inter-ests of the organization." A spokes-man later said Hammarskjold was "taking immediate steps" to carry out the mandate.

SEVERAL AVENUES

UN observers said Hammar-skjold could use several avenues to seek release of the airmen:

1. His personal contact to Peiping.

2. Feelers through some neutral country such as his native Sweden, Switzerland or India. India has been a principal mediator in the Ko-rean armistice negotiations.

3. Utilize the facilities of the UN office in Geneva, Switzerland, to make representations to Red China since ambassador stationed there.

To try to persuade Russia to use her influence with Peiping to set aside the sentences levied against the airmen.

Windsor Workers Back Union's Stand in Strike

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A show-of-hands vote Friday at a meet-bership meeting of Local 200, United Automobile Workers union (CIO-CCL), endorsed the union's demand that strikes at the Chrysler and Ford plants in Ontario be settled at one time.

Charles McDonald, president of the local, said more than 2,000 members attended the meeting. He said the vote was "almost without dissent."

The question of union representa-tion in company-union talks will be the key issue when the sessions resumed Monday under On-tario Labor Minister Daley.

Bright Future For Hog Industry Is Predicted

ST. THOMAS (CP) — Clayton Frey, director of the Ontario Hog Producers Association, Friday pre-dicted a bright future for the hog industry with Canada's growing population creating an increasing demand.

If the population increases at the rate predicted there will be a sub-stantial increase in hog production to meet demands, he said.

He said Ontario is producing only enough hogs to meet its de-mands while Western Canada the Mar-itimes must import from western Canada.

Mr. Frey spoke at the annual meeting of the Elgin producers.

Fairly Good Night Spent by Pope, Vatican Reports

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Vat-ican source said today Pope Pius XII had a fairly good night.

"Although his sleep was inter-rupted a few times, the Holy Father was able to get more rest than usual," the source reported.

The Pope suffered hiccoughs ill from the gastric ailment that ap-parently brought him close to death this week-end, but he has been slowly gaining strength.

He sat up in bed on Friday and took a few brief walks on the arm of his private physician, Dr. Ricardo Galeazzi.

The Pope has been following a revised liquid diet since Sunday the last week. It includes the intra-venous feeding of glucose, amino, vitamins and liver extract, plus increasing amounts of liquid or soft foods.

UN Head Undertakes Effort to Free Americans

NEW DELHI (AP)—India has told Ambassador Ralph Huntington Escott Reid it is unable to do any-thing at present about jailed U.S. airmen in Red China, sources close to the foreign ministry said Fri-day night.

But the Indian government in-formed the Canadian envoy Thurs-day it felt confident the passage of time was the best healing fac-tor and expressed hope nothing will be done or said meanwhile to add to the tension.

Reid made this week delivered to Prime Minister Nehru a message from Prime Minister St. Laurent offering encouragement for Indian mediation on behalf of the fliers.

Nehru called his envoy to Pei-ping, Nedyam Raghavan, who re-plied that feeling was more hos-tile throughout Red China than in the United States and that it was an inappropriate time for India to do or say anything.

The informant said: "Friends in the United States help neither In-dia nor the imprisoned airmen by adding to the tension by holding out threats of a naval blockade. That is the last recourse on occasions when silence is golden."

Little Mouse Leaves Flood On Horse's Back

DUBLIN (AP) — Once upon a time a little mouse lived in a Dublin stable along with six big horses. It liked living in the stable. It was warm, it was dry and the food was good.

One day—Thursday — a great flood descended on the city. The water gushed into the stable, rising higher and higher. It covered the horses' legs and kept on rising.

The man who owned the stable feared his horses would drown. So he waded to the stable and led the horses swimming back to higher ground.

A lot of people watched the horses swimming out. When the last horse left the stable, they saw a little mouse perched high on his back. As soon as it reached dry ground the little mouse jumped down and ran off. And everybody cheered.

Wolves in North Hastings Are Rapidly Depleting Deer

Roving bands of wolves in the North Hastings area are rapidly depleting the deer population with result that drastic measures will be necessary if the deer are to be saved.

This was the claim of Reeve Ernest A. Davis of McLure, Wicklow and Bangor townships, at the closing session of county council Friday afternoon when he said that deer were getting very scarce in his district and were in danger of being wiped out completely by the wolves.

He recommended that Albert Saulay, noted wolf trapper, be retained to train trappers in his area in the art of trapping wolves. As a further measure to conserve the deer population Reeve Davis said council should request the Fish and Wild Life Division of the Department of Lands and Forests that shooting of does by hunters and the use of dogs in hunting deer should be prohibited for several years. He said he would bring the matter up with at the January session of council.

Wolves were so numerous in his area that most farmers had given up trying to raise sheep, he said.

Burley Tobacco Nicotine Content Will Be Reduced

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A simple process discovered by a University of Kentucky chemist has revolutionized research aimed at cutting nicotine content of burley tobacco plants.

And because of the discovery, Kentucky farmers will be able to plant their 1956 burley crops with seed from varieties lower in nicotine than the last produced in recent years.

By reducing the nicotine content, researchers expect to produce a type that will be more desirable to cigaret manufacturers and increase the demand for burley.

Under Dr. Ernest Gross' process, drops of tobacco extract taken from plants are placed on chemically treated filter paper. When this sheet is developed in other chemicals, the various amounts of nicotine appear red.

Premier to Meet Representatives About Payments

CORNWALL (CP) — Premier Frost will meet the representatives of 6,500 residents of Sewer valley in Toronto next Tuesday to discuss payments to be made when the St. Lawrence seaway power project forces them to move from their homes.

Thorold Lane, chairman of the six-man committee representing the residents, said Friday the premier set the date during a telephone conversation.

Residents are pressing for replacement value of their homes to be flooded when the Ontario hydro-electric power commission starts work on the $600,000,000 power project. Hydro says that under present legislation it can pay only the market value of the homes.

NOT TO PROTEST

Nearly 1,090 members of the more than 2,000 families in the area, along the north shore of the St. Lawrence from Iroquois to Cornwall, met Nov. 18 to protest the system of payments.

They said generosity of Hydro's plans has forced the values of their homes below their true level and asked the province to have existing legislation changed so Hydro can pay replacement values.

The citizen's committee said it agreed with Hydro and the provincial government that nobody should make a profit because of the move. It said all residents want is to be spared any expenses in the mass evacuation.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

Holy Spirit, Faithful Guide

Holy Spirit, faithful Guide,
Ever near the Christian's side;
Gently lead us by the hand,
Pilgrims in a desert land;
Weary souls forever rejoice,
While they hear that sweetest voice,

Whisp'ring s o f t l y, "Wanderer, come;
Follow me, I'll guide thee home."

Ever present, truest Friend,
Ever near, thine aid to lend,
Leave us not to doubt and fear,
Groping on in darkness drear;
When the storms are raging sore,
Hearts grow faint, and hopes give o'er,

Whisper softly, "Wanderer, come!
Follow me, I'll guide thee home."

When our days of toil shall cease,
Waiting still for sweet release,
Nothing left but heaven and prayer,
Wondering if our names are there;
Wading deep the dismal flood,
Pleading naught but Jesus' blood,
Whisper softly, "Wanderer, come!
Follow me, I'll guide thee home."

"HOLY SPIRIT, FAITHFUL GUIDE"

Most of the hymns of the church have been written by clergymen but in every case there are some precious gems from the pens of laymen.

The New York lawyer, Marcus Morris Wells, was the author of "Holy Spirit, Faithful Guide", one of the most popular of many hymns written to the Holy Spirit. When he had finished his poem he wrote his own hymn tune, and most hymnists agree that words and music are unusually well matched.

Little is known of Wells except that he was born in 1815 and died in 1895. His hymn, which is said to have been inspired by the Bible verse in Psalms 32:8: "I will guide thee with mine eye", made its first appearance in the "Prayer-meeting department" of a hymnal called "The Sacred Lute" which was published by T.E. Perkins in Boston. Its title in this collection was given as "The Christian Guide".

The song was published again in Ira D. Sankey's collection of "Gospel Hymns", in 1875. Its date of authorship was announced there as 1858.

Dr. Isaac Watts, the Rev. Andrew Reed, and the Rev. George Croly also wrote never-to-be-forgotten hymns during the Holy Spirit. These are usually found side by side with Mr. Welby's song in church hymn lists. Dr. Watts' hymn opened with the stanza:

"Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove
With all thy quickening powers;
Kindle a flame of sacred love
In these cold hearts of ours.

Mr. Reed introduced his song with the lines:

"Holy Ghost, with light divine,
Shine upon this heart of mine;
Chase the shadows of night away,
Turn my darkness into day".

And Mr. Croly wrote:

"Spirit of God! Descend upon my heart;
Wean it from earth, through all its pulses move;
Stoop to my weakness, mighty as Thou art,
And make me love Thee as I ought to love."

For Parents Only

Christmas Month

"When will December be here?" is a question often asked by a small son or daughter. They can hardly wait for the "Christmas month" to arrive! It is a great moment when November can be pulled off the calendar on the kitchen wall. Even a baby seems to enter into the happy anticipation which the first of December brings!

You want your children to know that the true meaning of Christmas is that it is the baby Jesus' birthday. But on Christmas Eve all over the world little children are hoping that Santa, who represents the Spirit of Giving, at this happy time, will visit their homes. If mothers and fathers tell their children they must leave money out on the mantel-piece for Santa along with his Christmas cake and glass of milk it is a help in explaining the necessary limitation of gifts. Santa does the best he can with the amount the parents can afford to give him!

EVER POPULAR

The immortal poem "The Night Before Christmas" continues to be very popular even if Rudolph, the Red Nosed Reindeer has had such a large sale too! Santa Claus is best told to children in this poem which suggests that he is a "jolly old elf." What parent can produce a better answer than that when questioned "Is Santa real?" Santa is as "real" as an elf or a fairy or any of the other imaginative creatures which people a little child's world. "Is Santa Fair?" is another difficult question asked by the boy or girl who cannot help but notice the difference in quantity and quality of the gifts left by Santa for the only child of wealthy parents and those left for the younger child of poor people with a large family.

MUSIC IMPORTANT

Every home should have a favorite carol book. The piano rack should be cleared for Christmas music and the book of carols placed there. An excellent time for the family to gather around the piano to sing carols is after an early supper on Friday night, when the school week is over. Let the children take turns choosing their favorite songs.

The music which you produce may not be remarkable, but you will have a grand time singing the youngest child's choice of "Away in a Manger," or an older child's selection "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" or "Joy to the World, Lord and Good." Take time to learn the lovely "Gentle Mary Laid Her Child," by Joseph Simpson Cook, a Canadian. Don't forget the lovely French Canadian carols such as "Whence, O Shepherd Maiden."

Do invest in at least one good illustrated Christmas Book with the loose late Thursday and fell about 40 feet to the seats. Approximately 150 students from the Eastman school were on the stage rehearsing a musical number, but none was injured.

SHOW-STOPPER!

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—A 15-square-foot section of the ceiling of the Eastman Theatre here tore loose late Thursday and fell about 40 feet to the seats. Approximately 150 students from the Eastman school were on the stage rehearsing a musical number, but none was injured.

POETRY UNSURPASSED

The prose poetry of the story of the First Christmas quoted from the Bible is unsurpassed by modern writers. But children love their own book with colored pictures. Ask the clerk at a book store or the children's librarian at the Public Library to show you their choice of books about the First Christmas.

The first of December! There are four whole weeks . . . or very nearly, in which to get ready for the Day of Days! May no worry over gifts, no hectic shopping or elaborate preparations for company spoil the family atmosphere on this last month of the old year! There may be rush and hurry, drifts and cold outside but warmth and happy times are found indoors in countless homes. This season which marks the birthday of a child is the Children's Month. With singing carols and reading aloud, not to mention making decorations and buying gifts how quickly the days pass! There's no doubt at all in the minds of our youngsters that the last weeks in the year are the best of all and parents are inclined to agree with them!

A Lift For Living

Giving God a Chance

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Suppose, as you are reading this, the radio should bring the news that our nation had been attacked by a hostile aircraft.

It would be tragic, just as it was a little over 13 years ago when we were dumbfounded by the news of Pearl Harbor. Yet . . . horror-stricken as we would be, we would be jerked out of the petty anxieties which now bedevil us. And as were the last war and the losses we sustained in the Korean conflict, we were not looking for books on peace of mind during those days.

It was after the guns were silenced, when we leaped back into our self-centredness, that we feverishly sought for books on how to be happy and peaceful and unafraid. It is after a war is over, that we look back to the time when we were caught up in a patriot's zeal and picture it on the screen under the title: "The Best Years of Our Lives". Must we wait for another war to lift us out of our pettiness and worries?

WORLD LOVES A LOVER

Or suppose we fell head-over-heels in love. We have a saying: "All the world loves a lover." Why? Because when a person is deeply in love, he becomes more lovable.

He may do silly things. He may make a fool of himself in many little ways. But, nevertheless, he is lovable because he forgets himself and ceases to be always calculating, always looking out for "Me, first." Must we wait for romantic love to give us the peace and joy which come from surrendering our hearts?

Why can we not this day surrender our wills to God, as we yield our hearts to our country in time of war or to a loved in time of love? God gave us this country that we love. God's love made possible these personal loves which are so dear to us.

Why not, then, as we approach the Christmas Season respond to God's goodness and love by opening our hearts to Him and giving Him the chance as sovereign Lord to take over these lives of ours? Then we would know what Saint Paul meant by "the peace of God which passeth all understanding."

TWO CHOICES

And after we have opened the door, why not give God a chance to stay with us by reading His word more regularly? It has been said that if we are to endure dark days, we must do one of two things: either stop thinking or stop and think.

And I might add that it makes a great difference where we stop and think. If the only times during which we stop to think are after we have read the reports of corruption and crime, we are bound to be depressed. If we are to keep up our morale, we must balance the bad news of men with the good news of God. Instead of trembling with fear by thinking so much about what the Communists and other enemies may do to us, let us turn to the Bible and think what God has done for us.

Now look around you. Many of you are sitting in your homes. Why not give God a chance in your family? That is where you really bring your religion home to yourself. We know what we mean when we say that a thing has "come home to us." We mean that it has really come to count with us, that it has "gotten under the skin."

NEVER OUT OF FASHION

In my grandfather's home was hung a framed motto, "Christ is the Head of this House." Perhaps that was old-fashioned, but it stood for something that should never go out of fashion.

John Ruskin was right, when he said that the history of a nation is not to be read in its battlefields but in its homes. A good home is one that is good to come back to, one in which love helps us to pull ourselves together after the distracting and competing experiences of the day, one where a listening and sympathetic ear invites us to unpack our hearts with words.

Where is there a lovelier sight than a house lighted up at the Christmas season—not merely in the windows, a decorated tree in the corner, a family gathered before a glowing fire. God gave us these homes. Let's give God a chance with them.

SAVE A DUMB BLONDE FOR ME!

Once upon a time the mark of a clever woman was her clever husband who, because she was clever about it, never discovered that she was cleverer than he.

The "clever" woman today is either a psychiatrist with an original chartreuse couch, a jet engine designer, a college president, chairman of the board of Dodid Inc., or a cabinet minister with her signature on all the nation's paper money.

If women are to enjoy "equal rights" with men and be allowed to be independent over a steamy drill press eight hours a day, and to be accorded full standing room privileges on buses and streetcars, certain degrees of success cannot be denied them. But, when the future of the race is endangered by "clever" women, the time has come to call a halt.

Halt!

The clarion call of approaching disaster was sounded by no less than a clever woman. Dr. Margaret Mead, anthropologist and author, in an address to a conference of bright young things from Barnard College, said that the "creeping desire" of bright women to marry men brighter than themselves is arrogance.

"There just aren't enough bright men walking around," she said.

This is straight-from-the-shoulder stuff from a member of the "weaker sex" whose shoulders once upon a time were supposed to nuzzle tweed suits and subsequently to burp babies. It is disconcerting.

Dr. Mead hastily tried to cover this monumental strategic blunder by stating that bright women should get over the "extreme arrogance" of thinking themselves so bright that they discourage suitors, but the damage has been done. Man ego has passed a few centuries subsequently in playful banter between Dr. Mead and the Barnard beauties when the bright young things said that bright young things wanted bright husbands and couldn't dominate them. Dr. Mead quickly put a better face on this awful development by stating that "today we are not arming the family for domination, we are arming it for teamwork."

Arming, no less!

With Barnard College turning out brighter and brighter women, and the supply of brighter and brighter husband material dwindling, however, there seem to be relatively few alternatives to this worsening situation. None of the readily available alternatives has much appeal. Either we tear down ladies' colleges and give the poor struggling male some intellectual advantage, or everyone buckles down to "teamwork" with a right good will and a belief in statistics, or bright women will have to lose their arrogance.

It is just the sort of problem bright women should be turned loose on. Go to it ladies.

NEEDED — A FEW MARTYRS

The contention that cigaret-smoking is one cause of lung cancer is now a fairly well-set fact. It is the suggestion that a factor may be polluted air. Now Dr. Milton C. Winternitz has added something new—the theory that one of the causes for the increase in lung cancer may be the fog-bellsmite of 1912-1919.

At Toronto the annual meeting of the Health League of Canada heard suggestions that fluoridation of drinking water, while it prevents decay of teeth, may increase the incidence of cancer and heart disease.

These are only examples of the wide variety of theories which are continually being advanced as to the cause of most of the diseases which afflict us. In spite of great scientific advances, mankind continues to suffer.

It is probable that most of these theories are erroneous. Yet in the past truth has proved often to be strange, judged by commonly held beliefs at the time when the true explanation for some situation was first advanced, that he would be a foolish man who would dismiss all theories offhand.

The scientific mind demands that these suggestions be put to the test.

"That is fine" said than done. Scientists are both persistent and ingenious. Nevertheless, both their persistence and their ingenuity is frequently taxed beyond the limit as they endeavor to devise tests which are adequate.

Scientists who had it proved to them that, now, however, it would appear to need more martyrs and those of a new type—persons who are willing to devote their whole lives to being human guinea pigs and to spending their lives under strictly controlled circumstances — smoking or not smoking, drinking fluoridated water or abstaining from this indulgence, having flu or staying healthy, living in a city's smog or in the pure air of the countryside, as the scientists require. Unless the scientists can account for every waking—and sleeping—minute of a man's life, some unknown influence could affect the result of the test.

This is not the type of martyrdom which has much appeal, even in dreams. It is one thing to imagine oneself writhing in the throes of military history or exposing oneself to the reviling of the crowd to defend some persecuted innocent; quite another to submit to a tedious and unceasing regimentation. Yet such is man's readiness to accept a challenge, some volunteers would almost certainly be found if scientists issued a call.

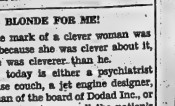
REASON FOR CHRISTMAS

Saviour of mankind was He.
Tree and windows gaily trim.
Since it will His birthday be,
Let us all remember Him.



Myrrh and frankincense and gold
Were then took to Bethlehem.
Mary, Joseph, stable cold.
Let us all remember them.

On the Christmas we await,
Bow the head and bend the knee.
His the birth we celebrate.
Let Him not forgotten be.

Join the children at their play.
Fill the glasses to the brim.
But throughout the Christmas Day
Let us all remember Him.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 11, 1924.

Miss Zeie N. Cole, Reg.N., of this city, has taken up duty on the nursing staff at the hospital in Whitby.

Mr. Franklin Lang of the Bank of Montreal staff in Peterborough is home to spend a vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ernest Lang, Cathcart St.

Members of the fire brigade are at present busily engaged during the noon hour, in repairing toys and re-painting them. Those who have taken in recently at one of the local movie theatres and those who will be distributed by the firemen to children, whose parents are unable, owing to the present conditions, to buy toys at Christmas. The action of the firemen is highly commended.

While the bright sun flooded the city and district this morning with its warm rays, a plump robin was seen sitting upon the limb of a tree on Charles Street by reliable personal. All that was missing, according to the observers, was the spring time carol of the bird.

20 YEARS AGO

Alligator In Bed Fatal

(Vancouver Province.)

Not all of us are equipped for the sudden stress of unusual emergency.

A man died of heart failure in Florida not long ago because he found an alligator in his bed. Instead of that, he'd had steadier nerves he might have survived the crisis by exclaiming politely: "Oh, excuse me. I thought for a moment you were in my bed, in which both man and alligator might have rolled over and gone back to sleep without getting fatally fussed up about it.

Consider the case of Kiyoshi Muraki of Toyko. The other day he bought a two-storey building with the idea of turning it into a small apartment. When he went to inspect the new premises, however, all he found was a vacant lot.

He didn't get himself into a nerve-shattering frenzy about it. Instead he made calm and judicious enquiry around the district.

His sensible approach to the problem paid off. It was rewarded with the intelligence, confirmed by alert neighbors, that some laborers had come shortly after he made his purchase, sized the situation up carefully, dismantled the structure in manageable proportions, and carried it away.

In due course, by more patient enquiry, and stole but determined following up of the most propitiating leads he caught up with the culprit, and made them carry the house back again. A lesser man might have been completely baffled by such a situation.

The moral here is quite plain. It doesn't pay to get excited about things, no matter how weird or unusual they may seem. Just be philosophical about it, and all will be well.

Maybe it will be your wife.

Note in Shirt Embarrassing

(London Answers)

One young man in Cologne, Germany, wears rather a red face when he shows anyone mentioned colored shirts.

Impressed by the colorful American shirts worn by many of his fellow workers, he decided to buy one himself. But he was not to be outdone by them, he purchased just about the gaudiest one he could find.

He brought his parcel home from the shop and was impressed to "the Handsome man who purchased this shirt. From the girl who helped to sell it to you."

A letter inside read: "Please send me your photograph."

He replied to the invitation. Three days later he received a letter written on expensive paper in a delicate shade of mauve and beautifully perfumed. Opening it he read:

"I only wanted to find out what kind of man I reconciled. I would be prepared to wear such an awful shirt."

sensible about it and take logical steps, and the matter will probably right itself.

This is a good thing to remember if you should happen to step out some morning and find a rogue elephant on the front lawn, or if an Eskimo comes courting your maid, or even if by some unhappy mischance you should come fine day wake up and find an alligator beside you in bed.

Letter to the Editor

Creamery Butter Has Never Been Subsidized

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

We are looking at page four, Ontario Intelligencer, dated Saturday, December fourth, a letter written to your C.W.J. by our good friend Minnie Graham, entitled "Subsidies for Butter."

Nothing could surely my good friend, Mr. Graham, knows there are no subsidies for butter.

Unfortunately, there are cheap products made out of cocoanut oil, cotton seed oil, peanut oil, whale oil that are used as spreads instead of butter; and unfortunately are often smoked in substitution for butter but definitely, there are no subsidies for butter.

The above paragraph is my first point in this letter towards educating Mr. Graham.

The creamery industry, all those who manufacture butter out of honest-to-goodness farmers' cream has never been bonused or subsidized by any government in this country; refute that if you will.

For a short time during the end of the Second World War, the farmers' pound of butterfat was bonused or subsidized but again never was the pound of butter manufactured from it bonused or subsidized.

Unfortunately, there is the Federal Government supports more than one farmer's product so that the farmer gets a certain amount of support returns for his efforts, except butter. Butter quality-wise is the most important thing to this or any other country — food. The Government has always interested to help the manufacture of butterfat that produces butter, but not the producer of the pound of butterfat out of which the butter is made.

We take it from the letter to the editor printed in the Intelligencer that this writer believes in free enterprise, we hope we are right in this assumption.

During the last session of the Provincial Legislature (Provincial Parliament), the big interests got the ear of the Government that would enable them to but whole milk from the farmers, take the cream off the whole milk, use the cream for table cream, ice cream manufacturers, etcetera, then take the skim milk and add to it cocoanut oil, cotton seed oil, peanut oil, whale oil, whichever was the cheapest, put in the skim milk and the cheap fat or fats through an homogenizer, bottle it and put it on the door step, and the poor cared to buy it in the place of honest-to-goodness pasteurized unadulterated whole milk produced by the honest farmer and his honest wife.

Re the above paragraph, our Provincial Legislature and its members there saw fit to defeat this bill at once. Now this is free enterprise: seemingly the Provincial Legislature and its members, unlike our good friend, Mr. Graham, does not believe in free enterprise. Now we have positive information about this statement, ask our good and very fine gentleman Mr. Graham, Consumers' Gas Mr. Elmer Sandercock. We think we are correct in saying that when we say that these two gentlemen defeated the first this pernicious bill: free enterprise.

Mr. Graham mentions autombiles, dozen of them, and other automobiles, farm machinery, television sets, etc., and everything else manufactured in Canada are protected by the Federal Government, but the late Sir John A. Macdonald, the national policy. The national policy has been the tariff against the importation of many, many things manufactured in foreign countries, tariff that generally means the increased cost to you, whatever it might be, must climb the protective wall before it gets into this country; ask your farmer friends about this, every person knows protection and knows what they don't need it, they only have to compete on world markets; they only work sixteen to eighteen hours per day.

Perfect Lawn Now Possible

(Ottawa Journal)

A British scientist comes up with a chemical to slow up the growth of grass. He says it will hold a meadow down to only two inches in place of the normal 10 or 12, and the saving in wear and tear on the lawn-mower—and, more important, on its victim—is something pleasant to contemplate.

The scientist says there is one flaw in this lovely scheme—the chemical has no effect on weeds, and dandelions dandelions in two-inch gram would add nothing to the charm of a neighborhood. But there are already chemicals which will kill weeds without injuring the grass, so it will be possible to meet the objection by the judicious use of weedkiller and grass-retarder—perhaps one day they will learn to combine the two and make one solution produce the perfect and everlasting lawn.

At a time of year when we are thinking more of snow shovels than of lawn-mowers a discussion of the grass-cutting ritual may be untimely. But good news is always in order, and the housebroker tasks in suburbia—and labor he would save himself if he succeed in his quest—cement and painted it green will appeal with us that a fixed and permanent lawn has come to be cut but once a year could be one of the great and beneficient inventions of the age.

The fact is that things slowly change, labor is getting scarcer and as the inventors do their stuff he can spend more of his leisure and his spare money on the domestic chores. It is possible now to buy a house insulated by storm windows in the fall and taking them down in the spring, but it is also possible to get screens and storms. If he has old-fashioned ideas about heat he can get himself a power mac-chine, even one he can ride upon, which will provide him with exercise perspiration.

Labor-saving appliances and gadgets have lightened enormously, or so we are told, the burden of the housewife. Of late years the inventors got around to going something for the menfolks.

were talking to a prominent citizen of Belleville who bought forty-two cents was enough for butter, still if he thinks forty-two cents with the United States dollar and he think is enough for cheese. Now he says that if there was as much milk to make one pound of butter as it does to make one pound of cheese, he, the writer, know that nor does he care.

If our free enterprise man wants to read about free enterprise, he would be look up the Dominion Canners, Limited, Deseronto, page five, an article headed "Free Enterprise Law." Morley McKay who operates in the "city" of Dreeden has been paying a fair price, thought he was privileged to operate in free enterprise. Dreeden, in other words, he thought he could serve whom he liked and refuse to serve whom he disliked. Mr. McKay is in court this week because he was operating in what is called a free enterprise place — foolish and foolish because he chose to serve those he didn't like to serve and see that they got tough meat, that they got meat into which was would have accomplished his idea of what he liked and what getting entangled with the law.

Free enterprise, we are sure that Mr. Graham would not object to the individual having the inventing "big interests" taking the cream from the whole milk and adding to it cocoanut oil, cotton seed oil, peanut oil, whale oil putting the mixture through an homogenizer and then putting this product on the open competition against his father's business, his big business producing pure wholesome milk for the men, women and children of this city.

ALL ONE HERE

The Duke of Wellington once went to the altar rail to his communion, and when he knelt beside the Duke when he suddenly recognized the great personage and made as though to withdraw. But the Duke extended his hand to the man and said, quietly, "Kneel down, lad; we are all one here."

One of the most inspiring aspects of the Christian Church is that under the roof of it all sorts of walls, all men are equal. We bear a great deal about the rich and fashionable who run their churches. Maybe they run a few churches, but not many. In our free land, most of the churches are living, incontrovertible demonstrations that democracy is not dead. In our churches people of all social, intellectual, and financial gradations come together to pray to God health, God has blessed me 14,780 times. Plus a few more times in answer to prayers of readers who tell me they pray for me. God will bless me and keep me from going away here for many a year ahead.

I don't ask God to bless me or keep me teaching health. As I see it, God knows, whether I do enough good to be kept on this job or whether I deserve — I mean whether you people get enough benefit — Anyway, every night when I lay me down to sleep I thank God for the day, but I do not ask for another. I am content to leave that to God.

I heed the injunction of Hippocrates to his followers, and I think it was Father Meeking did the will of God when he said, in effect, Do Good If You Can But Do No Harm. By this method I have conducted this column since its inception. I am sure the editor has noticed before I hope you will now understand clearly that this is a health column.

I have been writing this column long enough to know what people like and what they don't like. I know from experience that if or when people like what they read here, O.K. If they don't like it the editor knows all about it. Therefore, three or four individuals in the community sometimes make enough noise about a bit of trash the egregious conductor of this column has presented to make it seem that it is Brady who is out of step—and so, good-bye, for a while if not forever. Then, after all, there are always some question whether Old Doc Brady had turned up his toes many years ago, leaving this column to a medical clique or a group of ghost writers or somethings.

A funny thing happened (as the old boys say) on my way up here from purgatory. It happened in Louisville. We were sailing along happily there when, out of a clear blue sky, the column went phlit! It was a long while ago and I can't remember just what caused the abrupt demise, if indeed I knew. But that is not the end of the story. I had hardly got into the office here when letters began to come in. Then when came an announcement by the paper that they had cancelled Personal Health Service. The switchboard operator was swamped with letters, telephone calls and personal calls in connection therewith. Some of here we go again!

THE PACKSACK

Outdoorsmen and amateur field naturalists with great expectation for the arrival of each new book in the Roger Tory Peterson series of pocket field guides. Due to the success of the Peterson field guides to the birds, Mr. Peterson and associates have edited and direct the publication of similar pocket guides to the mammals, insects, reptiles, trees, etc.

The newest addition to the Peterson series is the field guide to animal tracks. It is the work of Dr. Olaus J. Murie, formerly with the United States Fish and Wildlife Service and now president of the Wilderness Society. He spent two years on Hudson's Bay, six in Alaska and several more in the Jackson Hole country of Wyoming. His work is very like that of the late Ernest Thompson Seton, for he is his own artist and draughtsman. The new field guide contains over 150 illustrations of animal tracks and track patterns from mice up to moose. It includes many other animal signs such as typical gnawings of twigs by the different rodents, diagrammatic views of muskrat burrows and various other signs by which animals may be identified from the tracks they leave in sand or earth.

Besides the drawings of the tracks from the finding, there are measurements easily applied, each illustration usually including details of voice and other particulars which will help the amateur naturalist to identify the animal. And those who go into the woods to hunt will know whether the animal is seen, and how often his tracks are found, as though he will have a high side of meat for only a moment before. Dr. Murie says that he always included clues which will help the average woods wanderer to identify the animal he almost sees.

To round off the field guide, Dr. Murie concludes with brief chapters on the tracks of birds, turtles, toads and snakes, which animals from the high side of meat man who walks with downcast eyes to understand almost anything he sees in the mud, sand or snow.

I WANT

I want a poet's heart that can see God in a raindrop and a snowflake. I want a farmer's faith that can see God in the seed that I plant his seeds, and have assurance that he will water it and prays that rain may come to reward his labor with abundance that will bless many.

I want the kind of courage that can be unafraid when I get patient and humble, ever more trustful of a Higher Power than any ever demonstrated by any man. I want to demonstrate in my own life a simplicity and directness of purpose. I want to keep learning new things that will keep my mind stirred and alert.

I want the wealth of a child's mind and its free expression. I want its faith and its absence of all doubts. I want its curiosity and joy in play. I want a healthy mind and its undisturbed sleep. I want to experience its constantly growing list of revelations. I want to know about its earliest dawn of hope!

I want to be useful and influential rather than famous or wealthy. I want to help people appreciate many of the things that have brought joy and happiness to me, such as music, books, art, and nature. These are things that keep me laughing and crying with its thrills and unexpected surprises. One's treasures mean so little if one cannot share with others.

I want to keep adding to my interests for each one helps to keep my mind young and my body in a state of health. I want to live "long enough to see all war abolished from the earth forever. (I'm afraid I will have to live to be extremely old age for that.) There may be happier days ahead, however, than any of us now know. More and anywhere, is unthinkable for intelligent human beings.

CAS Request for More Money To Provide Preventive Worker Referred to January Sitting

Hastings county council will make a further study of the grant request from the county Children's Aid Society for more money to assist the society in providing a full time preventive worker.

The request was referred to the C.A.S. committee and will make a further investigation into the matter and report to the January session of council.

Wednesday Bruce Kerr, C.A.S. superintendent had addressed council with the request for a grant to assist them putting a full time preventive worker in the field. It was suggested that if such a worker prevented just ten children from coming into C.A.S. care the salary and travelling expenses would be saved the county in per diem rates.

In speaking to the motion calling for a grant Reeve James Brackett of Tudor and Cashel said the county would do well to give every consideration to such a grant. He noted that the county already had made a special grant of $800 to the society this year.

There was a general feeling among councillors, however, that there could be some "doubling up" in the work of C.A.S. employees. Reeve W. J. Davis pointed out that the superintendent had said a full time adoption worker was needed, yet at the same time he had said there was now only one adoptable child in C.A.S. care. He thought also that more than one worker could use one car and thus effect a saving in car expense.

FURTHER STUDY SUGGESTED

On motion from Reeve Price the matter was referred for further study with the request for a report at the January session.

County assessment, high school boards, etc. were made at the morning session with all of this year's members to the various board being re-appointed. Appointments were as follows: Bay of Quinte High School District, Books Allen; Centre Hastings High School, Ross Hamilton, Thomas Bronson; Deseronto High School Board, Edward Roche and Trenton High School, John R. Reid.

There was considerable discussion on the motion for a short section of Dundas Street in Marmora to be taken into the county road system. Some years ago this section of Dundas Street had belonged to the county system but at the time No. 7 Highway had been put through the sitting reeve had requested the road be left with the town.

This apparently had been forgotten by councillors and it was only during the past summer when the street was about to be paved that it was found the street was not in the county road system. After authority from the Department of Highways, however, the county paved the street at a cost of $1,500 or 50 per cent subsidy on the cost of slightly over $3,000. Marmora village at the same time paved its share of the street, also at a cost of about $1,500.

MAINTENANCE LIGHT

Reeve Ritchie Wells said the request to have the county resume the street was principally in order to have the county snowplow clear the road in winter. "With the street newly paved there should be no other maintenance needed for many years," he said.

Reeve Theodore Cooney of Rawdon opposed the motion on the grounds that the county road system was already elaborate and urged that any additions should be thoroughly considered. With two highways passing through the village he did not think that Marmora ratepayers were over-burdened with road costs.

The general opinion was that as the county had considered the road within its system until the past summer and also because the short stretch of street was a connecting link, that it actually should be county maintained.

The by-law taking the road into the county system passed with only Reeve Cooney and his deputy-reeve J. Spry opposing.

No action was taken on another by-law which would have permitted a discount being paid by the county on pre-payment of taxes by the municipalities.

The request for the discount had been made by Thurlow township which this year had adopted a discount system for early payment of taxes. Councillors were not in agreement in the manner of figuring the discount allowable and the matter was laid over until the January session.

GRANTS NOW PAID

Grants of $75 each to the Women's' Institutes in east, west and north Hastings, were ordered paid, as were grants of $100 each to the Centre and North Hastings High School associations and also to the South Hastings Educational Association.

A grant of $300 was ordered paid to the Maynooth Community Centre, as was a grant of a similar amount to the Hastings Tuberculosis Association.

A bill for fall guard uniforms was referred to the chairman of finance and the warden for checking when it was pointed out the purchase had not been authorized by the finance committee. Councillors felt that tenders should be called for the purchase of uniforms and also that the finance committee should act as the tendering agency.

Cecil Chapman, representative of the provincial police department, spoke briefly in connection with recent legislation providing payment of up to $50 per month for the keep of persons who were awaiting charges and who were kept in private homes.

Where such a person was an old age pensioner $35 of his or her pension could be used toward keep, while the municipality and province would split the remainder. Approval of the municipalities concerned would be necessary before the plan was put into effect.

Mr. Chapman noted that this plan was aimed at providing care for county home patients where the home was filled to capacity. In such cases the patients could be "farmed" out to private homes. In all cases the regular admission papers for entrance to a county home would have to be filled out and to all intents and purposes the patient would be accepted into the county home.

CAUTION NEEDED

Although medical care for such patients was a charge of the county, Reeve Irwin McCoy of Marmora, warned that municipalities should proceed with caution as such an arrangement "could run into a lot of money."

"We must look into the future and remember that our population is growing," he said. "If medical attention is required for a patient in a private home some distance in the country the county would soon be paying through the nose for doctors' calls."

He stated that the county may not be able to continue maintenance of patients in the county home for all that long, but he felt that care of elderly people in such a home was still the answer to the problem.

Two Teen-agers Held for Slaying Two of Parents

DETROIT (AP)—Police held two teenagers for investigation of murder today following the fatal shootings of two of their parents.

The youths are Sonny Lee Fenwick, 17, of Detroit, and stocky 13-year-old Robert Peter Romano of suburban Romulus township.

Police said Fenwick had admitted firing a shotgun blast Thursday night that killed his father, Lee Fenwick, 48, climaxing what the boy said were "almost daily arguments." The boy told them his father came home "drunk."

Young Romano told police the fatal shooting of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Nocc, 35, was an accident.

'Children's Corner' Established By Kindergarten Committee

A dream come true to the parents of the tiny tots in Middleton Park was the inauguration of the "Children's Corner."

Before its conception, the kindergarten committee investigated the matter and received full cooperation from the agencies involved.

An application, through the Department of Public Welfare was necessary before the kindergarten could be opened. The premises to be used had to be inspected by a public health official and the fire chief. All the equipment needed such as desks, chairs and school sundries had to be purchased previous to the opening of the classes.

A teacher had to be found and adequate tuition fees figured out to pay the salary and to purchase equipment. These tasks made the committee a very busy group. Luckily an experienced teacher, Mrs. A. Campbell, B.A., was found and she agreed to accept the position. Mrs. Campbell, who has her Bachelor of Arts degree, had taught years previous experience teaching kindergarten classes in Trenton. At her suggestion texts and supplies, which met the Department of Public Welfare requirements were purchased.

WILL USE CHAPEL HALL

Mr. E. H. Wright, president of the W.A., obtained permission from Station Trenton's Commanding Officer, Captain G. G. Diamond, to use the chapel hall as a classroom and after officials' inspections, supplies were purchased and registrations opened.

Fifty registrations were accepted and the children were divided into two classes, one for the morning and one for the afternoon.

The daily program is planned to meet the following requirements: to provide pre-school aged children physically, emotionally and socially. Divided into periods, the program includes a "play-period", followed by a tidying up session, a "discussion and singing period" at the piano, a "work-time" period which consists of finger-painting, pasting, plasticine modelling, etc., then stories and games, and, after a lunch and rest period comes library studies and time to go home.

The children are taught to play and share toys with each other, also to learn self-responsibility and tidiness by replacing all toys used during their play-time. At "home time" they are encouraged as much as possible to dress themselves without help, thus gaining some independence and learning responsibility.

Cupboards, tables and a coat-rack were received on loan and a sandbox, sand, toybox and toys were donated. Although small tables and chairs are still needed the "Children's Corner" is operating effectively and smoothly.

With good organization and high standards as constant aims of the kindergarten, the parents of Middleton Park, 6-R.D. and Station Trenton can rest assured that their children will be prepared for the more exacting requirements of the grade schools.

The nursery committee consists of Mrs. E. K. Falls as convener, Mrs. V. L. Berg and Mrs. C. H. Bell.

Dump Last Fill For Causeway

By DON MacKENZIE

FORT HASTINGS, N.S. (CP)—Construction crews dumped the last of 10,000,000 tons of rock fill into the fiercely-resisting Strait of Canso late Friday to complete this country's first land link between Cape Breton island and the Nova Scotia mainland.

A tiny knot of about 50 islanders and mainland residents, including tenant - Governor Alistair Fraser, stood in the mud and drizzle on this Cape Breton shore to see the last loads of fill go roaring into the gap.

Two Port Hastings-district Cape Bretoners, members of the dogtired but happy work gang, scrambled through the still-unsettled mud to be among the first across. They were cheered lustily by watchers ashore.

Last week's floor hockey action saw the Desperadoes edge the Bulls 6-5. For the winners Farnsworth fired four goals and an assist, Bacon a goal and an assist and Meyers a goal. For the losers Batchelor had four goals and an assist and Bennett a goal. The stars in this game were Farnsworth and Charleton.

The Dynamos trounced the Kigmites 7-1 to take undisputed possession of first place. Little scored three goals, Ablarde and Ewing each had a goal and an assist, while Foster and Ireland also scored, Buskard scored the lone Kigmite goal. The first major penalty of the season was issued in this game to Buskard and Bishop for fighting. This goes to show you how cleanly the game of floor hockey is played. The stars were Kingston and Ron Jones.

The Bulls and Polecats tied 8-8. Batchelor was the big gun for the Bulls with six goals, Bennett had a goal and an assist, and Alexander a goal. Lucas and Dalrymple are defensive stars for the Polecats. Redner had four goals and an assist, Cherry- potted two goals and two assists while Williams and Gannon each scored a goal. The stars were Batchelor and Redner.

The Kigmites slaughtered the Desperadoes 11-5 to move back into a first place tie with the Dynamos. Buskard fired five goals and two assists, Jackson three goals and an assist, White two goals and Ron Jones one. For the losers Farnsworth had three goals and an assist, Deacon two goals, Hawthorn and Gault an assist. In this game the Kigmite goaltender, Moore, and the captain of the Desperadoes, Farnsworth, received in a stick-swinging duel which resulted in some penalties being thrown.

Both players received five minute penalties. Vaughan served Moore's sentence, while Farnsworth returned back into the game from the cooler his inspiration for revenge was so great that he blasted three goals by Moore in less than two minutes. What a way to win revenge. The stars were Buskard and Farnsworth.

The Dynamos vaulted back into first place by defeating the Polecats 7-3. Ablarde with two goals and an assist, Little and Foster each with one goal and one assist led the winners. Bishop, Ireland and McKay also scored. For the loser Gannon had a goal and an assist, Cherry and Redner each had a goal. The stars were Cherry and Little.

The members of both the senior and junior teams would like to extend a belated word of appreciation to their coaches, Mr. Hannaford, Mr. Ewald and Mr. Bradley for their time and patience spent in coaching and developing B.C.I.'s big red team. An added word of thanks must go to Mr. Thompson and the Boys' Athletic Society for financially helping the senior team reach Peterborough.

Last Wednesday afternoon a great deal of activity was noticed in the boys' gym. Red Townsend and some of his merry crew exercising on the mats. They were preparing for this year's presentation of Kampus Kapers. It promises to be great entertainment for both old and young. The Rockefellers are the only repeat performance from last year's program and that is because of popular demand. Hope you will attend this gay event next March 3 and 4.

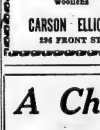
Police Praise Messenger Boy, Bank Teller

TORONTO (CP)—Police praised the bravery of a 16-year-old messenger boy and a young bank teller in two separate robberies which occurred within an hour Friday.

Allan Murray, furniture company messenger, was returning to the company's office when he was attacked by two men and robbed of a $300 payroll he was carrying in an envelope.

Murray said he chased the men down an alley and with the help of a security truck driver, got one of the robbers and held him until police arrived. The other thief got away with the money.

Less than an hour later, Frank Anzelc, teller at a branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, said a bushy-haired man came to his cage, pointed a gun at him and said:



"Don't reach for the buzzer or your gun or I'll drop you dead!"

Anzelc said he fell flat on his face and yelled "Holdup." When he looked up the gunman had fled.

Hospital Request for Grant Turned Down by County

Hastings county councillors took no action Friday on a request from the Belleville General Hospital board of governors for a grant to assist in paying for special services provided for county indigent patients while in hospital.

Thursday Jack Yanover, hospital board chairman, stated that last year the hospital had written off $15,000 for special services provided for county indigents, while for the first ten months of this year over $11,000 had been written off for the same thing.

There was but a brief discussion on the motion calling for council to consider a grant to pay for special services to indigent patients and it was brought out that the hospital had received the sum of $35,000 from the provincial government to apply on hospital renovations and which could also be used to apply against any hospital deficit.

"Anyone with $35,000 in the bank is not exactly broke," opined Reeve Irwin McCoy of Marmora township. "I cannot see where we are obligated."

Earlier Reeve Lloyd Price of Elzevir pointed out that many boarding municipalities had not taken any action on the hospitals' request for a grant for special services for indigents.

In a recent letter Harry Morrow, of Sidney, noted that patients from neighboring counties paid a much higher rate in Belleville hospital which Hastings county patients were not called on to pay.

HIGH FATTENY DAY COST

Reeve Bill Davis pointed to the high per patient day cost in hospitals and asked if paying patients in the county could afford to pay more for indigent patients that they can afford to pay for themselves. "This indigent patient account is fast growing into a racket," he said.

Deputy Reeve Byron Harder of Sidney looked at the matter from the taxpayers' angle and also reminded council that the city has had an average of nine hospitalized patients at the county home for which they paid a per diem rate of but $1.39 per day.

"If there patients were in the hospital as indigents, the city would be paying the shot and the cost would have been nearly $30,000," he said.

"From the taxpayers' point of view the city and the county have much in common."

Reeve Price compared the $20,000 figure suggested by Reeve Harder with the 3092 county indigent patients days at the hospital and said "there was little to choose between them."

Reeve Bernard Hunt referred to the building grant given by the county to the hospital, and now a maintenance grant was asked.

He said he had seen nothing to show that the Belleville hospital required a special grant and suggested if the special provincial grant received by the hospital was applied to the deficit there would be no deficit.

A motion by Reeve Hunt that no action be taken on the request for the hospital grant was carried.

Women's Institute

MARMORA WI.

Marmora — Marmora Women's Institute held their Christmas meeting on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. F. R. Wells.

The president, Mrs. Hogarth Sabine, was in the chair, and there was a good attendance.

The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance on hand in the bank. Two thank-you notes were received from members whom the branch had remembered in their illnesses. It was decided to remember a sick member at Christmas.

As program convener, Mrs H. Vanstone took over. Some Christmas carols were heartily joined in, with Mrs. F. R. Wells, at the piano. Miss Grace Warren read a poem in keeping with the season.

The annual exchange of gifts never hurt anyone. Of course, if they save anything on this arrangement and pocket it . . . well, as I said it's their money.

"Their income tax returns are complicated. Some most accountants prefer to call these expense advances gross income and then list expenses in detail. If the man's expenses run higher than what the boss allowed for expenses, the man stands to save some on the tax, which gives him an advantage over the man with an unlimited account.

KEEP A RECORD

"Speaking of taxes, it's wise to keep a record of everything you spend while on business. If your tax return is ever questioned (and the returns of traveling men often are, just as a matter of course) your receipts are your proof that you spent what you said you did.

"In particular, you should have receipts for all car and truck maintenance and repairs; transportation tickets and fares; hotel bills; and entertainment costs.

"Almost everything but trolley fares and night club entertainment days, and for tax record purposes, most wise concerned taxpayers prefer to charge everything in sight. This practice also eliminates the necessity of carrying large quantities of cash or going to the bank frequently to replenish your allotment of getting checks cashed in strange places.

"Charge books belong to chains or groups organized for credit purposes so you can always have them send the bill to you if you choose.

"All oil companies have charge accounts, as do railroads, airlines, and most bus lines. Egypt, and almost anything else can be charged to the hotel bill (a Texas to New York once charged a Cadillac to it).

"It may take a little time and trouble to get so many accounts opened, and you have to be diligent about getting them out of your expense money (not your wife's household account) every month but it's worth it for the sake of both convenience and taxes.

"Under the law, you cannot answer questions about places to go and routes to cover, and suggest that readers contact their auto club, oil company, or any travel agent for information of this sort. However, they will try to answer, in this column, or by mail, specific questions on the "how-to" of travel. Address in care of this newspaper, and please allow at least four weeks for a reply.

Correction

In Wednesday's paper a news item in the Carmel report stated that the Women's Institute put on a short course entitled "Your Food and Your Ledger." This should have read, "Your Food and Your Figure." The Ontario Intelligencer regrets causing any embarrassment to the Women's Institute by the error.

Expense Account—Good and Bad

By SHIRLEY AND BOB SLOANE

(Editor's Note—This is the second of a series of articles on travelling for a career.)

"There are some more ideas from the Old Drummer's bag of them, aimed at the man starting out as a career as a commercial traveler:

"The traveling man's best friend and worst enemy is his expense account. It can help him live better than he's ever lived in his life, and it can cost him his job or even send him to jail if he abuses it.

"There are two kinds of expense accounts: the 'full reimbursement kind, where you're allowed all the money you need for living expenses, transportation, and entertainment; and the 'per diem,' where you get so much a day to do with as you see fit.

"The unlimited account is favored by very big corporations in the 90 per cent tax bracket, who would rather have their representatives spend it, in the hopes they'll bring in enough business to make up for it, than give it to the government. It is also relied upon by firms whose representatives must rely heavily on making impressions with such items as $50-a-day hotel suites and night club entertainment.

CAN BE A HEADACHE

"This type of account can be a headache to the traveling man because it requires him to keep meticulous records of everything he spends for his company. He must pass on to the firm 'detailed accountings and receipts for every dollar.' His evenings are often consumed with this bookkeeping.

"Moreover, it puts temptation in his way. It's easy to say you spent $5 dollars for dinner when you spent only five dollars (restaurants don't usually give receipts). Some firms don't consider $10 a day for food exorbitant, but a man can eat decently for half that. He needn't tip lavishly, though he can say he does. Why not, he reasons, save a little here and there, and pocket the difference?

"There are two reasons why not: one is that it is stealing, and the other is that in case you're found those who believes it's not stealing, unless you get caught, rest assured that all swindle sheet peddlers get caught sooner or later. There are too many records and cross-checks.

"No man reaches the top of the heap by stealing from his boss and the fact that his boss can afford it has no bearing, morally or legally.

SIMPLIFIES INCOME TAX

"One advantage of the 'full expense account is that it simplifies the traveler's income tax, since he claims, truthfully, that all his expenses were assumed by his firm. Technically, he need not even report his expenses to the IRS.

"The 'per diem' account is usually favored by firms whose men operate on a drawing account (that is, salary and expense paid in advance, then either at the end of both deducted from commissions earned). Most men on such an arrangement prefer this kind of account, since you can't cheat anyone but yourself. The higher the expenses the less the commissions, and vice versa.

"Few men live lavishly on a per diem expense account, but about they're spending their own money, they soon learn how to live comfortably and economically, which concluded the program.

The hostess served refreshments.

Queen Alexander H-S Assoc. Holds Meeting

On Tuesday evening, Queen Alexandra Home and School Association held the December meeting in the school assembly hall.

Before the meeting opened, the two grades 8 girls sold homemade candy; the money to go to the Junior Red Cross.

Christmas songs were played prior to the meeting. Mrs. Tooth, the president, presided and thanked those who attended the central committee meeting. Mrs. Robert Jones read the report of the central committee.

It was decided to give a cheque to the Minor hockey teams.

Room attendance was won by Mrs. Smith's room.

Mr. Buchanan had charge of the social hour, and with the singing of Christmas carols and games, a fine time was enjoyed by all.

Refreshments were served.

Bride of Seven Months Adopts Strange Hobby

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mrs. Rosemary Mona, bride of seven months, has adopted her husband's hobby and is believed to be British Columbia's first frogwoman.

"I knew it was considered the most dangerous sport there is," she said, "and everytime I saw Beryl disappear into the black water, my heart just did flips in terror.

"I knew I was in for the same panic every single weekend, summer or winter, so I decided to solve the mysteries of the relatively unknown world of the sea."

Her first venture was actual skin diving, done only in warmer climates usually with a very just-like-it's-worth-it for the sake of both convenience and taxes.

Mrs. Mona said she cannot answer questions about places to go and routes to cover, and suggest that readers contact their auto club, oil company, or any travel agent for information of this sort. However, they will try to answer, in this column, or by mail, specific questions on the "how-to" of travel. Address in care of this newspaper, and please allow at least four weeks for a reply.

INFANT HEALTH

Attractively Successful Bazaar, Tea Held by Ladies' Aux. B. of R.T.

Though the last bazaar of the season, that sponsored yesterday afternoon by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen in the Y.M.C.A., was by no means the least of many fine bazaars which took place during the autumn. The attractive booths were decked in the Christmas motif in red, green and white, which are also the colors of the Auxiliary. A tall, green archway with sprays of evergreen formed a most welcoming adjunct to nicely appointed tea room for its little guest tables with their white cloths, and little metallic candle centres surrounded by tiny gleaming globes of silver, red, green and rose.

LOVELY TEA TABLE

The tea table with its cutwork linen cloth was lovely with its centrepiece of snow-white sleigh, laden with sprays of red and green princess feather and glistening silver globes, and with a miniature reindeer. Flanking this were tri-branched silver candelabra with red, white and green candles, again emphasizing the Yuletide season, and repeated out the same color colors of the Auxiliary.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. J. Smith, president of the Auxiliary, and Mrs. J. Aggy, (who is also a member of the Auxiliary, and a warm handclasp, after which they passed at the desk of the collector of dues, Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. M. Hearns. The tea room assistants were Mrs. Vera Reynolds and Mrs. Dorothy Diment, while those who presided at the table included Mrs. D. Brown, Mrs. Sara Morgan, Mrs. Hobbs, Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Drury and Mrs. Cras. Those serving were: Miss Jean Fleming, Mrs. Smith, Audrey Flander, Vera Lahange, Irene Burrows, Dorothy Clark, Lorraine Cook, Edda Bickard, Lillian Willerton and Christine Brethour, while in the kitchen were Freda Noyes, Mary Hayalip and Betty Simmons.

FINE HOMECOOKING

The homecooking table was decorated with a "Merry Christmas" centre, flanked with red poinsettias and smiling Santa faces. Those in charge were Jennie Quinney, F. Coleman and June Wilson. There was a fine assortment of confections all nicely arranged, consisting of chocolate pies with golden crust of meringue, pumpkin pies, lemon filled cup cakes, raspberry tarts, cup cakes, cherry topped; a delicious looking Christmas cake, which would go to the holder of the lucky ticket, who chanced to be Mrs. Houston.

Besides these were tiny, round short breads, little clover-leaf tarts bearing their quota of little candy canes and other sweeties. This booth was nicely decorated with bells, frosted pine cones, loops of red, poinsettia baskets, and centred by a golden sleigh drawn by golden reindeer driven by a shining red Santa.

A gleaming Christmas tree, decked with little ornaments had a bevy of stockings, toys and toys, and packages in all shapes for children. This was in charge of Mrs. L. Berry.

PRETTY AS A DREAM

The doll booth was as pretty as a dream, with a little doll dressed as some in pink satin; others in white organdy; plaid skirts; print dresses, crinolines, a real doll lay disconsolately waiting for a little owner; then there were the watches, mouth organs, little sweaters, boxes of soap in the shape of Mary's Little Lamb' and a lovely doll bassinette in blue net over blue satteen with pink ribbon trim, complete to the new baby doll in its white dress and white crocheted bonnet. This would also become the prize of the lucky ticket holder, Mrs. Ina Mrs. Audrey Flander, Mrs. M. Beaul, and Mrs. B. Hennessey conversed there.

The winner of the door prize, a turkey was Mrs. Woodcock; and a basket of poinsettias, Mrs. B. Anderson.

An attractive bazaar and tea, nicely conveyed bringing much praise to the convenors, Mrs. Ina Addy and Mrs. Irene Burrows.

Hubby Advertises Happy Marriage

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Philip Lucido was tired of those debt-collection letters piling up in his mailbox and "I just thought I'd put one in about a happy marriage."

That was Monday. The Lucidos' phone has been ringing ever since from congratulatory friends and strangers' alike.

The ad, certainly one of a kind in the list of special notices reflecting broken homes and shattered dreams, was the first of its kind in the 75-year history of the Post-Dispatch. It stated:

"I am responsible for all debts and obligations of my wife, Charlotte Y., both present and future, and am more than happy to be the provider for a woman who has given me six lovely children and, with an ever abundance of love and care, has made the past 21 years of loving kindness and nicest years of my life.

"MY GRATITUDE"

"On this, the eve of our 21st wedding anniversary, I wish to publicly express my gratitude." (signed) Philip C. Lucido."

Mrs. Lucido, who still has a schoolgirl figure, said her husband had promised to buy her the 39th birthday "that would be a complete surprise."

"He found the ad and shoved it to me, and, well, I just cried right there," Mrs. Lucido said.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TELL YOUR DAUGHTER TO CONSULT ALCOHOLICS AN. NONYMOUS FIRST

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My daughter is married to a heavy drinker. He comes home every day, calling her vile names, breaking the furniture and throwing the supper on the floor and walls. Then, if he wakes up hungry around one or two in the morning, he screams for something to eat, saying he had no supper, after he had thrown it all on the floor, and makes her get up and get him something.

He has my daughter and my grandchild nervous wrecks. I would take them in with me, but I am afraid he would come here and start trouble.

I still hope things may work out, but, in case they do not, will you please tell me where my daughter can obtain expert legal advice if needed? — Mrs. H.

Dear Mrs. H.:

I would advise your daughter to get in touch immediately with the Alcoholics Anonymous group nearest to her. She might find a group in her area has a division composed of wives and other relatives of heavy drinkers who get together periodically to discuss their problems and help each other find the best way to handle their own individual cases. Through this, she may gain a better understanding of just what she is up against and how to deal with it.

This she should try before thinking about leaving her husband, which I understand would be her purpose in consulting a lawyer.

However, if she eventually does with legal advice, and does not know any good lawyer, she might get in touch with the Legal Aid Society in the big city near her and ask them to recommend one.

THEIR "REPUTATIONS ARE AT STAKE" — IS THERE REASON WHY?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are three 15-year-old girls who are close friends. We live in a small town where everyone knows everyone else.

Until a few weeks ago, we all had steady boy friends, but the boys had vulgar ways and we broke off with them. Now everyone shuns us because rumors are circulating to the effect that we are members of a sex club and that one of us is pregnant. She is almost at the point of a nervous breakdown.

Naturally, these rumors are untrue, but no one will believe us, and our reputations are at stake. We have reason to believe these stories were started by the boys we broke up with. How can we combat this situation?

— T.B.T.

Dear T.B.T.:

If you girls live in a small town where everybody knows everybody else, then I would think that people would have been hard put not to know what kind of girls you are. Don't you think so? It is hard to believe that your reputations could be at stake if people have always seen you behaving like nice girls.

Or is it possible that your associates left with boys who were not the right sort could have given the impression that you were not quite as careful about your boy friends as you should have been? Also, were any of you ever foolish enough to go places with these boys that were not suitable for you to visit, are you sure your behavior in public with them was always everything it should have been?

The first thing for you to do is to look back over the period during which you went with these boys and see if you have ever given people reason to disapprove of you. If not, then I suggest that you just say to anyone who criticizes you that you made mistake in picking your boy friends, that you regretted it and consequently broke off with them, and that you intend to be more careful in future. Then try to dismiss the whole thing from your minds.

In general, disregard any criticism that you may hear, and make sure that you are specially careful about what you do in future and about choosing your boy friends. I would say that the girl who was rumored to be pregnant had less to worry about that any of you because, if she is not, time will certainly prove the gossip-mongers to be wrong.

Never forget that reputations are built on what people see of your actions, your friends and your attitude toward others. If all these are what they should be, no rumors can ever harm you, for no one will believe them.

YOU CAN'T MAKE THESE GIRLS INTO LIKING EACH OTHER

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have two very good girl friends who do not like each other. I have tried to reason with them, but in vain. One of them is 12 years old and the other is 14, and I am 13, too. I like both these girls equally, and would like some advice on how we can all be friends together.

— J.M.J.

Dear J.M.J.:

I don't think you'll get anywhere by trying to reason with these two girls. You see, it does happen that sometimes two people just don't "take to" each other, as the saying goes, and it's not possible to make them like each other by arguing with them about it.

You know how it is when you just don't like some of the things your mother puts on the dinner table. No matter how much she argues with you, and tells you how good they are, you still just don't like them. Maybe you're even more determined about it because she argues. And that's the way it is with people sometimes. You just can't talk one person into liking another.

I really think the less you say to them, the better. Don't try to force them into doing things together with you, but have such good times with each of them, that sooner or later, perhaps, they'll decide it's silly not to make a threesome. And, in the meantime, if either of them says something nice about the other, be sure and tell that other one. See what an "ambassador of good will" you can be, for if you learn early to be tactful with people, it's going to help you all your life.

ANSWER:

(To Evelyn T. continued from yesterday): You ask for a basic cake mix. It takes one for a 10c-lb. batch. The ingredients for cake mixes are not all to be bought in retail outlets: dehydrated shortening, vanillin, egg white powder. Other dry yeast ferments such as whole or skim milk powder, whole or egg yolk powder are also used. The shortening is mixed into the dry ingredients to insure a fine "crumb". It is possible to do it in the home but impractical. I'm sure you know if you want to pursue this idea.

The minimum of make-up should be worn. When a girl is dressed entirely in white, vivid rouge and lipstick are too conspicuous. A natural pink or beige is and out of our house call themselves not suggest artifice.

If a girl has a dry skin and has been accustomed to going to bed cold-creamed to her ears and eyelocks, yet shudders at the thought of her Prince Charming seeing her that way, she can substitute a greaseless skin softener or use her cream-and-lotion which is equally effective as a complexion aid.

BRIDAL BEAUTY

Today we offer a few dos and don'ts to the girl who is attaching bound. Naturally, she wants to look her loveliest on her wedding day. She will be radiant, of course, because she is happy. She may be nervous and excited but she will have starlight in her eyes and will be walking on air. It is not surprising that the bride is always beautiful.

She should make all her plans far in advance so there will be no last minute rush. If she is a curly girl she should have her permanent wave at least a fortnight before so she will have time for a second shampoo. Then her hair becomes more relaxed, falls into some wide waves and sculptured curls.

It is a mistake to try out a new hairdo for the wedding day since the tresses may not fall into place —and she may be dissatisfied with the simpler the arrangement the better when the hair is crowned with a bridal veil.

The minimum of make-up should be worn. When a girl is dressed entirely in white, vivid rouge and lipstick are too conspicuous. A natural pink or beige is and out of our house call themselves the "clueless clique" or "clueless clucks". Canadian Models Are Praised By Store Manager

By PAULINE KENDREDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—A New York store fashion specialist took one look at Canadian models in an all-Canadian fashion show and said: "umm—dreamy!"

"I wish they grew girls like that down here," said Ethel Frankau of Manhattan's greater Bergdorf Goodman store as she watched the six Montreal models at work on the fashion range.

They were showing off 44 gowns designed by members of the Canadian Association of Couturiers for the first Canadian fashion preview in the U.S.

The six models, Muriel Stevenson, Mary Hill, Jacqueline Gilbert, Mary Lou Dryden, Helen Reddy and Leslie Kimber, drew nearly as much comment as designers' creations.

FRESH LOOK

"They all have that fresh, healthy beautiful look every American envies," said television fashion commentator Nancy Craig. Miss Craig's New York TV show later this week will feature 13 of the Canadian outfits.

Canadian textile manufacturers who supplied most of the fabrics to the designers came in for their share of glory too.

Anne Veits Clarke, fashion writer for the New York World Telegram and Sun found, "linens in exotic colors especially lovely."

Some of the store buyers were interested in buying Canadian designs—yet. They thought in five years, after a Canadian fashion industry has been clearly established, that they might start beating a path northward.

Meanwhile, the 12 Montreal, Toronto and St. Catharines designers whose gowns appeared in the fashion show started flying impatient Christmas cards, the wife's or the husband's name comes first. That is, Mary and John Brown or the husband's name comes first. That is, Mary and John Brown or John and Mary are all right.

Mary and John Brown is the correct form . . . more courteous to Mary. Since the names are less printed, there is no question about signature-form. (When names are hand-written, then the one signing the card should courteously, write her or his name last. Mary should write John and Mary; John should write Mary and John.)

A TEENAGER ASKS TWO INTRODUCTION - QUESTIONS

Dear Miss Beecham:

I am 15 years old, and I have two questions about introductions that are bothering me.

1. How should I introduce my mother to a boy friend? Should I say Mother—Boy friend?

2. How should I introduce my father to a boy friend? Should I say Gloria M.

1. Please may I tell you first that your question is worded incorrectly. You introduce anyone to your mother . . . not the reverse. You introduce your mother to a girl friend. That is, mention your mother first in the introduction. Here is the correct form for your introduction: "Mother, this is Peggy Smith. Or: "Mother, here is Helena Martin, who is in my Sunday School class."

2. And remember, too, that your father is not introduced to a boy . . . the boy is introduced to your father. Mention your father first in the introduction. Like this, for example: "Father, this is Tommy Graham."

NEVER A 'MUST' TO GIVE A SHOWER

Dear Mrs. Beecham:

I've never been a member of a wedding party, but since a very dear friend of mine has asked me to be maid of honor in her wedding in May, I want to help her in explaining to me about my costumes. She has chosen the costumes of the attendants, but they pay for their own—and this I had known. But some mutual friends of hers and mine tell me that I give a shower, some time during the month preceding the wedding. From several points of view this would not be easy for me, and I'm so worried about it that I'm wondering if I should even now explain to her that I can't be her maid of honor. — Edith C.

Please do know that, in the first place, a shower is never that the honor attendant, or anyone else, "must" give a shower for the bride-to-be. And since you and the bride-to-be are such dear and close friends, I am sure that you will want to give a shower, would you know that circumstances are such, please consider for a moment declining the happiness and honor of being maid of honor. If you feel a real urge to do something about a shower (despite the fact that you can't), you might ask the other attendants to join with you in giving the shower. You might limit the smallest and simplest of showers with a group of the bride's most intimate friends.

Wellington on the Lake

PEACE ON EARTH

The winter world is robed in white,
The moonlight earth is still,
The sunshine spreads a golden light
Over lake and valley and hill.
And in our hearts we catch the strain
By herald angels sung—
"Peace, Peace on Earth, Good-will to men"
When all the world was young.

But blare of trumpet, beat of drum,
Have drowned the peaceful theme,
The martial tread, the victor's shout
Have ruled our spirit long;
Oh! that the Prince of Peace might reign
In all the glorious Christmas light—
Bid war-weary hearts be still.
—HELEN B. ANDERSON.

WELLINGTON — We read of the early return of many Canadian soldiers from Korea. We sincerely hope this may be an indication of the coming of world peace.

Among those who are seeking a warm welcome are Mr. and Mrs. George Valleau, who recently left for Florida.

Mrs. Ralph Margetson and young son of Melville, are leaving soon by plane for Korea. We wish she will spend six weeks with her mother and sister.

Dr. and Mrs. Bradley, former residents here, have purchased a home in New Wellington and will take up their residence here. They will be welcomed by many friends.

The Christmas entertainment of the United Church Sunday School will be held on the evening of Dec. 17.

Mrs. J. T. Mathers, Winnipeg, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Ian Boyle, for Sunday evening. Mrs. Boyle and her sister were tea-hour guests of Miss Mary Lumb and Gladys.

The women of India shown in the United Church Sunday evening were interesting and attractive. A good evening was spent. This was in charge of Mrs. Gerald Stenburg, Mrs. Fred Wade, Mrs. Wesley Wallace, pianist, and Mrs. E. Mayhew, pianist, who closed with the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name". Mr. Norman Morden managed the projector. The pictures showed the progress of mission effort in India.

Mrs. T. Douglas, Ottawa, spent a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Vanderwater, Oak Street.

Mrs. Valleau has been very ill and her many friends are anxious for her recovery. Her daughter, Mrs. (Rev.) Smith of Campbellford, has been with her.

The guild of Christ Church Hillier, held a very successful tea and bazaar on Friday in the Town Hall, Hillier, on Friday afternoon. Tasteful and bright and drew a large crowd. The counters displaying a variety of articles on sale were attractive and presided over by many members of the guild. Guests were welcomed by the president, Mrs. Weese, assisted by Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Warner McFaul. Among the obliging sales ladies were noticed Edith McFaul, Mrs. Panting, Mrs. C. Benway, Mrs. R. Margetson, Mrs. L. E. Leavens, Mrs. A. Weir, Mrs. Jordan, Mrs. Annie Jones, and Hugh Weir and Glenn Guests were daintily served at the tea tables. Those attended from Wellington, including Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Heaven, Mrs. Mabel Bell, Mrs. H. B. Anderson, Mrs. W. A. Devern, Mrs. L. Greer, Mrs. (Dr.) Thompson, Mrs. Ida McFaul, Mrs. W. H. Morton and Mrs. Fred Morton. Cards were enjoyed in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Wilbee, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilbee and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Carley were among those who attended the Yecht Club meeting in Trenton, Tuesday night.

From a fine volume, entitled "The Oxford Dictionary of Quotations" a Christmas gift from The Toronto Star, I quote the following:

"Of all the world is young, lad
And all the trees are green
And every goose a swan, lad,
And every lass a queen;
Then hey for boot and horse, lad,
And round the world away,
Young blood must have its course, lad,
And every dog his day.

When all the world is old, lad,
And all the trees are trees,
And all the sport is stale, lad,
And all the roads run down;
Creep home and take your place there,
The spent and maimed among,
God grant you find one face there
You loved when all was young."
—CHARLES KINGSLEY.

Garden Notes

Bedding Down for Winter

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

There is a cold rain falling tonight and I think we have bedded down the roses for the winter. In case you have not done this chore there is still time, but better not count on more than a few days. This has been an early fall and we are thankful there has been time to finish up several odd jobs which will lighten spring work.

The roses have six to eight inches of soil hilled up around them. Hybrid teas, hybrid perpetuals and new climbers need this protection. In fact climbers should be laid along the ground as should standard or tree roses, and covered for the winter.

To do this cut the roots on one side about one foot out from the canes, and dig gently to the ground. Cover with leaves or straw and wrap in burlap roofing paper, or fiber glass.

Exposed roots and canes must be well covered, as the ground is frozen you might cover the rose plant with a rough wooden box turned down over it.

Experimental station in cold sections favor this box covering for climbers and tree roses. Otherwise anchor the leaves or straw with evergreen branches or burlap.

HOPE BATH SALT POISON

Save a few waxed milk cartons and use them to hold some poisoned grain, squash, pumpkin seeds. Lay them on their side and place where mice can reach them. And, hope hard that the mice will choose the bait rather than rose bark for winter meals.

A lime sulphur spray for the ground around roses and exposed canes will guard against black spot spores.

Where the perennial border is exposed to sweeping winds, it will be well to cover the crowns of tender plants with a mulch. Hardwood leaves mat and smother the plants. Rushed baskets turned upside down, or a cone of roofing paper well anchored, will provide further protection. Light branches of evergreen boughs would hold leaves, straw, or leaves in place. When fibre glass is used, wear long sleeves and gloves. If the glass touches the skin it can be most irritating.

Now that the Chrysanthemums are finished outdoors the stocks should be cut off and burned. They often carry over disease spores.

PLANTS LAST LONGER

Indoors cut chrysanthemums can be made to last three weeks with the right care. When you receive the mums remove the leaves from the lower five inches of stem. Pound lightly to break up the stems for two inches (this allows the inner canal to take up more water).

Wrap the upper stems, leaves and flowers in paper and place in the cleaned portion in hot, not boiling, water for five minutes. Plunge the flowers in cold water almost up to the blooms and allow to stand for one hour before arranging.

The first arrangement might include huckleberry leaves and dyed grasses. You can buy the grasses in a small sheaf from the florist in solid or mixed colors. The huckleberry leaves may be bought almost any time of the year. These will last and last.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

WINTER-PROOF WINGS

A combination of certain features determines whether or not it is possible for a bird to survive during cold, stormy weather. The type of bill is important, and also the type of wings. The large, broad wings of a Bald Eagle are suitable for sustained flight while the bird soars over open spaces in search of prey far below; the long, slender, bent wings of a Tern are constructed for hovering, fast gliding, unobstructed flight, and making quick turns while pursuing a fish. What shape would be most suitable for avoiding snow-laden branches, rising rapidly from a snowy surface, and making a quick retreat when necessary?

Short, rounded wings are ideal for our Canadian winter. Fortunately, the wings of a Junco, Redpoll, and various other members of the family with conical bills are built on this pattern, giving a decided advantage to these birds. Obstructions can easily be dodged, whether they be leafy branches of summer or, snows of winter.

An Albatross, longest-winged known bird, if caught and placed on the deck of a ship is a prisoner, because there is not sufficient space for the lengthy run it is obliged to take before it can rise above the bulwarks.

WINTER—PROOF WINGS

But a Tree Sparrow, with its short, rounded wings, has been seen taking off from a window feeding tray that gave it a run of only ½ inch. The short wings did not interfere with the edges of the tray, and because it had a distinct aid in making a vertical leap of four inches. We can see, therefore, that such wings are winter-proof, easily manipulated in snowy terrain.

Resident in parts of Canada for the full 12 months, Quail, Grouse, and Pheasants must be able to live in a green world in summer and a white world in winter. The short, rounded wings of these game birds take them dashing through brush or snow equally well, can lift them straight up through uneven, snowy ground to a bough where they obtain their favorite food buds, or with rapid flapping speed them away from enemies. The short, fowl-like bills of these birds are able to pick up seeds that stand above the snow.

Artificial Spawning Bed Used By Trout in Lake Opeongo

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario biologist crowned seven years of work this year by building an artificial spawning bed so much like the real thing that the fish liked it and used it.

Ontario government officials say they believe this is the first time it has been done successfully in an open lake for lake trout which are choosy about their spawning grounds.

Dick Martin, the biologist, built the bed of stones in Lake Opeongo, largest body of water in Ontario's Algonquin Park, Ontario's 2,741-square-mile forest, fish and wildlife preserve southeast of North Bay.

His work is part of the research program of the fish and wildlife branch of the Ontario department of lands and forests which hopes to make practical use of artificial lake trout spawning beds in lakes that now have no trout or where natural beds are no longer of any use because of shifts in water level.

Reg. Johnston, the man in charge of the research program, doesn't think it will help at all in the Great Lakes where the destructive sea lamprey gets the major share of the blame for virtually wiping out commercial catches of lake trout in some areas.

Johnston says that the 23-year-old Martin succeeded on his spawning bed this year because he went under water to see what it looked like to a trout.

For six years Martin built beds that from the surface of the water looked the same as natural spawning grounds.

This year he borrowed skin-diving equipment and went down to take an under-water look. From there his artificial beds looked much different than natural beds. He set about to make it look like the real thing.

The biologists say they're still not certain that fish accepted the artificial bed because of the way it was put together. Martin took some stones from a natural spawning bed and these may have carried some scent which led the trout to the new spot. In another year or so biologists hope to have the final answer.

Many lakes with suitable water lack lake trout because there's no place for them to spawn. In others the problem is lower water levels due to such projects as hydro-electric power developments. In many cases the old natural spawning areas now are on dry land above the high-water mark.

Johnston says surveys indicate there are about as many lake trout in inland lakes as ever.

The Great Lakes are a different matter, in Lake Huron, excluding Georgian bay, commercial fishermen caught up to 3,000,000 pounds of lake trout annually as recently as 1937. Six or seven years later the take went down to 3,000 pounds. So far this year they've caught 112 pounds. Last year they took only 15 pounds.

Government biologists think that some unknown disease first reduced the numbers and then the ugly lamprey moved in and finished the job.

NICE TO WIN!

In this "Your-guess-is-as-good-as-mine" senior "B" cluster, you never know what is going to happen. Refuting the boast of one Michael J. Rodden to the effect the Kingston Goodyears and Cornwall Colts "are in a class by themselves, with Whitby, Clinton and Belleville being evenly matched" came surprising bolts from the blue.

The Goodyears, who do homage to horseshoe gods prior to every game, had the jaybirds shellacked out of them by the Brockville Marcdonas the other night, while last night up in Peterborough the surprising lads from the Kawarthas handed the proud Cornwall Colts their second defeat of the season by a 3-2 count. That is the second time the cellar-dwellar from Perdueville have made the Colts whinny in defeat.

Following that near civil war Clinton staged with Whitby in the American arena the other night, the Comets went down to a decisive 8-3 defeat before the Goodyears last night, while our side came up with a sparkling two-way effort to hang a 5-3 setback on the "Wrens" of Blair.

Post-games reckoning after last night's smoke of battle had cleared sees the Goodyears out in front by three points with the Colts now hanging grimly to second slot with 20.

The Memos are hot on their trail with 18 points and sole possession of third place while Clinton is just outside the money with 16. Whitby is breathing down the Comets' necks with 15, while last off the pace is Brockville with 11. The up-and-coming Petes bring up the rear with nine points in this anything-can-happen league.

The Memos were full value for their win last night going in high gear both ways and practically sewing up the game with three quickies near the end of the first period. It was fast, hard-checking hockey with both goalies turning in fine efforts.

One of the prettiest scoring plays this reporter has seen all season was that staged by Jake Wade and Davy Jones in the second heat. Jake broke swiftly in that graceful free-wheeling stride from his blueline, wove his way to outside Jones' line and lobbed a perfect pass to Jones. The forward rounded Jake's skating effort and raced in close to deke Courtney for the score.

The entire Memos' team came up with a good effort with Ted DeGray and Vern Geyer deserving better scoring fates. The Bowman and Day were firing, while Jake Wade, Hob Macy and Bob Wilson were hard-hitting bulwarks behind the blueline. Doran, Arnie Dugan, in fact, the whole squad deserves special mention.

The team left for Brockville this afternoon where they tangle with the dangerous Maplecrosman tonight. They then trek to Clinton for a Sunday afternoon game.

TRENT VALLEY HOCKEY

While it was announced by the district press that Wellington has dropped out of competition in the Trent Valley League, Johnny Mowat clung desperately to a last ribbon of hope that the village would be able to ice a team. League president Art Duncan informed the department yesterday that the village team had been given twenty-four hours to forward an entry, since the schedule has been drawn up.

The loop will be divided into two sections again this season, with Point Anne, Belleville Juniors, Picton, Trenton and Trenton RCAF comprising the senior division and Marmora, Campbellford, Stirling and Batawa lining up in the northern division. Hastings and Havelock teams withdrew from the Valley loop and will do their puchrasing in a Peterborough district league.

The league gets under way on December 12 with Campbellford and Marmora tangling in the northern section. On December 15, Stirling and Batawa see action as do Flyers and Point Anne and Trenton and Belleville Juniors.

Belleville and Marmora arenas, equipped with artificial ice plants, will be the action amphitheatres until Ole Man Weather decides to put the ice in natural ice rinks.

Vice-president Lee Bradshaw of Point Anne, told this department the other day that all players of the Valley loop must be bonafide residents of the town or district for which they play and that clubs can ice eight players less than senior calibre or intermediates, but can ice only six in any game. In the case of industrial teams like Point Anne and Batawa, employment constitutes residence.

Players who are not signed but appear in a team's uniform at the end of the season are automatically the team's property and must be released before being eligible to play for another team in the league. Players held inactive by this ruling will have the right to appeal to the executive for a ruling on their case.

The two divisions will be separate entities within the league and each division will conduct its own schedule and playoffs. There will be no interlocking schedule. All players must participate in at least three games with his club in order to be eligible for playoffs.

According to a note here, Point Anne must notify all players practicing with them and whom they do not intend to use, that they will be definitely "out" as they are holding up other teams.

However, as was mentioned before, the ancient and noble league gets under way officially in Belleville next Wednesday with a double-header. Vice-prexy Bradshaw says the thing will be done right what with opening ceremonies, the Trenton RCAF Band and other color. The Point Anne team clashes with the Flyers in the first half of the twin bill while Belleville's new junior squad gets its baptism of fire against the Trenton entry.

The Pointers are said to have as strong if not stronger, representation than the club which went to the league finals last year, while Dame Rumor has it that the Flyers have more than one ex-pro player on its roster. Picton is an unknown quantity thus far, but if Wellington does not ice an entry the Pictonians will likely get the pick of the county puck-chasing ability.

Trades Follow Secret Meeting Of League Governors, Owners In Share-the-Wealth Effort

By The Canadian Press

A big, likable veteran who ranks among the top leftwingers in the National Hockey League and one of the game's most promising rookies both headed for Chicago today to help pull the Black Hawks out of a jam.

Harry Watson, a six-foot - one clutch man with Toronto Maple Leafs for eight seasons, and rookie rightwinger Eddie Litzenberger of Montreal Canadiens were traded in the last-place Hawks Friday, the latest principals in the league's share-the-wealth campaign.

The Hawks admitted that they now have the talent for a winning club and that it's up to coach Frankie Eddolls and general manager Tommy Ivan to produce it.

SOME SURPRISE

Although it was rumored for weeks that Watson was good trade bait, the switch came as a bit of a surprise because of his consistently-good years with Toronto. The deals were announced in Toronto after a secret meeting of NHL governors and club owners. Both needed room for straight cash, amounts unannounced.

Litzenberger, 22, and the 31-year-old Watson have been traded for the Hawks. In previous seasons, Litzenberger's attendance and mostly last-place teams, Chicago received only "fringe" players or cast-offs from other clubs.

Managing director Frank Selke of Canadiens said he had no further trades:

"Everyone tables to lose and when your strengths other teams it makes it more difficult to win. But if we make changes we aim to help the weaker teams, the only way we can do it is with it star. That's why Canadiens are sacrificing their best young prospect."

"EVERY EFFORT"

Selke said he would make "every effort" to have Litzenberger, a top candidate for rookie-of-the-year honors, in Toronto in time for Chicago's game against the second-place Leafs tonight. In two other engagements, the fourth-place Boston Bruins meet the third-running Canadiens at Montreal and New York Rangers go against the third-place Detroit Red Wings.

Watson, 200-pound native of Saskatoon, who started with Toronto in 1946 in a deal that sent Bailly Taylor to the Wings, won't play tonight, but he's probably there was a stipulation in the sale.

Litzenberger, 5-11 and 180 pounds, is a native of Winnipeg. He's probably see some action against the Wings at Chicago Sunday.

Marguerite Norris, president of the Red Wings, made the announcement on the deals and said they were in line with "efforts to help Chicago out of a crisis."

NORRIS HAPPY

Club officials were happy. James D. Norris, co-owner of the Hawks, said:

"It's a big stride in bringing Chicago up to the level of two or three other teams in the league. If we don't have a representative club now, then it will be my fault, plus that of Tommy Ivan and Frank Eddolls. In no sport has there been such sudden shinking."

The Hawks have won only four games in 28 starts this season. They have 12 points and trail the fifth-place Rangers by eight points.

Watson was averaged 20 goals a season with Leafs, was not floored by the change.

"I've got to have stayed in one place for so long. This was my second home with Leafs. They've treated me royally."

Toronto coach King Clancy commented: "We're losing a great hockey player."

Litzenberger, a product of Neudorf, Sask., joined Canadiens from the senior Montreal Royals of the Quebec Hockey League. He played two games with the Montrealers in 1952 and three games last season.

Everybody will be watching to see how the Hawks make out this weekend. In two other games Sunday night, Leafs are at New York and Canadiens are at Boston.

Queen's Kocman Suspended For Three Games

TORONTO (CP) — Halfback Al Kocman of Queen's Golden Gaels, who punched an umpire in the college football semi-final here last month, was given a three-game suspension Friday by the senior Intercollegiate Football League.

The league's board of governors, meeting to deal with the case, ruled that Kocman will be suspended "for the first three league games of the next intercollegiate season for which he is eligible."

Kocman struck umpire Fred Szambatti of Toronto after University of Western Ontario Mustangs pounced on a Queen's fumble for a touchdown on the last play of the game. The game was won 20-18. Kocman is eligible for one more year of college football.

DIDN'T MEAN TO

He told the board that he was "confused and didn't really intend to attack the official."

Kocman said in his personal plea and on evidence submitted by Eugene Forsey, chief of staff Crighton and referee Gord Stewart, board members decided there were extenuating circumstances and declined to enforce a more severe penalty.

Kocman said he "didn't remember" the attack on Szambatti. He said he was running down the sideline to see what was happening on the touchdown play when he was following another Queen's player when he ran into the umpire, Kocman added.

In other business during the session, the board was informed that radio sponsorship has been withdrawn for broadcasting of football games next season. Competition from television of professional Big Four games was cited as the reason.

Martinez Whips Al Andrews; Eyes Saxton

NEW YORK (AP)—Vince Martinez, the fighter with the managerial muddle, set his sights on a welterweight title bout by summer today after disposing of Al Andrews.

Phil Martinez, who does the talking for his brother since the break with manager Al Weill, says he understands Johnny Saxton will defend his welter crown against Carmen Basilio in February. He wants Vince to fight the winner.

Referee Lou Magnotta overruled Bob Christenberry, the fighter's purse of about $7,500 will be divided. Vince gets 66 2-3 per cent, but the rest is cut into eight pieces that is hard to figure. Phil gets 25 1-3 per cent but he splits it with Tex Felte, 12 1-3 each. Pepe Martinez gets 10 per cent. If that doesn't add up to 100 per cent, blame it on Phil, he's the mathematician.

So much for money business. As far as the fight was concerned, Martinez, 150, staved off the charging Andrews with a right to the jaw and rocked him with combinations in the seventh, ninth and tenth. Although Andrews, 151, never went down, he wound up with a battered nose and a shut right eye.

RETAINS RULE

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York state athletic commission decided Friday to retain its controversial three-knockdown rule on the recommendation of its medical advisory board. A revised rule specifying that a knockdown must be the result of a damaging blow as distinguished from a slip, push or fall, was written into the book. The insertion of the words "damaging" and "push" were the only changes from the old rule.

Irish Defeat Guelph 4-2; Galt Wins

By The Canadian Press

Toronto St. Michael's College Majors, the hottest team in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, chalked up another victory when they downed Guelph Biltmores 4-2 Friday night.

Galt Black Hawks came from behind to beat Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks 4-3 and move into fifth place ahead of the idle Hamilton Cubs. In the other game, seventh place Barrie Flyers, showing sudden scoring strength, defeated Toronto Marlboros 6-3.

St. Michael's scored two goals in the third period after Guelph had kept up with them for the first two sessions. Bill Colvin scored twice for the Majors. Dick Duff and Brian Anderson scored one each. Bob Forhan and Bill Graham tallied the Guelph goals.

A former Canuck player came back to haunt the Kitchener juniors. Leftwinger Myron Stankiewicz scored the winning goal for Galt early in the final period. Glen Cunningham, Stan Baldwin and Whitey Youngberg scored Canuck's first three goals. Jim Marshall, Hec Lalonde and Ralph Backstrom, Galt's goal getters, it was Canucks' 18th defeat in 31 games.

The Flyers put on a strong attack in their game against Marlboros before only 422 fans, small-est crowd of the season in Toronto. Highlighted by Ed Litzenberger's scored two goals and assisted in two others to spark the Barrie attack. Litzenberger's 31 goals and 31 assists gives him 62 points. Bill Hope and Doug Vaughan scored the other three. Rose Stockton, Ken Girard and Bob Pulford scored for Marlboros.

Larks' New General Manager Obeck Says Walker's Contract to Be Upped

MONTREAL (CP) — Vic Obeck has switched from college to professional football, joining the new executive of the Montreal Alouettes as vice-president.

Obeck will give up his post as McGill University athletic director at the end of the school year in June. In his new job with the Als, he will handle public relations and promotion.

The former United States professional football player joins Stan Workman, wealthy 28-year - old realtor and veteran sportsman Leo Dandurand, new earlier this week purchased control of the club. Obeck also became an active shareholder in the team but declined Friday to say how much stock he holded.

Obeck emphasized that he is not a replacement for Lew Hayman, who turned down a new contract Friday as managing director.

"I was vice-president before Hayman resigned," he said. "We joined that he remain with us. As for myself, I wasn't interested in going from one salaried position to another."

Hayman resigned rather than have the new owners curtail his authority. He had been associated with the team, as coach and managing director, since it succeeded the old Montreal Hornets in 1946. Obeck said he and Workman, a member of the Als' advisory board for the last three years, will share Hayman's duties. He inferred that Workman would take over most of the business transactions connected with the job.

"I don't claim to be a businessman," he said.

One of the first jobs facing the new Montreal owners will be a new contract for coach Douglas (Wild Bill) Walker, who piloted the team to the Big Four championship this year.

Obeck said Walker has been offered a new contract and will be in Montreal early next week to discuss terms.

"Whatever Walker was given before, we will better," he said. "I have already told him we will back him 100 per cent."

"We will give him even more leeway in negotiating with players, although we will lend him any help he wants, such as looking over Canadian talent. He will fix salaries, in consultation with me, but he will have a completely free hand."

The 38-year-old native of Philadelphia, who had his own television and radio shows in addition to his football duties, said he will try to promote football in Montreal and throughout the province.

"I feel that so far as development of the game and real promotion are concerned, the surface has only been scratched in Montreal. The Quebec Rugby Football League has been operating under pretty bad conditions, and we will give what help we can."

An effort will be made to promote football among French-speaking fans "who love the game once they have become introduced to it" and in French-language schools, Obeck said.

Memos Defeat Whitby 5-3; Take Over Third Position

Explode for Three in First And Are Never Headed; Petes Defeat Cornwall Colts

By GEORGE H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

Exploding for three goals in a little over three minutes near the end of the first period, the Belleville Memos went on to earn a well-deserved 5-3 victory over the Whitby "Wrens" in a speedy, hard-checking senior "B" battle here last night.

The victory gave the Memos undisputed possession of third slot in the group standing as the Clinton Comets went down to an 8-3 defeat before the Kingston Goodyears. The Memos are but two points behind the second-place Cornwall Colts who were beaten 3-2 by the surprising Peterborough Petes.

Playing effective hockey going both ways, the Memos were full value for their victory. They outscored the "Wrens" 3-1 in the first period; 2-1 in the second frame with the visitors getting the lone marker in the third chapter.

The teams divided a dozen penalties in a hard-checking display with Referees "Moon" Flanagan and Ken Partis of Kingston, keeping an eagle eye on the proceedings. Two of the sentences were at the cheap variety and each team scored a goal with an opposing player sitting out a sentence.

The defensive work of the clubs was a feature of the game, with Tony Parisi and Courtney in the respective nets coming up with some startling saves when the pressure was on. Courtney kicked out some successive shots from Vern Goyer when close in on one occasion while Parisi kicked out likewise from the sticks at the Whitby attackers.

The Memo forwards, like the defence, kept a close check on Bou Gagnon and Bill Attersly, the group's leading point getters, but they came up with a goal and an assist each. Centreman Gagnon also Whitby goal unassisted.

The six "D" of the Memos came through with three of the goals, with Erwin and Edwin Duncan each hitting the bemp and Ted DeGray, who played one of the best games of the season, teaming up with "Red" Dorn and Arnie Dugan on another.

They also ably aided and abetted by Jake Wade, who was credited with one and one, scored the prettiest goal of the night in the second period. Wade sallied from behind his blueline raced through to the Whitby defence and shoved a long pass to Jones. Davy picked up the puck in stride, sallied in on Courtney, neatly dodged him and slipped the puck in the corner of the net.

FAST TEMPO

It was hard-checking hit-and-run hockey for the first fourteen minutes of the first period with both defences hitting hard and often and both front lines checking both ways. Edwards slipped through the Memos defence but the puck slithered off his stick as he went in on Parisi. Semanski drew a penalty after eight minutes of play but the clustered Whitby defence kept the ganging Memos off the scoresheet.

Both teams were at full strength when the Duncans and Davy went in on a power play. Day's blazer hit the post and the trio came right back with Erwin Duncan lighting the lamp at 14.46.

The Memos maintained the offensive and less than three minutes later Ted DeGray slap-shotted Arnie Dugan's pass into the net from 15 feet out. Ocean drew an assist on the play. Forty seconds late John Wade took Jones' pass and fired a sizzler past Courtney to put the Memos three up.

Whitby swept into an organized offensive and with seconds to go Attersly golfed Gagnon's pass into the net to cut the margin to two.

The fans had barely reached their seats at the start of the second period when Erwin Duncan, on a neat passing play with brother Edwin drove a low hard shot into a corner to give the homesters a 4-1 edge.

PRETTY GOAL

Ed Duncan drew the official wrath and the Whitbyites staged a desperate offensive that finally paid off with Gagnon blasting home Attersly's pass at four minutes. A minute later came the Jones-Wade goal. Copeland got the gate and a minute later Keith MacDonald followed him, but close defensive work on the part of both teams prevented any scoring.

Goyer went in alone on Courtney and fired three shots in a row at the Whitby goalie who tap-danced the trio out of danger. Thaler went off for elbowing with a minute to go and MacDonald missed a wide open net on a rebound.

Nine minutes of fast, rugged play had gone in the third period when Wade got the gate, and a minute later on a ganging attack, Wally Samanski drove the puck past Parisi to bring the score to 5-3 and that's the way it ended.

Wilson drew one of the cheapest brands of sentences and at that DeGray missed a goal by a narrow margin. Thaler and Wade went off together as the game got tougher but no damage was done. Gagnon and Ed Duncan missed shots from close in, then Erwin Duncan and the Whitby playing coach developed a pushing match that resulted in both drawing two-minute penalties as time ran out.

The teams:

Whitby — Goal, Courtney; defence, Sinden, MacBeth; centre, Edwards; wings, Trimm, Copeland; subs, Samanski, Eicher, Thaler, Attersly, Gagnon, O'Connor, Green, Lister.

Belleville — Goal, Parisi; defence, Wade, Goyer; centre, Ed. Duncan, Dugan); wings, Erwin Duncan, Day; subs, Macy, Wilson, Muckler, Dorn, Dugan, DeGray, D. Jones, Bettiol, MacDonald.

Referees — "Moon" Flanagan, Ken Partis, Kingston.

Bears Triumph Over Barons

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It doesn't take much of winning streak to change the standings in the American Hockey League. The race is that close with only three points separating the first three teams and just eight between the pace-setting Cleveland Barons and the last-place Providence Reds.

There was only one game played Friday night and in that the Hershey Bears moved back into second place, a point behind Cleveland, with a 4-3 overtime victory over the Barons.

Jack Gordon, Cleveland captain, tied the score at 3-3 at 1:40 of the third period. Norm Corcoran tallied the winning goal in 3:21 of the 10-minute sudden death overtime.

Gordon Henry, Hershey goalie, played most of the game with a bloody nose and face cuts suffered in the first period.

Skiing News

TORONTO (CP)—Skiing was reported today at Barrie, Cobourg, Collingwood, Lorne Lake, Orangeville-Hockley, Sudbury-Levack and Sunderidge.

Conditions were described as excellent on the new hill at Larder Lake and good on the old hill. Skiing in the bush at Collingwood and Sudbury-Levack, and poor on the new hill and in the bush at Barrie and Sundridge.

Minor Hockey

The Canadiens, Black Hawks and Rangers walked off with victories over Bruins, Red Wings and Maple Leafs respectively in the pee wee games played at the arena this morning.

The Habs racked up the biggest score of the morning with an easy 7-3 win over the Bruins. Doug Dafoe and Billy Hill paced the winner's attack with two goals and one assist each while Ted Rowland, Jim Fisher and Rodney Folwell added one marker each. Barton and Durrant had assists. Lou Burley, Leslie Warren and Joe Irish hit the scoring in defeat with assists for Ron Smith, Fred Ervin and Richard Wood.

Mike Breaugh fired a pair of goals in the Hawks' 3-3 triumph over Bruins while getting the third one and H. Pointer adding an assist. Jim Langton and Paul Brown were the Red Wing marksmen, both unassisted.

The Rangers keep pace with a 4-2 decision over the Leafs as Grayden Scott scores three goals and Jim Preston notched the odd one. R. Turner was credited with an assist. Ian Graham scored once and assisted on the other goal for the Leafs with Allan Benny also scoring.

Yank Writers Blurb Canuck Football, What Were They Expected to Write?

By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.

NEW YORK (AP)—Football fans in the United States got their first chance to follow Canadian pro football via television during the 1954 season. What impact did it have on them, and on the American game?

"Canadian football in this area made about as much a dent as a marshmallow rolling into the Grand canyon," says Craig Stadler of the Sioux Falls, S.D., Argus-Leader.

"It will have no more effect on American football than scotch has on bourbon in Kentucky," says Bill Fox of the Indianapolis News.

Those two and virtually all the others of more than 100 sports writers and broadcasters replying to The Associated Press postcard questionnaire agreed that the Canadian brand of football game had a negligible effect on the U.S. kind.

About a dozen found fairly lively fan interest and expressed the opinion that eventually some of the more attractive features of Canadian football will be incorporated into the American game.

The viewers who took notice of the Canadian teams apparently liked their speedy, open style and the total absence of time outs.

They didn't seem much for the Canadian rule which forbids downfield blocking, figuring those blocks to be open and the long runs they often produce are an integral part of the game.

Other Canadian features which aroused interest were the rouge and the fact that kicks must be run back, unlike the American game where a receiver can signal that he doesn't intend to run the ball.

Only one of the writers found any marked interest among the fans in his area. Henry Burke of the South Bay Daily Breeze, Redondo, Calif., said:

"Although I have seen only two games this year, comments from other sources indicate that they got to the point where they preferred Canadian football to most college games."

J. D. Keller of the Albuquerque, N.M., Journal added: "Well received here on TV and may whet fans' zeal for wide-open brand of football."

Bill Morgan of the Washington, N.C., Daily News, commented: "Increased interest in football in general and much discussion about Canadian as compared to U.S."

Others saw considerable early "novelty" interest, which died out when U.S. college games got under way. On the other side, Frank Hyde of the Jamestown, N.Y., Post-Journal observed: "We are close to the border and many fans have travelled to Hamilton, Ont., to see the Canadian version. A poll we conducted did not reveal one fan who said he liked the Canadian game better than our pro game."

Stronger negative comments were: "It's a version of six-man football played with 12 men." and "It's a hybrid sport; let Canada have it."

Browns Meet Steelers Sunday

NEW YORK (AP) — The ferocious Cleveland Browns can move to their accustomed spot in the National Football League playoffs Sunday.

A Brown victory would assure Paul Brown's club of the eastern division title and assure them a crack at the Detroit Lions for the league title. The Lions already have clinched the western division crown but they will go through the motions against the Chicago Bears.

Fights Last Night

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York (Madison Square Garden)—Ernie Martinez, 150, Paterson, N.J., outpointed Al Andrews, 154, Superior, Wis., 10.

Spokane—Sandy Saddler, 128¾, New York, outpointed Bobby Woods, 134½, Spokane, 10 (nontitle).

Saddler Wins Over Bob Woods

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—Skinny Sandy Saddler flew back to New York today with a puffed lip, a bloody nose and $6,000 after taking unanimous 10-round decision from tough Bobby Woods in a non-title match before 5,700.

"He needs another fight to sharpen up," manager Charley Johnston said of Saddler, the featherweight champion who is under pressure to defend his crown.

Saddler came on in the late going Friday night against young Woods, a local lightweight who staggered him in the first round and again in the sixth before fading out.

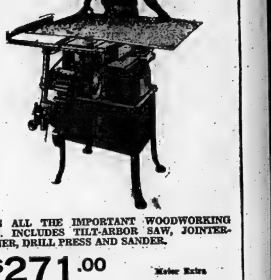
Winninger Leads Miami Golf



MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Bo Winninger, a husky rudy-faced Oklahoman, putted brilliantly Friday and shot into the lead of the Miami open golf tournament at the halfway mark. He fired a 66 for a 134 total.

Wininger dislodged Ted Kroll of New Hartford, N.Y., whose 67-68—135 had appeared safe.

The tournament was thrown wide open when the favorite, Sam Snead, Wide Sulphur Springs, W., Va., was forced to withdraw because of a recurrence of an old back injury. He had been tied for second after the opening round.

Pike Horne, of Mid Pines, N.C., first-round leader with a 66, took a one-over-par 71 Friday and dropped into a tie for third at 137 with U.S. Open champion Ed Furgol of St. Louis.

Oneschuk Wins Copp Trophy

TORONTO (CP) — Steve Oneschuk, veteran all-star back of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats, winner of the Blues football squad, Friday was presented with the Frank Copp Memorial Trophy as most valuable player on his team.

Oneschuk, in his fourth and last year with the Blues, was voted the trophy by his team mates.

Bill McFarlane, all-star defensive back with Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four this year, won the trophy in 1953.

Oneschuk was claimed by Hamilton "Tiger Cats in the college draft. He is a student at the Ontario College of Education.

Ryder Says Cross-Lake Swim 'Silly'

TORONTO (CP) — Swim coach Gus Ryder said Friday a plan by the Canadian National Exhibition to hold an cross-Lake Ontario swimming contest next summer is "silly."

The CNE's board of directors Friday night said a contest, following the 36-mile course set by Marilyn Bell, will be held during the CNE exhibition. Gus Ryder is coach of the 17-year-old swimmer who became the first person to cross the Lake Ontario last September.

"That swim is too hazardous," said Ryder. "The swim would have to be along the Canadian side, in full view of spectators. After all, it is a spectator's sport."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Round and round the bidding may go and where it stops even a peloucks should know. Unless he applies a confusing system that he does not understand and fails to remember it all its details.

The second bid by a responder needs a guiding hand. An author of a bridge system tries to supply such a guide. He does it with a pattern that he lays out for students to follow.

Suppose opener bids a heart; first response from partner is a simple raise assist to two hearts; opener then raises to three in the same suit. What does responder do on the second round?

Culbertson says he passes with an "unsound hand; raises to game in that suit if sound. Soundness or unsoundness is determined by an estimate of the combined holdings in honor tricks and distribution. Covers aces with six or seven points (a poor raise hand); bid with eight to ten points (good raise hand) and with a balanced hand go to three no-trump instead of a second raise hand.

Accordin' to Gordon the first responses shows three tricks; he passes on the second round with no more tricks; raises to four in hearts on the second round if he has a fourth trick.

♠ 4
♥ Q 3 2 5 6
♦ K 8 5 4
♣ 10 9 3 2

Suppose your south partner opens with a bid of one heart. With three tricks among which are two high cards you raise to two hearts; having adequate support for an assist of the suit bid by partner.

Suppose your south partner then bids three hearts. Would you go to four hearts; a raise or one more? No. You lack a fourth trick. The three tricks you have were already shown in your first raise.

Do you decide later bids by plastic valuation or point count or tricks? My future series will show proof which is best for you. It is worth looking into.

Theatre Diary for December

By Robert Tanner

It is certainly a far cry from been playing to very poor houses, the austerity and simplicity of the while the more controversial and Canadian Players' performance of Saint Joan to the spectacular pageantry of the Old Vic's Midsummer Night's Dream which opened to the Maple Leaf Gardens next week: but the field of dramatic art is fully wide enough for both. With Shakespeare's words embroidered with music by Mendelssohn, ballet and a sumptuous stage setting, the Old Vic's production presents such famous names as those of Moira Shearer and Robert Helpmann dancing and acting the roles of Titania and Oberon, and Stanley Holloway, star of many movies and famous too for his Sam and Albert monologues, as Bottom the Weaver.

Maple Leaf Gardens can hardly be regarded as the best location for dramatic performances nor for operatic ones either, and it would probably be as well to go equipped with a good pair of binoculars (a telescope might be unpopular with the people in front), but the skill of this world famous British company presents a rare opportunity of seeing Shakespeare presented in a manner very different from anything Ontario has ever seen in recent years.

CURIOUS ANOMALY

Theatre business in Toronto is at present revealing a curious anomaly, which has the managers baffled. Such sure-fire hits as "Charlie's Aunt," "The Man who Came to Dinner" and even "Getting Gertie's Garter" have

"Human Desire" Sizzles With "Girl Heat" Blaze.

You can start a fire by rubbing two sticks together or by striking flint and flint. Hollywood does it differently. Hollywood starts a fire by casting two stars in the right kind of film.

Two stars who really sizzle while rubbing together are Glenn Ford and Gloria Grahame. In "The Big Heat," they evoked all kinds of sudden responses in a tough, razzle-dazzle thriller that sacked the emotions. The combination of stars was so right, Columbia Pictures thought, that they have been re-united in "Human Desire," a powerful film slice of raw life that also stars Broderick Crawford at the McCarthy Theatre on Monday, Friday, Lang, who directed "The Big Heel," is the director of "Human Desire."

From audience viewpoint and production angle the advantage of familiar star combinations are obvious. Professionals who have worked together before get to know each other's styles and the actors know beforehand the exacting demands of a particular director. This makes for smoother operation on both sides of the camera, less hit-and-miss work. The results show up in the finished product.

That the public scene this smooth technical co-ordination is proved by the continuous popularity of the Greer-Garson-Walter Pidgeon pictures, the musicals that starred Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, and toe-dancing films of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. The late W. S. Van Dyke was identified as director of many of the MacDonald-Eddy pictures and some of the best films with Astaire and Miss Rogers were done by director Mark Sandrich.

Edgar Buchanan is featured in support of the stars of "Human Desire." Alfred Hayes' screen play is based on a novel by Emile Zola. "Human Desire" was produced by Lewis Rachmil.

CHRISTMAS DANCE

Dancing on Christmas Day. Then on Boxing Day (December 27th) in the real English tradition, the Lions Club of Belleville will conduct a modern pantomime, "Beauty and the Beast" by Nicholas Stuart Grey, with Frances Ryland and Murray Davis in the leading roles.

WAITING FOR FESTIVAL

Although several of the Toronto amateur groups have productions scheduled for December presentation, no news has been received of any firm close at hand. Perhaps all the local groups are saving their energies for the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival here in Belleville in February.

News of two theatrical changes is known in Belleville playgoers — Robert Christie, director of the Stratford Folk Festival production this season will play the title role in Julius Caesar at Stratford next year; his interpretation will be eagerly awaited by his many friends. Donald Sadlier, formerly since its inception at the Peterborough Summer Theatre, and known in England making TV films, in his cast is Canadian actor Lorne Green who makes his Stratford debut in next year's series of plays.

AT THE BELLE — John Wayne, Claire Trevor and Laraine Day are seen in Ernest K. Gann's best-seller, and Book-of-the-Month selection "The High and the Mighty," in CinemaScope and Technicolor, showing today, with Grey Cup Game highlights.

Hopman Turns Down Hypnotism

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—Harry Hopman, boss of Australia's Davis Cup squad, has turned down a suggestion his boys dowsid by hypnotism for their Davis Cup fight later this month.

South African hypnotist Leon Van Loewy, who made the suggestion, said Friday, "I could bring the boys right to their peak and give them the will to win . . . I could take away worries or anything that could rob them of concentration."

But, added Loewe sadly, Hopman said he preferred "more conventional training methods."

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars, for Monday, December 13, 1954.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — A good period for unusual-type profits, personal gains in work, the professions. Executives, employes: you are "on your own" but you can find ways to advance through means not unlikely obvious.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — Patience will be required all day if you would achieve good returns from intelligent tries. You can accomplish much if you control emotions, manoeuver cleverly.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — If you are impulsive or nervous the day won't please you. Think constructively and avoid errors.

June 22 to July 22 (Cancer) — A pleasant outlook for worthwhile plans executed with astuteness. Your attitude in receiving or giving orders will greatly determine how you advance. Romance favored.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — Friendly aspects. This day can be doubly gainful if you use more skill than usual. Be discriminating, and tactful. P.M.: change routine where you should in order to gain restful hours.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — A.M. may seem complicated but go quietly ahead with discrimination. Afternoon rays become stimulating, should give you confidence — and results. Investments, merchandising favored.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Personal prestige less favored than business or professional success. Mechanics(shipbuilding, aeronautics, mining can make new gains.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Certain restrictive influences may seem hard to control. Allocate tasks sensibly if you would advance.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — A minimum of talk and a maximum of thinking and acting will carry you far. To matters of little importance give spare moments only. Increase tempo as needs arise.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Keep alert if you would handle obstacles, get "out front" where you honestly can. Grasp worthwhile opportunities without dilly-dallying. The returns will be twofold.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — You may have to pack that extra "punch" to remain in the race today. Things may be happening fast; move progressively; your chances are as good as the next fellow's.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) Have no conflict of purposes. Start with and hold to the determination to win and you will. Try for new goals, but follow old ones, too — if they were good.

YOU BORN TODAY have a fertile, active mind. Your gift of clear vision and a natural ability to get red tape and get things done quickly are strong assets. Use your talents wisely and where you can. Opportunity is everywhere. There is no nonsense about you when executives are required. You are usually shrewd in business, conscientious, and seldom fooled by the superficial. Soften a tendency to be curt, over-critical, impatient.

Birthdate of: A. Lawrence Lowell, Amer. lawyer, educator.

Little Benny's Notebook

Ma was leening back in her long chair in her room looking sad, and pop came home, saying, Well, what's all this, I been in not going to hear that you're not feeling well.

On the contrary, William, you're going to hear cheerful news, ma said, and pop said, Well that's a break, because personaly I'm full of complaints about severe hunger pains.

Dont worry, William, there's a nice stake in the kitchin, all reddy to be done just the way you like it you said, and pop said, The way I'd like it is soon. Are you quite sure you are all right? he said.

Why William, all the ladies at the bridge game exclaimed in raptures about my new hat that I was afraid didn't do a thing for me after I paid such a stiff price for it, ma said. I wouldn't have much cheerful news than that, could I? she said.

Well, I guess not, at least not about hats, pop said, and ma said, So you must admit, William, I didn't greet you with a long complaining face just because I happen to have a splitting headake.

Heh? pop said, and ma said, I dont think much of women who cant wait till their husbands get home to tell them a tail of woe and desolation. Every husband has a right to enter his house and find a wife with something cheerful on her mind, and you are no exception, William, she said.

But you are, my dear, pop said.

You're a woman in 3 thousand, and I give 3 cheers for you, one for each thousand. How about letting that stake think it over till tomorrow? We'll eat up on the Avenue, he said, and ma said, Why William, what a perfect thought, I think you're wonderful.

Which he is.

Finance Minister Asked to Remove Tax on Cars

OTTAWA (CP) — The 200,000-member Canadian Automobile Association Friday appealed to Finance Minister Harris to remove the 15-per-cent excise tax on new automobiles. The tax gives the government about $82,000,000 a year in revenue.

The association, in a brief to Mr. Harris, said car owners are complaining bitterly that they are being taxed beyond endurance. If the tax is not soon abolished, "it is our firm belief an aroused public will demand immediate action," the association added.

It argued that heavy federal taxation, through the excise tax and through the $83,000,000 in sales tax levied on auto purchases in 1953, and other charges, was causing a slowdown in auto buying.

The association recalled Mr. Harris made a speech in Montreal last month in which he said sales and excise taxes have an important place in any well-balanced tax system, but that the rates should not get out of line with reasonableness.

NOT A LUXURY

"The rates are out of line with reasonableness as far as the automobile is concerned," the association said.

"The automobile no longer is a luxury, the association added, for about 65 per cent of car use on an average day is for essential trips of one kind or another.

While the association submitted its brief, the bureau of statistics announced total sales of new motor vehicles dropped to 30,751 in October from 32,781 a year ago.

Ford Co. Strike In Third Month, No End in Sight

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—The wage walkout of 7,500 Ford of Canada workers moved into its third day today with settlement apparently no closer than it was eight weeks ago.

Major stumbling block on the way to an agreement is the question of province-wide negotiations with the automobile firm's three plants in Ontario. On this both the company and the union are standing firm.

The company says it must bargain separately with the three divisions. United Auto Workers union (CIO-CCL) insists that members at all three plants in Windsor, Oakville and Etobicoke be present during negotiations and included in any agreement.

TALKS ADJOURNED

Talks between company and union negotiators under the chairmanship of Ontario Labor Minister Daley and Louis Fine, his chief conciliation officer, stand adjourned until Monday.

Thursday to executive board and stewards of Local 200 in Windsor endorsed the union's demands for collective bargaining in the strike.

The walkouts started here more than nine weeks ago when 5,700 production workers left their jobs. Five days later, 900 workers at Oakville walked out and three weeks ago 150 employees at Etobicoke struck.

The workers are demanding wage and fringe benefits.

The walkout is the sixth major strike at Ford since Jan. 15, 1942 when the company and Local 200 at Windsor signed an agreement. Ten months later 14,000 production workers, including women, left their jobs from Nov. 16-20. The issue was equal pay for equal work.

LONGEST STRIKE

In April, 1943, 5,000 workers struck but returned to work after three days.

In the following year a dispute began over union security which culminated in the longest and most serious strike in the history of the Canadian automotive industry.

The dispute started April 30 when some 14,000 employees walked out in a disagreement over interpretation of a grievance procedure. The strike was settled May 30 but the grievance remained and caused a series of negotiations that continued throughout the remainder of the year.

The climax came Sept. 12, 1945 when 9,000 workers left their jobs and did not return until Dec. 1945 — 85 days later.

Settlement of the strike, which brought peace to the Ford-labor scene for six years, also produced the Rand formula.

Named after Mr. Justice I. C. Rand of the Supreme Court of Canada, the formula provided that workers must pay dues through the check-off system and guarantee security to the union representing a company.

TWEED

Mr., Mrs. Ed. Long Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

TWEED.— Fifty years ago on December 1, 1904, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Long were married at the Methodist parsonage, Tweed, by the late Rev. Singleton. They were attended by Mr. Bill Sinclair and Miss Lucy Sinclair, who later became husband and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Long are the proud parents of eleven children, two others died in infancy. There are 28 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Long is the former Rose Sinclair, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Sinclair of Tweed, and has lived in her home town all her life.

Mr. Long is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Long, of Caledon East. He came to Tweed as a young man of 20. When employed by the C.P.R., he helped to build the water tank at the local station, and then decided to make his future home in Tweed. It was then that he met his future bride, a young girl of nineteen.

Mr. Long was employed as a carpenter with the Houston Company for many years until they moved their headquarters to Belleville. He worked as a contractor in Tweed and district and was foreman of the crew when Tweed skating rink was built. He now confines his carpentry work to a small shop at the rear of his home and is part time employee at Victoria Theatre.

On Saturday afternoon over 80 guests, including nine members of their family gathered at the Salvation Army Hall, where dinner was served to honor Mr. and Mrs. Long on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary. The head table was attractive with a three-tier wedding cake, bowls of flowers and decorations of golden bells.

Mr. Archie Sinclair, Sr., was named chairman and he called on Lieut. William Bowers for a reply. The attendants Mr. and Mrs. William Sinclair were introduced and Mrs. William Mosher, of Napanee, (nee Bessie Sinclair), spoke on behalf of the brothers and sisters of the bride of 50 years ago.

A letter of congratulations from Tweed Council was read.

Mrs. F. C. Barnett in her remarks, noted that she had been associated with the Long family for most of their married life, and that the couple could be justly proud of their fine family. Her address was concluded with the reading of some appropriate poems.

The chairman, Mr. Sinclair, noted that three of the Long boys were in the last war, one of them being a prisoner of war for many months. Howard is still in the service, now on his way home for Korea.

Mr. and Mrs. Long received many beautiful gifts and anniversary cards.

Guests were present from North Tonawanda, N.Y.; Trenton, Napanee, Oshawa, Peterborough, and Lakefield.

Two young men jabbed pistols at him in the dark parking lot and snarled, "Head over the bundle." Cirigliaro handed it over. They drove off and Cirigliaro telephoned police. On the way home he bought two more quarts of ice cream.

"My boy would never swallow a story about being held up and robbed by two punks who thought they were getting the day's receipts," he said.

Jimmy Green, 14, Shot in Chest By Playmate

Jimmy Green, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Green, Stirling, accidentally shot in the chest Saturday afternoon by a playmate, is resting comfortably in Belleville General Hospital.

Doctors counted 42 shotgun pellets in X-ray pictures of Green's chest taken prior to an operation by Dr. A. C. R. McGonigle of Belleville.

Gene Ingram, 12, was shooting Green, how he did it, Saturday, when the gun went off. The charge struck Green a glancing blow in the chest.

Dr. E. A. Carleton of Stirling gave emergency treatment.

Green's condition was described as "very satisfactory" today.

The accident occurred about 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

OPP Const. Al Cockburn investigated.

Orderly Found It Too Cold To Attempt Escape

SUDBURY (CP) — A hospital orderly at the Sudbury jail farm found Sunday it was too cold to attempt escape.

After he stumbled through dense bush in the Burwash area for more than 18 hours and found himself up to his waist, Peter William Valsey, 27, of Merrville, Ont., gave up himself up at a guard's home five miles from the farm.

Valsey, serving a 12-month sentence on 13 counts of forgery, was missed just after 6 p.m. Friday. He took a load of garbage from the prison hospital, Supt. Charles Sanderson said this morning.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel announced today she would release the Greek pilot and four of nine Arabs detained after their Syrian airliner was forced down by Israeli fighters at Lydda airport, near Tel Aivi, Sunday.

The dispatch from Jerusalem gave no explanation why five of the Arabs were still to be held. However, the Israeli army announced earlier that it was seeking the release of three Israeli soldiers who disappeared on patrol along the Syrian frontier last Wednesday. An army spokesman said Syrian officials had denied knowledge of the trouble but a Radio Damascus broadcast had said Syria was holding them.

An American passenger aboard the aircraft, Ralph C. Hansen of Bloomington, N. Y., was released immediately after the plane landed at Lydda.

CHARGE DENIED

An Israeli spokesman said the plane, en route from Damascus to Cairo, was intercepted by two Israeli fighters over a "forbidden" zone at the time Israeli air information aids said the plane was near Acre, the old crusader town in the northwest corner of the country.

The plane's Egypt-born Greek captain, Basil Constantopoulo, denied this and contended he had kept outside Israeli airspace throughout the flight.

Meanwhile, the Israeli - Syrian mixed armistice commission urged Israel today to withdraw its regular police force from the demilitarized southern section of the Sea of Galilee and to discontinue "hostile and aggressive acts" there.

ARABS SHOT

The commission also instructed Lt. U. N. chairman, Canadian Col. J. E. L. Castonguay, to ensure that Israelis stop working and herding to Arabs in the southern demilitarized zone.

Israel today itemized from a Syrian complaint that on Dec. 8 eight Israeli policemen crossed into the two Arabs in the Beit Kazir area of the demilitarized zone, wounding one of them.

The commission said Israel was guilty of "grave and relevant" violation of the general armistice agreement."

Crossed 'Phone Wires Give Scoop On Duke of Edinburgh's Talk Plans

LONDON (CP) — An incident arising from crossed telephone lines between Buckingham Palace and Canada House may wind up in the House of Commons.

Tom Driberg, Labor member of Parliament and journalist, dialed in by accident some time ago to a conversation between the palace and the Canadian government office. It concerned plans for the Duke of Edinburgh is to make Thursday to the Royal Aeronautical Society. The private chatter was overheard by the duke's Canadian tour, said Driberg.

Driberg let his readers into the discussion Dec. 3 and started a rumpus. Conservative MP Henry Price has written to the assistant postmaster-general, Postmaster Gen. mans, to find out whether Driberg can legally publish a conversation he picks up accidentally on the telephone.

The Sunday Express chided Driberg for "this strange indiscretion."

Driberg said in his column in Reynolds News, a Sunday paper that the duke will reveal "much new information gained during his recent trip to Canada.

"He will describe, for instance, the problems of supplying Port Moresby in New Guinea by the time of the conference, one of those taking part is it said: 'Let's have it flown in by helicopters.'"

A Canada House spokesman said today post office technicians had been called in to check the telephone system after Driberg published his disclosures. No further action was planned, he said.

A post office spokesman said Driberg's action "is not an offence under any post office legislation."

BUSHWORKER WILL BE QUESTIONED IN SHOOTING

Arrested at Hamilton By Provincial Police

SUDBURY (CP)—A 23-year-old bushworker was to be questioned by police today in connection with the fatal shooting of a young schoolteacher whose body was found near his schoolhouse Saturday.

Robert Bruce Ducharme was brought here from Hamilton by police Saturday night for questioning in connection with the case.

The victim, 21-year-old Steve Klapouchak, was found with a bullet hole in the head. The body was hidden under boards and snow near the one-room school in the Sesekinika Mills, near Chapleau. Chapleau is 140 miles southwest of here.

Unofficial reports of an autopsy said Klapouchak was shot four times in the body and once in the forehead.

RESULTS TODAY

Inspector Don Nichol of the Ontario provincial police is expected to receive the results of the post mortem from Dr. M. J. G. Lynch, provincial pathologist, today.

Ducharme was taken off a train at Hamilton Saturday and has been charged with "causing disturbing the teacher's house, adjacent to the school.

Klapouchak, a former Timmins resident, had been missing since Dec. 3. On Dec. 5 and 11 he is believed robbery was the motive for the killing.

Two persons had two cheques, one for $147.85 covering a month's salary and the second for $50 for serving as caretaker of the school. A stop-payment order has been issued on both cheques.

Philip Decaen, lumber company employee, found the body after a search in which police and 75 Dalton Mills residents took part. It had been covered with the snow and covered with boards on which the snow had fallen.

Thought to have been tied in with the killing was a note found in the home of Mrs. Jeannette Bouchard. While the owner was absent a window was forced and the dwelling 50 yards from the school.

A bullet hole was found in the blackboard at the schoolhouse. There was blood on the school steps and on the washbasin in front of the wooden building. A window pane shattered, bullets, case and clothing, identified as belonging to Klapouchak, was found five miles away.

The slaying was the second in eight months in the Sesekinika district. Dan Tessier, 4 trapper who was a witness in a court case involving poaching, was found previously shot when he went to his cabin on the trap line. A rifle with a lock intended as a court exhibit.

Residents said the teacher was well-liked by both children and adults in Dalton Mills. Klapouchak said he "kept pretty much to himself." He was a non-drinker.

He came to the district in the community and at the time of his disappearance was arranging a Christmas party.

UN Secretary-General, Aides Start Spell of Watchful Waiting

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold and his aides settled down today to a spell of watchful waiting for an answer from Red China on Hammarskjold's proposed trip to Peiping to discuss the case of 11 U. S. airmen imprisoned as spies.

There was no comment immediately from UN officials on a Peiping radio broadcast early today asserting that the United Nations "has no right to interfere with China's sentencing of the American spies."

The broadcast made no direct reference to Hammarskjold's calls to Premier Chou En-lai Friday night proposing that he meet in Peiping soon after Dec. 26 to discuss the case of the fliers and all other UN personnel still held captive.

The radio blast repeated Peiping's previous charges that the jailed Americans had "sneaked into China by air to carry out espionage" and that it is China's sovereign right to punish spies."

In authorizing Hammarskjold to seek release of the airmen and other imprisoned UN personnel, the assembly approved the U. S. resolution that they were prisoners of war entitled to release under the Korean armistice.

Some diplomats in Washington thought the Chinese would agree to the trip. State department officials indicated they were keeping hands off with full confidence in the course the UN secretary-general was taking.

Long Trail Home from Red Chinese Prison Camp Ends

MONTREAL (CP) — The Mac-Kenzies—all six of them—are together again.

Sgdn. Ldr. A. R. MacKenzie's long trail home from a Communist Chinese prison camp ended Saturday night when he reached Dakota which had flown him and his attractive wife, Joyce, from Pyongyang in Korea to Montreal airport.

For a moment there was silence at the big airbase and then the three oldest MacKenzie children ran forward to greet their father they had not seen in more than two years.

The fourth, three-year-old Jo-Anne, held up high in her grandmother's arms, and finally the nine-year-old Pauline plunged towards Mamie MacKenzie, Sandy's mother.

Bobby, 10, in tears with excitement, and six-year-old Ronnie crowded around the tall, lean officer.

Then, his 75-year-old father, Robert Burns MacKenzie, walked slowly forward to greet his 36-year-old son.

"He looks wonderful, just wonderful," he told reporters a few minutes later.

MacKenzie's mother died last March before it was known whether the air ace had been killed him.

Treaty Indian Woman Held For Slaying

KENORA (CP) — A 30-year-old treaty Indian woman is being held in provincial detention here after Dryden, Ont., in connection with the slaying of her three-year-old daughter early Saturday.

Inspector W. G. Corsie of the provincial police headquarters here said Sunday night the woman will appear in police court at Dryden today to be charged in connection with the slaying of her daughter, at Meintosh, about 40 miles northeast of Kenora.

Inspector Corsie said the child died after being severely beaten during a "wing party." He said the child had been thrown to the ground outside the house after the beating.

The result of an autopsy held Saturday will be considered before a charge will be laid against the woman, the inspector said.

CANADA TO HIKE COLOMBO PLAN AID BY MILLION

Will Give Next Year Sum of $26,400,000

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government has decided to increase its Colombo plan aid by $1,000,000 next year to $26,400,000, it was learned today.

The Colombo plan is a six-year, $5,000,000 program to build up the economic strength of south and southeast Asia and thus help it fight Communist influence.

At a ministerial conference here last Oct. 26, Australian aid was appealed to the wealthier western countries, including Canada, for more aid.

PROPOSAL PARED

At that time, Finance Minister Harris said the question of Canada's contribution for 1955-56 would be settled later.

It was understood a high-ranking Canadian diplomat proposed a boost 10 times the approved $1-000,000, but it was pared by treasury officials who have to live within the possibility of a budgetary deficit next year, it was learned.

The increase will be provided for in the 1955-56 budget to be presented by Mr. Harris sometime before the end of the fiscal year next March. 31.

Sheppard Admits Committing Some 'Sins'

CLEVELAND (AP)—Dr. Samuel Sheppard ended his direct testimony today in his murder trial that he has committed some "sins." He did not say what they were.

The final question put to him by his chief defense counsel, William J. Corrigan, was: "Doctor, in your lifetime, have you ever committed any sins?"

Sheppard, on trial charged with murdering his pregnant wife, hesitated a moment and then said:

"Yes sir. I have succumbed to human frailties."

WATCH BAND BROKEN

Prior to Sheppard being brought from Sheppard two points that may bear on police investigation of the case. One was that a wrist band on the watch Sheppard was wearing the night of his wife's murder, now is broken. The defense asked if it was broken when Sheppard last was at and whether he knew how it had been damaged. Sheppard replied to both questions that he did not.

Dr. Gerber found on the beach some distance from his home could have been hit.

Friends also testified the doctor was wearing a T-shirt when they last saw him at his wife's bedside together some hours before she was killed. In the morning, however, Sheppard was found with a waist zip and said he does not remember changing out of the T-shirt or anything about it.

Pen-Pal Lovers Facing Slight Hitch in Plans for Early Wedding

TORONTO (CP) — Two immigrants who courted and proposed by letter had marriage on their minds today but said there may be a slight hitch.

Pauline Baierlein, a 15-year-old blonde from suburban Nuremberg, Germany, arrived here Saturday to wed her pen-pal fiance, Andreg Mustika, for the first time.

There was no celebration when Pauline reached Toronto aboard a train from Quebec City. She was met by Mustika and a friend at the station. Only one prize, a friend of Mustika, was there.

The couple had planned something more during the weekend. They went into "hiding," refusing to talk to newspaper reporters. They spent the weekend at the homes of friends.

Pauline said the wedding, originally planned between Christmas and New Year's, may be put off until spring, apparently because Andreg faces a mandatory change in connection with the deaths of four persons in a two-car collision at Stratford, Ont.

Pauline says she will stand by her husband-to-be no matter what happens.

"Naturally she's unhappy," said Erwin Mustika, brother of Andreg's cabin with Miss Baierlein during the voyage across the Atlantic. She interpreted the conversation for Pauline, who cannot speak English.

Andreg, who arrived in Montreal Friday and remanded to Jan. 26 when he appeared in court, is reached for comment during the weekend. Telephone checks to the rooming house brought this comment:

"No, Andreg isn't here. Yes, they have met. I don't know when they'll get married. They are visiting friends."

Inquiries at the friend's house didn't shed any light on the couple's whereabouts. The friend mentioned another friend,-and so on down the line.

Dig Out Records For Hotel Accounts Covering 9 Years

Routine Work at Toronto Clerk's Office Suspended

TORONTO (CP)—Routine at Toronto city clerk's office was virtually suspended today as four employees began digging through city records for hotel accounts covering the last nine years.

Board of control last week authorized an informal scrutiny by members of the establishment accounts of two former mayors to compare them with those of former mayor Allan Lamport.

City clerk George Weale said it would take several hours to produce the records.

REFUSES CHALLENGE

Mayor-elect Nathan Phillips today refused to take up a challenge by Mr. Lamport to resign and run against him for mayor.

"I refuse to enter into any controversy with Allan Lamport," Mr. Phillips said. "He has discredited himself by deserting the people for a business position. Now he suggests I break my solemn promise to the electors."

Mr. Phillips said he would leave the "one-ring circus" to Mr. Lamport.

The accounts which board of control ordered to be opened will cover the years of Robert Saunders and Hiram McCallum from 1945 to 1951.

COLLINGWOOD (CP) — Clues recently uncovered may establish the identity of the blonde woman whose partially decomposed body was discovered in a bush here Nov. 26, police chief Lewis Elliott said today.

He said the general description of the woman plus information about activities of an unnamed Toronto man last June could identify her as a married resident of the Collingwood area.

Dr. Ward Smith, director of the provincial crime laboratory, said Dec. 3 the woman's death might have been from natural causes but he did not rule out the possibility of foul play.

Fishermen catching tagged fish are asked to take the tags and samples of scale from the fish to their local fish buyer. Special envelopes are being provided by department officials for the tags and samples.

W. J. Christie of the department's research division, Toronto, will visit buyers each month to pay tag awards.

Jesse Barlow Congratulated At 91st Birthday Celebration

If you should drop in at "Mont" Barlow's well-appointed home at 151 George Street, any evening for the next few evenings, and see two silver-haired gentlemen sitting on a chesterfield deep in conversation, it might be worth your while to listen in.

You will hear reminiscences of the railroad as far back as the "Roaring Eighties." You will hear about the Grand Trunk, and the C.N.R. You will hear the "real berry" at Marysville mentioned besides a lot of other stories of the "Iron Horse" of decades ago. You will see and hear two of the oldest, if not the oldest railway engineer pensioners in the city. They are Mr. Jesse Barlow, who lives with his son, and Mr. Jim Reid, a neighbor.

They reminisced a lot on Sunday.

For it was the occasion of Mr. Barlow's 91st birthday. Mr. Reid is his senior by a year. Both are "grandsires" of the railroad, pioneering class of the railroad days and the sole survivors of that school.

Mr. Barlow smiled his happiness under the weight of years, while hair as the members of his family, railroad and other friends gathered to felicitate him on his natal day. A large number of cards and gifts testified to the esteem in which this well-known native of Belleville is held.

KEEN MEMORY

His memory is keen, retentive. His health, apart from an eye weakness is good. He enjoys his can chop, cut and pile wood in the backyard after reaching his 90th birthday it seemed to be a valid.

"That is what he did," said son "Mont," "and now he is wondering when I am going to get more wood."

Mr. Barlow is an excellent conversationalist for a nonagenarian.

Former member of the old "Tilsonburg Blues" one of the old rail stories of that famous unit, of his part in the Louis Riel Rebellion and the battle of Batoche. He can talk of his four years as a member of the city council, four years with the board of education, four years as insurance man and as a member of the staff of Cliff Haragar.

And he shocked his two stalwart sons, 'Mont' and Evan, at the "at home" given in his honor on Sunday by saying in answer to a query: "Why do I have to answer these questions. You know the answers as well as I."

He is an ardent sports fan. While his eyesight will not permit television, or too close perusal of newspapers he sits with an ear "glued" to the radio whenever a hockey, basketball, football, or any other sports event is being broadcast.

Mr. Barlow is an exemplification of the old cliche: "A man is as old as he feels." He has a healthy appetite, shaves himself without a mirror. He goes for walks surrounded by his great-grandchildren, and loves to "visit with his sons and grandchildren.

Mr. Barlow passed away on October 6, 1953.

Quinte 'Hams' Participate In Defence Test

Members of the Quinte Amateur Radio Club took an active part in the "Operation Trillium" Saturday when civil defence workers throughout the province combined to test defences in a theoretical bombing attack.

Through the co-operation of the Belleville Fire Department a portable transmitter was set up in the No. 2 Central where communications from this area were fed into the provincial civil defence headquarters in Toronto. The only theoretical damage as result of the make believe bombing raid was the blowing up of the No. 3 highway bridge over the Trent river at Trenton. The road was supposed to have been opened again for emergency traffic after a Bailey bridge had been thrown across the river.

Major General F. F. Worthington, Civil Defence co-ordinator, in a message to radio hams in Ottawa, stressed that had the attack been a real thing these radios would have been the only communication as regular communications were theoretically knocked out.

Police Blotter

Thieves broke into the Belleville Yacht Club lounge room on Victoria Park some time during the week-end and stole the money from the coin television set. The set was operated on the meter plan and the meter removed and the money taken.

A local department store complained of juvenile shoplifter on Saturday. The lad was taken to the police station where he was found a pistol type cigaret lighter had caught his eye.

low was a dinner guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Evan Barlow. Numerous friends called to offer him felicitations.

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Elections were held in two Ontario cities, a newly-formed town and four village boundaries.

In Owen Sound C. C. Sargent, 36-year-old weekly newspaper publisher and farmer, won a sweeping victory in a three-way mayoralty race. Mr. Sargent, mayor from 1947 to 1951, polled 4,057 votes to 1,294 for incumbent Mayor Percy England.

Ald. W. C. Dennis, the third contender, got 1,248 votes.

APPROVE POOLS

St. Catharines ratepayers voted approval of $110,000 for two new swimming pools. Mayor John Smith had already been returned by acclamation.

Ajax, to become a town next Jan. 1, held its first municipal election with three out of every four eligible voters casting ballots.

Samuel Bayly was elected the new town's first mayor. John Hill was named reeve and Roger Conant, deputy reeve.

Child Killed Instantly, Three Others Injured

CAMPBELLFORD (Special) — Three-year-old Georgia Melda Ford, R.R. 2 Hastings, was killed instantly Saturday night when the car in which she was travelling with her parents collided with another vehicle on Highway No. 30, about three miles north of here.

Both her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Forde, and the driver of the second vehicle, William Murray Spencer, of Campbellford, were taken to hospital.

A second daughter of the Fordes, Virginia Grace, thirteen months, sitting on her mother's knee in the front seat at the time of the accident, miraculously escaped injury. However, she was removed to hospital for examination.

Mrs. Forde suffered a broken leg and scalp lacerations and her husband a broken knee and several slight injuries as well as multiple face injuries. Spencer sustained a broken leg and several fractured ribs and body bruises. All the injured were removed by ambulance to Campbellford Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Forde and Spencer were later removed to hospital in Peterborough for further treatment of injuries.

The accident is believed to have occurred when the car driven by travelling north, attempted to make a left-hand turn into a side road and collided with the path of the south-bound Forde automobile.

The cars met almost head-on, the impact plunging the Forde vehicle into a ditch and tearing the Spencer car some 50 feet back along the highway.

The dead child is believed to have been standing up on the front seat of the car at the time. She was hurled against the instrument panel and died instantly.

The Forde car was totally wrecked.

OPP Cons. Archie Eady, Campbellford detachment, investigated. The accident occurred about 8.30 p.m.

Slippery Streets Result in Rash Of Car Collisions

Slippery streets caused by Sunday evening's sudden drop in temperature resulted in a rash of minor motor accidents that kept investigating officers busy. Three thirteen car collisions were reported by police and also seven first year accidents that resulted only in dented fenders.

Approximately $900 damage resulted in the one three-car collision, while 15-year-old Vivian Hall suffered a bruised forehead and shock.

Police said that Thomas Shannon of Corbyville was northbound on Church street and failing to stop at Victoria Ave. was in collision with an east-bound vehicle driven by William D. Wareham, 125 Hastings Drive. The Wareham car then skidded and collided with a third car driven by Robt. Ward, 79 South Church Street, which had turned out to pass. Damage to the Shattraw car amounted to about $250; the Wareham car, $500, and to the Ward auto $150.

C.I.O.-AFFLAUDS MRS. ROOSEVELT

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt receives an ovation from the convention of CIO leaders in Los Angeles after telling the labor union delegates that the nation must develop an atomic age attitude. She said it must be "willing to face new ideas, try experiments and not be afraid of the unknown." With her are her son, James (left) newly elected congressman from California, and Walter P. Reuther, re-elected president of the labor organization. (Central Press Canadian).

Child Now Able To Sit Up In Wheelchair

TORONTO (CP)—Iggy Crotty, 9, struck by a hit-and-run driver and left unconscious last May now is home at St. John's, Nfld., sits up in a wheelchair these days.

Doctors and nurses at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children say they think Iggy's condition has improved a little but he has a long way to go to recovery.

Iggy was on the way home from school when he was hit. For 115 days he was in a coma and doctors said brain injuries left him like an infant. He's had two operations since being brought to Toronto by plane Oct. 29.

Iggy (his real name is Ignatius) can't talk and he can move his right leg and hand only slightly. But doctors looking after him hope for improvement as time passes. Although he can't speak, Iggy takes in every word said to him. If asked he'll try to move his right hand but the fingers move only slightly. His powers of concentration are great.

His treatment here was financed by public contributions in his home province. When Newfoundlanders heard of Iggy's plight they took him to their hearts and the St. John's Evening Telegram started a fund which has obtained about $10,000.

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. Evelyn McKenzie of Sarnia who pleaded guilty Saturday to bigamy claimed her second husband knew she was already married when he wed her.

Labor Congress Asked to Provide Christmas Cheer

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Congress of Labor will be asked to sponsor a "Christmas cheer" fund for striking workers at three paper plants of the Ford Motor Company of Canada.

The top policy-recommending body of the United Auto Workers (CIO-CCL) Sunday night endorsed a request to the CCL to support a nation-wide appeal for donations. The UAW local in Canada, a total of 75,000 members agreed to take part in the campaign.

The endorsement was made at a quarterly meeting of District Council 26, attended by 115 delegates from all over Canada. The council voted $1,000 to the fund from its treasury.

HITS AT BOARDS

The meeting supported demands of Ford locals for joint negotiations leading to a province-wide agreement and also announced that in future UAW local unions will present only a bare list of their demands in conciliation boards.

Ontario law requires unions to present their case to conciliation boards before permission is received to strike but the council claimed the boards are "used to stop competing with management in prettily-bound briefs to conciliation board."

Such boards, it said, are nothing more than economic and political hurdles.

Rangers Devote Much Time In Rescue Work

By STEPHEN SCOTT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VICTORIA (CP)—Remnants of what was the start of a 16,000-member militia force in British Columbia during the Second World War are carrying on humanitarian work.

They are the South Vancouver Island Rangers, skilled woodsmen from all walks of life who devote much of their time to rescuing hunters and others who get lost in the dense bush of the southern part of the island.

VOLUNTEER FORCE

They have participated in every major search operation in the area since their formation in 1947. Their work requires a large amount of equipment, including search dogs, aircraft, boats and radio, with stretchers of their own design.

It has become almost automatic for the provincial police to alert the Rangers as soon as they receive a report that a hunter has gone missing. Without the Rangers, the RCMP say, they would have to call for civilian volunteers.

The South Vancouver Island Rangers were formed in 1941 to guard the greater Victoria watershed. The volunteers worked first with the then British Columbia Provincial Police, and later became part of the Pacific Coast Militia Rangers.

Throughout the war, calls for help from the police headquarters brought out these skilled woodsmen. When the war ended the Rangers were officially disbanded, but the calls continued.

KEEPING ALIVE

Gordon Sword, Victoria garage proprietor, and others who had helped form the Rangers decided consequently rounded up their old friends and in April, 1947, the new South Vancouver Island Rangers was formed with about 100 members. It has about 150 adult and 25 junior members now.

They have answered nearly 150 searches since their formation.

They accept no money for their services. Any travel cheques received from grateful persons have been sent back with thanks.

Nor do they seek any credit. Mr. Sword says their motto, "Ready to Serve" is credit enough.

Jewish Home Opens

TORONTO (CP)—A 105-year-old man helped officially open the $2,500,000 combined Jewish Home for the Aged and Bayerest Hospital here Sunday.

Jacob Serkin placed historic documents from the cornerstone shortly before Premier Frost of Ontario and Welfare Minister Goodfellow officially opened the building.

Mr. Serkin represented the folks living at the home.

HUNGRY FOXES

CHULMLEIGH, England (CP)— Four ravenous foxes attacked a calf on a farm near this Devonshire village and so now fought them for 15 minutes before farmer G. Shapland drove them off with a shotgun. Officials say the rabbit-killing myxomatosis plague has deprived foxes of natural food.

Top Union Man Will Attend Ford Parley

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Emil Mazey, secretary-treasurer of the United Automobile Workers' union (CIO) international will meet today with Detroit Labor Minister Daley to confer on the strikes at three Ford of Canada plants in Ontario.

Mr. Mazey will join the union negotiating team at the resumption of government-sponsored talks between company and union. He may also seek a private conference with the labor minister.

It was reported from Detroit that Mr. Mazey was authorized by Walter Reuther, recently re-elected president of the CIO, to ask the American Ford company to intercede with its Canadian subsidiary if necessary to promote a speedy settlement of the 11-week-old strikes.

Mr. Mazey said he had no immediate plans to confer with American officials over the Canadian situation, but he added that "drastic action" may be necessary if the disputes are not settled soon.

He did not elaborate on his statement.

Mr. Daley and Louis Fine, his chief conciliation officer, will have to settle the question of who will be allowed to sit at the conference table as union representatives before actual negotiations are started.

The union is insisting on province-wide bargaining being instituted at the talks.

Its negotiating team is made up of committee men elected at the three striking plants—here, in Oakville, and in Etobicoke.

The company has asked to meet the striking locals separately to bring about a settlement.

The company negotiating team walked out of last week's talks after only 20 minutes over this issue, and did not meet with the union again.

Two Are Killed In Car Crash

THAMESVILLE Ont. (CP)—Two persons were killed and four others were injured Sunday in a two car head-on collision on Highway 2 near this village 15 miles east of Chatham.

Michele Mandarino, 21, and Gerano Chiacchiaro, 25, both of Windsor, died in the wreckage. They came to Canada from Italy about a year ago.

Most seriously hurt was Arturo Puppi, 25, also of Windsor. He was taken to hospital at Chatham with a severe concussion in critical condition.

Also taken to hospital were Silvio Tamborrini, 28, Windsor, arm and ankle fractures; Daniel A. Lawton, 42, Lennford, Sask., broken left hip and facial lacerations and his wife Wynone, 39, broken ribs. Their condition was described as fair.

Police said the crash came when Tamborrini's car, carrying the other Windsor men, apparently skidded on wet pavement and crashed into the Lawton auto, police said.

Professional Advice . . .

A professional man : : : a dentist, as a matter of fact : : : came in to see us the other day:

He told us that he needed some investment advice, and from what he'd heard of us, he felt we were the people who could help him. "You know," he said, "if you had something wrong with your teeth I'd expect you to come to me : : : or to someone like me qualified to give you good professional advice. Well right now, I need some professional advice about investments. That's why I've come to see you."

We sat down and discussed his problem: It turned out he had a good practice : : : had no dependents other than his wife : : : and he already had arranged a modest retirement program. But he was still practicing and had accumulated funds which he felt, if properly invested, would permit him to add to his retirement fund. He wasn't interested in taking risks : : : he just wanted good investments:

We put some thought on it and came up with a program that we felt was best for him. Here was a professional man who wanted professional advice. He had come to us because he felt we were capable of giving it to him:

If, like our dentist, you think you need professional advice about investments, we believe we can help you, too. We'd be happy to see you in any of our offices : : : of course if it's more convenient just drop us a line

THE BASIC YARDSTICK

The Financial Post calls attention to an important point to which, in a desire to make economics easy for the masses, too many public relations experts have been ignoring.

"So much emphasis has been placed on the relationship of profit to sales that some manufacturers seem to have lost sight of a factor of more vital importance—adequate return on invested capital," the Post says.

"Profit percentage on the sales dollar is important," it says. "That point is easily understood and appreciated by the public. But overlooked by much of the public is the essential importance of capital. It must be put up and put up continuously before there can be any production. And it won't be put up unless it is adequately paid."

The Post makes an important point there. There is, however, another point which should not be overlooked. Besides being important to investors, the question of the return on invested capital is also important to any person who wants to obtain an adequate knowledge of the state of our economy.

A low profit percentage on the sales dollar may indicate one of two things—either that investors are receiving an inadequate return or that the industry in question is highly efficient.

An efficient industry deserves praise. An industry which is not adequately repaying investors, either through dividends or capital appreciation, may be entitled to help, through public protection or government action.

Where expanding demand for a product provides an opportunity to earn a high percentage of profit on the sales dollar, an industry may enjoy a high return on invested capital.

We all know, though, that mass production reduces costs and conversely a high percentage of profit on the sales dollar may be unnecessary by a low volume of sales. An industrialist, contemplating entering a field where a high volume of profit was obtained on the sales dollar, would want to know the reason for it and to ascertain this reason he would endeavor to learn the return on invested capital.

The Financial Post heads its editorial on the importance of the figures for return on invested capital "The Basic Yardstick." The Post is right.

A TRESOME ARGUMENT

The argument that Canadians should preserve forests, game and fish because loss of these natural assets would spoil Canada's beauty is becoming increasingly tiresome.

We have nothing against tourists. Indeed, we like them because for the most part they are amiable, friendly people seeking a little relaxation, which we enjoy in hunting and fishing and so do we. They shoot deer, catch fish, go on canoe trips in national parks and spend their money ungrudgingly on the enjoyment which an all too brief vacation in natural surroundings provides.

Reduction of these esthetic pleasures to financial statements in tourist promotion folders may be one way to assess their value, but something of greater value may be lost in the process. It is a sense of values when discussing conservation of natural resources.

Natural resources should be preserved for the citizens of the country and not for tourists. If it is possible for tourists to share in the enjoyment of those things which a bountiful nature provides, well and good. If the citizens of a country are desirous of maintaining game and wildlife in sanctuaries for tourist dollars, well and good. But preserving these assets because they are valuable tourist lures is secondary to their preservation for the enjoyment of residents and fellow citizens.

The difficulty of educating Canadians to the necessity and value of conservation may very well be misguided emphasis on the value of conservation as a tourist attraction.

There are more Canadian than tourist fishermen taking fish in Canada each year and there are 30 Canadian hunters to every tourist hunter. If the value of conservation must be reckoned in dollars and cents it would seem more sensible to emphasize its revenue-producing qualities among the homefolk. The way out of the conservation because it is a lucrative source of tourist money is a lame argument at best.

Those using tourist revenue as an excuse to plead for conservation are not only taking unfair advantage of the tourist but are doing a disservice to the cause of conservation as well.

WINGS FOR A JAIL BIRD

Latin Americans, who go to jail with greater flourish that anyone else, have even more spectacular ways of escaping.

Slipping away in the dark of night is old sombrero for Cubans. The latest jail break attempt was by plane.

Cesar A. Fuentes, 36, in an attempt to free his brother-in-law Rafael Rodriguez Diaz, was arrested when guards at the Isles of Pines penitentiary seized the airplane he landed on the penitentiary's air field adjacent to the prison's baseball diamond. Diaz is serving a 30-year sentence for armed assault and robbery of the Cuban Continental Bank in 1952.

Fuentes, said military authorities, took off from Manchon Key, off Florida, and flew over Cuba at 10,000 feet to avoid detection before landing at Isles of Pines prison.

Who can tell what will happen to Fuentes in a land that provides baseball diamonds with adjoining airfields at a penitentiary named like a resort hotel? Likely, when he has served his sentence, he will be awarded a medal for ingenuity above and beyond the call of duty.

DISINTERESTED SURGEON

The surgeon looked at me and said:
"I'm sorry that you've come to
"A cold has settled in your head.
Some other doctor you should see;
And I must give it to you flat,
Some one who works on minor ills
I cannot operate for that.
With tablets, soothing syrups, pills.
"I don't know what will cure a sneeze
Or when you're breathing, stop a wheeze.
My business is to cut and sew.
"I am a surgeon, as you know.
The thing of yours I'd not take off
Merely to cure a hacking cough.
Can tell you how to cure a cold,
Tell you how to cure a old.

Old Similes Meaningless

(By Rudolf Elle in the Boston Herald)

I have been pondering the simile—"hot as a pistol."

Now, I ask you, often is a pistol hot? It may be I only reveal an embarrassing ignorance about guns, but I have never known the shooting off a pistol, and it didn't get hot at once.

"Hot as a pistol," suggests the last word in holiness. It seems to create a picture of someone picking up a pistol that has just been fired and finding that it is as if he had seized a silver spoon left too long in boiling water.

There are lots of old similes still alive which are not so meaningful—like a bolt from the blue" means suddenly or unexpectedly, but with a more highly charged significance.

Yet what, precisely, is a bolt from the blue? If the bolt refers to a bolt of lightning how often does one appear in the sky? Once? I've heard tell of such things, but always—precisely as in the old wives' tales . . . but, hey, what's an old wives' tale?

Now let us consider "eat like a horse." As with pistols and old wives, our experience with horses is limited, but I never saw a horse eat anywhere near as enthusiastically as I have seen a dog.

"As pretty as a picture," distresses me, too, for the omission of what it is a picture of deprives it of any meaning whatever. Would one say, "it's as pretty as a picture of a pail of garbage?" or "as pretty as a picture of a deceased angle worm?"

Another simile requiring overhaul is "as dead as a doornail." Sometimes, in such cases I refer to use, a doornail was not a nail employed in the making of a door, but some kind of an animal that when dead, was deader than anything else. If it refers to a nail in a door, however, is the nail deader than the doorknob? Or the handle? Or the keyhole?

As for being "dog tired," is a dog dog more tired than a tired hen?

This year, having been insane enough to plant a little vegetable garden, I went out one day to feel the cauliflower and to see how it was. You are quite correct. They were not. They were as hot as a pist....

The list of tattered and meaningless similes could be extended indefinitely, but I append a select few for immediate limbering.

As cross as a bear. (Bears are always cross in zoos.)

As playful critters until people poke them in the ribs.

As green as grass. (You should see mine in August).

As cute as a button. (Who's got enough to know how good it is?")

As "I'll be a monkey's uncle if I've got two that are a wreck."

However, having worked like a Trojan in the spading dog tired, as dry as a bone, ready to eat like a horse and feeling anything but as sharp as a razor, I feel the time has come to drop the subject like a hot potato and slip away as quietly as a mouse to some near-by bistro.

Woodchuck's Big Sleep

(By Will Barker In National History Magazine)

The big sleep of the 'bears would probably be considered a mighty severe case of insomnia by the woodchuck. The woodchuck goes in for sleeping in a big way and often puts in a solid six months of it—almost double the time the black bear spends in drowsing the winter days away.

In the north, the woodchuck goes into deep winter sleep in his kinfolk in the deep south. In the province of Quebec it may be the middle of September, long before squaw winter has warned the north that it is on the way. The woodchuck settles down either in a grass bed at the end of his tunnel or in an unlined side chamber. He has an effective way of saying "Do not disturb" to the opossums, skunks, or rattlesnakes that would like to share his snug winter quarters. He buries himself alive by sealing off his nine-inch tunnel with dirt scraped from the far end of the burrow.

Once privacy has been ensured, the woodchuck rolls up in a ball, head between his hind feet. Breathing slows down until it almost stops, and then sleep becomes fatal. The animal gets colder and colder until finally his temperature is only a few degrees above freezing. Then, when where between 40 and 57 degrees Fahrenheit is the day or night temperature in true hibernation, insensible to touch or sound, his biological clock runs down.

Ground squirrels, bats and bears, chipmunks, jumping mice, salamanders, mosquitoes, spiders, crayfish and even worms drop off into long periods of deep sleep, during which they live off accumulated fat.

So anesthetized are they that they scarcely bleed, even if cut, and are impossible to arouse. Squirrel dug out of a burrow remains as limp and lifeless as a duck with its neck broken. Insensitive as an Indian fakir on his bed of spikes, it will be shaken, dropped on a table, and even used as a pincushion. Revival is a gradual process, requiring prolonged exposure to heat.

The winter sleep of a bear is another matter, for a bear is only fitful, and his body temperature remains almost normal the year down. It stays high enough to melt any snow drifted into the bear's hibernation cave, windfall or swampy thicket. Because of this and because his long winter sleep is not a normal rate (four or five times a minute), the bear's heart is rarely considered true hibernation.

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

NITROGLYCERIN IS DYNAMITE

Angina came upon me about two years ago when walking fast one day on the street. The pain seemed to start in my chest and run down both arms below the elbows and was severe. I immediately consulted my doctor, who gave me a general overhauling and a careful heart test, and said "your heart is not bad at all, but don't walk so fast and don't indulge in strenuous exercise or heavy work for a while." He gave me some medicine. After that the pangs, left my arms and were confined to the chest and not so severe as before. (K. E. C.)

(So far K. E. C.'s discussion seems more clinical than helpful. But we'll let him chatter a while longer and then give him the hook, while I, who certainly am harm a flea unless I believed the insect were a typhus carrier, finish the story.)

Dr. Brady

Then (continues K.E.C.) I saw your statement:

(After all, it is obvious that my friend K.E.C. is not a medical judgment. He didn't say he saw my ad.)

"Take your statement concerning the use of nitroglycerin for the prevention of the severe pains of angina pectoris, and I procured a vial of 100 tablets from my druggist. I took them very carefully, as you advised, knowing that nitroglycerin is powerful medicine. For instance I plop just one tablet in my mouth under my tongue if I feel the pang coming on or even much distress when walking down the street, and I get relief in a few moments. Your article was certainly a Godsend to me . . . for ever in your debt . . . (K.E.C.)

From this report you might infer that anybody can step into the nearest drugstore and tell the man to hurry up and give you a dozen or a hundred nitroglycerin tablets. Well, anybody can, but the trick is to find a druggist who will sell one, a dozen or a hundred nitroglycerin tablets without a prescription.

For persons of ordinary intelligence, as some druggists inform me whenever I recommend nitroglycerin for angina, the two or some regulation or other prohibits sale of nitroglycerin tablets without prescription.

In the booklet (P.S. about high blood and artery troubles. I say:

"Every, sufferer from angina pectoris should carry at all times a few tablets of nitroglycerin (also called glonoin or glyceryl trinitrate) each tablet containing 1/200th part of a grain.

"Such a tablet, dissolved in the mouth, acts in two minutes. Nitroglycerin is not a heart stimulant. It is a vascular relaxation or dilation of the affected arteries. Nitroglycerin corrects spasms, which supply blood to the heart muscle, brings more blood and more oxygen to the muscle cells. "Any adult may take such a dose of nitroglycerin without danger. Many angina patients take such a dose three or four times a day for weeks or months with benefit and without untoward effect."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE OLD LAMP-LIGHTER

One of the thrills of my youth was to wait on our corner for the Lamp-lighter from night to night. He was a welcome figure in the town with him. I looked upon him as a very important man—as he was. He gave light to the little village, and the good cheer of the lights reflected from the homes throughout the town.

From the window of my city home I now note the electric lights that suddenly appear after dusk, and they remind me of the old Lamp-lighter I used to follow in the quiet mid-eastern town of my youth. With the long handle he would turn on the gas and shoot light with his small flame. It was thrilling to see the light appear each night until finally the street was an avenue of light.

The invention of Edison's great invention of the electric light cannot be over-emphasized. I once tested the lighting of Edison's fine invention, as Edison had prepared it, and rehearsed in the presence of President Hoover and Henry Ford, and others present at the fiftieth anniversary of its invention, at Ford's great Museum at Dearborn, Michigan. Now there is a blanket of lights by electricity giving a light to the whole town.

Like the town's watering trough, the old red barn, the red and white picket fence, the old-time log cabin, the big round wooden tub for Saturday's bath, and the old Lamp-lighter, these are but memories. But, to us who knew them all, they are wonderful memories. Like the Lamp-lighter most, for his lighting of the town meant so much.

And so it is that I have always wanted these brief talks to be the Lamp-lighter's, some of these may burn brighter than others, but that is what I meant to give light, just a little hope and comfort.

Air Pressure Propels Boat

(Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

First radical change in methods of ship propulsion in many years is reported from British Guiana, it was announced today.

It will revolutionize canal and river traffic. The new idea does away with the necessity for propellers or paddles.

Installed in a 25-foot former navy pontoon, the system mollifies the boat by low air pressure supplied through an air box. The box is shaped on an inclined plane, and lies beneath the surface of the water.

A fan driven by a motor supplies air through the box, the air being discharged through a front five feet wide. This, travelling up an inclined plane, pushes the craft forward.

The 81-year-old inventor, Frank Walder of Allington, Berks, recently gave the parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Transport, Leslie Hale his "air-boat", and officials of the British Transport Commission Dock and Inland Waterways authority were so impressed by trials that they raked the designer to make certain modifications for a further test.

An important point about the new system of propulsion is that it reduces erosion along canal and river banks, cutting the cost of their maintenance.

Clergyman Has 'Bouse'

(Halifax Chronicle-Herald)

An aged clergyman in England is the owner of a curios little rodent (if rodent it be) which he insists is a cross between a bat and a mouse.

The name quite obviously is "bouse," though it would look like a cold in the head.

The director of the London Zoo at Regent's Park is not only sceptical, but laconically emphatic: "Quite impossible," he says. "Can't be done. Never has been done. Never will be done."

The aged rector would appear to be quite a zoologist in his own right.

He is described as "a part-time rabbit, goose, goat, snake keeper" who has "claimed a place in the zoological sun." In 1941, it seems, he "had a solid grey mouse—that was eaten by a pink rat!

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Many of my relatives are farmers still, though most of the tribe have migrated to the city and come to live by their wits. One of the former cousins was visiting the house the other night when the snow started. The dishes were done, the TV was on, and I had to go out with the snow shovel and clear the front walk.

The farmer offered to come and do it, even in his city clothes. But I refused. I like to shovel snow. So he put his hat on and came and stood on the front step to keep me company.

"Hey, just a minute!" he protested, as I started to shovel the snow flying. "What's the hurry?"

I rested on my shovel.

"Well, I wanted to get the job done," I suggested.

"Now, look," said my cousin, "a job is a job. It's not a thing to be done. But it deserves to be done. But it deserves a thing. It deserves to be treated as if it were hateful, as if there were no pleasure in it."

"You mean," I rested," that shovelling snow should be a pleasure?"

"Well," said my cousin, puzzled, "there ought to be a pleasure in all jobs. If there isn't, can you be done in this world? I'm thinking of a man, for example, who digs wells or milking the cows on a cold night. But I'm the city, there must be end of jobs that, if you didn't take some pleasure out of them . . ."

I went slower. I saved my wind and my muscles. I finished the job and the snow, emptied the shovel easily. I figured there would be another couple inches in the snowy night. I had a long way to go, down the walk, along the road and I was the hurry? The snow falls. It has got to be removed. A job is a job. My cousin came down and tried to take the shovel. I refused. He asked me what about how you go at each job, pleasantly, sparing yourself, taking it easy, finding some little more de-lightful in it.

"Public relations," I replied, "is public relations might well be described as the art of not treating the public like relations.

Strength for the Day

BLESS THE DREAMER

Almost 150 years ago Robert Owen, scientific, English-speaking world by setting up at New Lanark in Scotland one of the most amazing Utopian villages that ever appeared on earth. He was the socialist owner of New Lanark and, in a day when the industrial revolution was changing the working man into a slave and most of the towns and cities of England into slums, Owen built up a great manufacturing plant, housed his people in suitable and healthful quarters, provided for the education of the children, abolished child labor and—most amazing of all—made his enterprise bring in stupendous financial returns. He put Christian principles into operation in industry and they paid off handsomely.

People came from all over the world to see the new order of life at Lanark. Had Owen been satisfied with his success in New Lanark, all would have been well. But he gathered up his fortune and came to America to found a new Utopian centers which did not have to depend on a wound industry behind them, and they failed. Owen ended up a poor and discredited man.

But what a dream! and what a glorious memory! How the practical people of the world scoff at the dreamer. But if we would only follow our dreams, God (the world in which we live might well experience a heavenly improvement.

Orwell's '1984' Arouses Ire Of TV Audience

LONDON (Reuters) — Angry television viewers burned telephone and telegram wires Sunday night protesting to the British Broadcasting Corporation and newspapers against a TV production of "1984," about an imaginary political nightmare world of the future.

Complaints, running into the hundreds, said the TV play was "disgusting," "nauseating," "horrible" and "appalling." It brought the largest number of protests the BBC has ever known.

Before "1984" began, the BBC warned that the play was "unsuitable for elderly people or for younger members of the family." "1984" by the late George Orwell.

APPROPRIATE SOUNDS

Among the scenes which viewers claimed were horrifying was one where the young hero lay strapped to a mechanical coffin-like torture machine with a dial which registered the degrees of pain he was being "brain-washed." The scene was shown with accompanying groans and cries of pain.

The hero was then dragged into another room and confronted with a mask to be fitted to his face and then connected to a cage of hungry sewer rats.

The Daily Sketch splashed the audience protests on its front page under the headline, "tortures on television horrify whole nation."

British newspaper printed statements from viewers who telephoned in to-protest.

"I trembled with fear. It was not fit for ordinary decent-minded human beings to see," one woman said in The News Chronicle.

A man said he felt like throwing a hammer through his TV set.

A BBC spokesman said later, "We put the play on because we felt we were giving viewers a masterpiece of our time. It is a major work adapted from a book by one of our finest modern authors.

"Despite the protests, the play is still scheduled to be shown again Thursday night."

Story of Rescue Told by Captain Of Dragger

GLOUCESTER, Mass. (AP)—The dragger Emily Brown arrived from the Nova Scotian banks Saturday with a three-day rescue in freezing high seas and gale-driven snow.

Eight days ago, in gathering darkness, Capt. Philip Fileto, 53, and his seven-man crew came upon a lifeboat with five unconscious survivors of the capsized Canadian tug Roullie of Montreal. Five other men were lost.

Capt. Fileto said:

"It was a thick snow storm and blowing a gale of wind. We practically ran into the 18-foot lifeboat containing the tug's survivors. They had taken it for four hours. . .

"They were lying as if they were all dead. It was bitter cold and they looked frozen. We managed to get them safely aboard. . . We realized there was still some life in them and we got hot coffee and plenty of brandy into them. It was two hours later before they began to come to."

Safe Too Big, Jams in Door

OTTAWA (CP)—A safe containing $1,000 was just too big to be squeezed through the back door of a west-end hotel Sunday and thieves had to abandon it there unopened.

The hotel proprietor found the 2,000-pound safe with one corner protruding through the open door. It had been dragged there from behind the hotel bar. Police a short time later found a stolen truck, its motor still running, parked outside the hotel. But no thieves.

Saunders Wants Judicial Probe Of Entertainment

TORONTO (CP) — More entertainment accounts will be thrown open to the public today to see how entertainment expenses of two former mayors compare with similar payments authorized by Allan A. Lamport when he was chief magistrate.

The accounts ordered opened by board of control will be scrutinized by newspaper reporters. They will deal with the regimes of Robert H. Saunders and Hiram E. McCallum from 1945-51.

Meanwhile, Mayor Saunders, whose term continues to the end of the year, said he will ask Attorney-General Dana Porter of Ontario to names a judge and counsel to investigate Mr. Lamport's entertainment accounts.

A check of the accounts last week showed he spent slightly more than $13,000.

PROVIDED FREE

Mr. Lamport said the hotel suite was provided for his use by the Canadian Pacific Railway, owners of the hotel, free and charge. He said he headed a $100,000,000-a-year business and spent one-hundredth of one per cent entertaining.

Mayor Saunders, vacationing in Detroit, said the inquiry will try to determine whether the money spent by Mr. Lamport entertaining visitors was properly spent.

"It isn't a question of how much was spent but how it was spent," he said. The only way to clear up the controversy is to have all the evidence produced before a judicial commission and have all the principals testify under oath, Mr. Saunders added.

The mayor intends to return here Tuesday and will start proceedings at a board of control meeting Wednesday.

OPPOSE SUGGESTION

TORONTO (CP)—Most of the members of Toronto's board of control and city council said today they were not in favor of Mayor Leslie Saunders' suggestion of a judicial inquiry into city entertainment expenditures.

Controller David Balfour, expressing opposition to the idea, said in reply to an informal newspaper poll that he is provoked over the whole issue because he thinks Toronto "is being made to look cheap."

Controller Ford Brand said he does not think a judicial inquiry is necessary, a view held by several aldermen.

However, Ald. William Dennison said he thinks such an inquiry would "clear the air."

Map Draftsman Home After Trip Around World

OTTAWA (CP)—A young government map draftsman, Jean Adamson, caught the wanderlust from her work here and started out 20 months ago with a girl companion for New Zealand and some of the other lands she has since been living only on her maps.

Now 25, the attractive blonde is home after a trip which took her around the world, visiting such places as Australia, Tasmania, Colombo, Napies and Marseilles.

Her map-drawing knowledge got her government jobs for 10 months at Wellington, New Zealand, and eight months in London. Her companion remained in New Zealand and Joan travelled alone after leaving Wellington.

"I didn't seem to meet anyone who wasn't surprised to find me travelling alone," she said.

She liked New Zealand best, but home was welcome.

"I don't think much of any men except Canadian ones. I didn't see any men in any country who impressed me in the least."

As for Canadian women: "I've seen more well-dressed women in the few days I've been home than in all the 20 months I've been away."

Albertan Says Globe and Mail Will Be Sold

CALGARY (CP)—The Albertan says it has learned the Globe and Mail, Toronto's oldest newspaper, will be offered for sale early in January.

The Calgary morning newspaper also says it has learned that "the Jack Kent Cooke and Roy Thomson publishing interests in the East were studying the forthcoming offer with a view to buying."

The story states "it is understood" the Globe and Mail, controlling interest of which is held by the estate of George McCullagh who died Aug. 5, 1952, will be disposed of in the same manner as the Toronto Telegram.

The Telegram, owned by Mr. McCullagh was bought in October, 1952, by John Bassett and associates for an undisclosed amount believed in newspaper circles to be about $4,000,000.

The Globe and Mail, a morning newspaper, came into being in its present form in November, 1936, when Mr. McCullagh merged the old Globe, which he had bought five weeks earlier for $1,850,000, and the Mail and Empire which he purchased for $2,020,000.

The paper is housed in a six-storey building erected for the purpose at the corner of King and York streets in downtown Toronto and named for the late William D. Wright, the multimillion-aire mining man who backed Mr. McCullagh in his first newspaper purchases.

Mr. McCullagh bought the Telegram in 1946 for $2,813,000. Mr. Wright had no part in the Telegram purchase.

The papers were operated as separate entities by Mr. McCullagh, who held a controlling interest in both when he died.

The Globe and Mail has since then been operated by trustees of the estate, whose beneficiaries are Mr. McCullagh's widow, children and sisters.

His will disposing of an estate valued at $4,000,000, did not specifically mention the Globe and Mail nor did it mention the extent of his interest in that paper or the Telegram. However, one clause, dealing by name with the Telegram, empowered the trustees to sell at any time they deemed it advisable.

In 1953, the Globe and Mail's best year of operation, it reported a circulation of 229,000 and net profit was believed to be about $600,000.

As a modern version of the old Globe, founded 110 years ago, the oldest newspaper.

Canadians Gabbiest People in World Survey Discloses

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians are the gabbiest people in the world, the annual world telephone survey showed today.

The 1954 edition of telephone statistics of the world shows Canadians averaged 411.3 telephone conversations during 1953, compared with 365.3 in the United States and 373.3 in Iceland.

Canada is third in the total number of telephones and in the number of telephones per 100 persons. The United States has 50,400,000 telephones in service, the United Kingdom 6,100,000 and Canada 3,800,000. Only eight other nations have more than 1,000,000.

Montreal, with 466,000 has the most telephones of any city in Canada. Toronto is second with 424,000.

Mrs. Robert Small, of Niagara Falls, Ontario, spent the week-end with her sisters, Mrs. Mary and Cora Frost and brother Howard, Ann Street.

Mrs. Mildred McCullough, of Toronto, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Earl Preston, at 1-3 Charlotte street, met with an unfortunate accident on Wednesday through a fall on the icy street, fracturing her collar bone. Mrs. McCullough is under the doctor's care.

Mr. G. Pouli, Mrs. Pouli and sons, of Trenton, R.R. 1, attended the Christmas concert at the Ontario School for the Deaf, Friday evening. Mr. Pouli, who is Dutch and a relatively new Canadian, having come to Canada five years ago, expressed his appreciation of things Canadian.

St. Margaret's Guild Enjoys Christmas Party

The members of St. Margaret's Guild met in the church hall on Monday evening for the final meeting of the year and the annual Christmas party.

Rev. L. Arthur Page opened the meeting with prayer. A short business period followed with Mrs. F. R. Moore presiding. The purchase of additional nursery supplies and kindergarten chairs was reported. The treasurer, Mrs. R. J. Wood, gave a brief survey of the bazaar receipts, which were slightly higher than last year.

The meeting then adjourned and a Christmas tea was enjoyed. A contest of names of scrambled letters and terms was won by Mrs. D. Kaye.

Charades, under the direction of Mrs. H. Wood, were much enjoyed.

The highlight of the program was a set of slides, entitled, "Christmas Blessings," presented by Mrs. Page, while Rev. Page narrated the accompanying script.

Members then gathered around a Christmas tree for an exchange of gifts.

The hostesses, Mrs. F. Bradley and Mrs. F. Platt, served a salad plate with rolls, coffee and cookies.

Rednersville W.A. Elects Officers

The Rednersville W.A., met on Wednesday in the afternoon at the parsonage. The president, Mrs. Lorne Ward, opened the meeting with the Christmas service of worship by all singing "Silent Night, Holy Night," followed by Scripture lesson read by Mrs Morley Rorabeck. Meditation "God's Gift", was given by the president. The following verses read: "Love Came to Us in a Song", by Mrs. Ralph Stafford; "Love Came to Us in a Star", by Mrs. Harry Adams, and "Love Came to Us in the Wise Winsome Babe" by Mrs. Clifford Hillman. The worship service closed by singing "O Little Town of Bethlehem."

OFFICERS ELECTED

The following officers were elected for year 1955 — honorary president, Mrs. Lorne Ward; president, Mrs. Ralph Stafford; 1st vice-president, Mrs. T. F. Townsend; 2nd social secretary, Mrs. Rae Roblin; secretary, Miss Marjorie Roblin; assistant secretary, Mrs. Clifford Hillman; treasurer, Mrs. Roy Wannamaker; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harry Adams; pianist, Mrs. Earl MacKay; assistant pianist, Mrs. Ross Roblin.

FLORAL TRIBUTE

A thank-you letter was read from Mrs. W. C. Dempsey for the beautiful lunch given in her on her 80th birthday by the W.A.

Mrs. Morley Rorabeck favored with a solo "Away in a Manger," which was enjoyed by all, after which a social hour was spent by the exchange of Christmas gifts and refreshments.

Mrs. Leon Ward moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Townsend for opening her home and also to the program and lunch committees.

O.S.D. Students Give Fine Portrayal Of Yuletide Pageant, 'The Nativity'

For approximately 20 years the students of the Ontario School for the Deaf have presented their Christmas pageant, "The Nativity" to an ever-growing appreciative public, and Friday evening, the old, old story of the "Babe of Bethlehem" was told to a capacity-filled auditorium in a very much beauty of portrayal and sensitivity of feeling, the objective being to bring the meaning of Christmas to the students, in all its richness by means of the eye-gate.

The auditorium displayed a festive air with its garlands of red and green running along the walls from end to end, and loops of it intervals by large and small simulated wreaths. On the blackboard at the rear, "Merry Christmas to All", was artistically written in red, and at one side near the platform stood a tall Christmas tree gaily decorated with miniature candles, glittering icicles, red, green and crimson ornaments, and loops of silver ropes, and at the top, a silver finger pointing to the sky.

EXTENDS WELCOME

The superintendent of the School, Mr. J. G. Dennett, B.A., B.Paed., extended a welcome to all, and expressed his appreciation for the fine assembly of parents, old friends, and the many new faces present; as well as thanks to the staff members, especially to Miss Parker, Mrs. Davidson, Alec Gordon, the teacher's choirs and to other staff members who had assisted in the pageant. He also gave a brief explanation of the method of instruction of deaf children, and pointed out those on the program who had no hearing, and those who had had some when very young.

The program consisted of two parts; part one included choruses by the senior girls, "Hallelujah," and "Whistling Wind," and trios, by B. Barnado, Y. Darbi, and M. Laffrenier, the rendition of "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," "Hark, The Herald Angels Sing", and "While Christmas," was exceedingly well done. The Rhythm band, comprised of 1A and 2A seniors, as usual was much appreciated.

Part two was devoted to the "Nativity Play", which had been adapted and directed by Miss Helen Keeler, and Mr. Alec Gordon who arranged the music and dialogue. This play is a portrayal of the events leading up to the birth of Christ as recorded in the Bible. Preceding each scene, a portion of Scripture, describing the scene, was read by Vivian Curtis; Doreen Brown, Joanne Bronkmier, Rosemary Burnett and Mary O'Neill.

The play was portrayed in five scenes, "The Annunciation", with Jeannette Mast as Mary, and Sarah Brant, as the angel of the annunciation; scene II, "Arrival at the Inn", with David Legue, as the inn keeper; Harold Bradley, and Glen Skinkle, as publicans; Billy Bates, and Brian Murphy as Roman soldiers; Paul Simmons, and Robert Ebersole, as tax payers; Norman Rutan as Joseph.

JUDEAN HILLS

Scene III, "On the Hill of Judea" showed the shepherds in the resni-night around a glowing fire; the sudden appearance of the herald angel, and the heavenly host, with Russell Kishowski; Alan Ogawa; Robert Stewart; Jarvis Carey, Glenn Hagedorn, and Grant Drury as shepherds; Billy O'Neill as the head shepherd who brings the message of the angel's appearance, (Christina Bennett) and Faye Westbrook; Elise Cushing, Nora K. Matheweon, Peggy DeLaFrambier, Colleen Williams, Joan Cullen, Isabel Nugent, Jean Drury, Joyce Rath, and Shirley Girdler, as the heavenly host.

Scene IV, "King Herod's Court." This scene was most colorful; and each one of the cast portrayed the spirit of the time, with Judith Fitzwelly planning how he might circumvent the Wise Men. These included John Fossum as King Herod; Kenneth Seaman as the high priest; Gerry Sullivan as the altar boy; Donald Dennis, and Billy Gardner as the scribes; Billy Bates, and Brian Murphy as Roman guards; Karen Rogers, and Marilyn Fisher, as slave girls, and Donald Sattler; Billy Hemphill and Brian Meany, as the wise men.

THE NATIVITY SCENE

Scene V, "The Nativity," was most lovely with the angels of the annunciation in gleaming white; Mary and Joseph and the Babe, the four cherubims, the kneeling shepherds in their homely apparel and crooks; and the three wisemen, now standing near, on the glistening gold satin with golden crown, one in green and purple, and one in blue and silver, who had presented their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh to the new born King, lifting it high for the adoration of all. There was acknowledged by a sudden flash of light. The heavenly host arrived in a large

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TWO HUSBANDS WHOSE FLIRTATIONS MAKE THEIR WIVES MISERABLE

What I wrote recently about husbands who are incurable flirts has brought letters from many women with problems of this same type.

One of them writes that she was happily married for years, with no suggestion of any such trouble, until her husband reached his 40th birthday.

"Since then, she says, "he has a constant desire to flirt with young girls and young women, humiliating me by the bold advances he makes to them when we are out together in public. We had had such an outstandingly happy marriage for so many years that I could not have imagined that anything could happen this late in life to make me completely lose confidence and faith in him."

In such a case as this, since the wife apparently had a good deal to do with whom she could find no fault until now, his personality apart from his accustomed behavior pattern is undoubtedly a passing phase, of a kind that many middle-aged men go through. Eventually, he will return to his normal self.

Perhaps she does not know that doctors agree today that men, as well as women, go through a change of life, and this is almost certainly what is happening to her 55-year-old husband. Many women, during the change of life, do erratic things which are alien to their established behavior. The same is true of men.

The kind of experience she is having so easy thing to bear. It is, in fact, just as she says, both humiliating and damaging to her confidence in her husband. But if she can summon up the fortitude to bear it as best she can, avoiding emotional scenes which only aggravate the situation. I am sure she will, in time, turn back again the man who she declares, was for so many years "considerate and faithful."

There is another husband about whom a wife writes me, however, who, I am afraid, has no such "considerate and faithful" self to which to return. For he has not fallen a victim to the adolescent foolishness that comes out in so many men in middle life. Instead, he showed clearly, in his early youth, that he was an "incurable wolf," as his wife calls him. She knew it, yet she married him.

"Before we were married, at 21," she writes, "my husband had over 20 different girls. The reason I married him was because I was the only one he really went steady with, and I felt that after marriage he would settle down.

"Shortly after the wedding, he was inducted into the army and went overseas. I tried to go with him, but he kept telling me it was too dangerous. Only a few weeks ago did I learn the real reason was that he was having affairs with eight different women over there."

This wife does not say how long they have been married, but I get the impression that it has been more than a few years. Therefore, her husband's escapades with women cannot be blamed on the aberrations of middle-age from a basic character defect. For this reason, and even though his wife says that "except for this one fault, he's a very good person," and I feel that if we could work this out, our marriage could be quite happy," I am very much afraid that the outlook for working it out is not bright.

Here are some of the things his wife reports:

At parties, he ignores her completely and "goes panting after the other women. He dances, he flirts with the curboys, in stores it's the clerks, and so on, and at home I'm ashamed to have any of my girl friends in because of him. He collects boxes of pin-up pictures that he drools over, and recently he acquired such a case on a certain movie actress that when she divorced her husband, he asked me for a divorce so he could go to Hollywood and pursue her. He

Homemade Sweet Tidbits

By Mary Moore

Is everybody calm and collected? That is everybody but me. It is SO TRY to create the illusion of everything's-under-control.

Well, I'm not. When I've got guests from just making the slipper on my slacks, and about half an hour ago got kicked in the my own can—one door being frozen shut. It's upsetting.

But do I complain? . . . gully, I guess I do.

Anyway I have to keep my promise to you so I'll try to ignore the guests and give you the all-time confections and candied grapefruit peel I mentioned last week. Incidentally the grapefruit peel is a delectable little morsel that costs very little. Too bad your week's supply of candy is skins is in the garbage isn't it?

CANDIED GRAPEFRUIT PEEL

Save the skins from halved grapefruit—a whole large grapefruit will yield about 150 pieces. With the bowl of a spoon scrape off the inner white membrane and cut the skin into strips about four inches long, or they may be cut in fancy petal shapes. Cover with cold water and boil in open pot for 15 minutes. Discard the water and repeat with fresh water—this makes it beautifully boiling. Measure drained peel. For each cup add 1 cup sugar, 3-4 cup water and 1-12 teaspoon salt. Cook slowly in open pan until syrup is quite heavy—however it syrup caramelizing—this must be removed from heat before syrup turns dark gold or brown. Remove from heat and measure. For each cup of peel and syrup add 3-4 teaspoon gelatin soaked in 1 tablespoon cold water 1 minutes and stir until dissolved. Let stand in syrup until cold. Drain pieces of peel on cake rack and then roll in granulated sugar and let stand in single layer until dry.

NOTE:

The addition of the gelatin keeps the peel soft.

FRUIT SWEETMEATS

(A sugarless confection.)

Ideal as a sweet in homes where sugar is taboo.

One cup washed and stoned dates, 1-3 cup each shredded cocoanut, walnuts, raisins, 2 figs. Put all through the finding knife of food chopper. Mix well and add 1-4 teaspoon salt, the finely grated rind of 1 orange and 1 tablespoon orange juice and, if desired, 2 tablespoons honey. Mix well—using the hands is recommended—press shape into small balls, using about 1-2 tablespoon of the mixture to each ball. Roll in fine cocoanut. Let stand on wax paper to dry out. For gala occasions cocoanut may be colored.

CHRISTMAS MACAROONS

(Baked.)

To two-thirds cup sweetened condensed milk add 1 teaspoon vanilla and 1 cup each shredded cocoanut, whole or halved pecans or walnuts, sliced mixed red and green glace cherries. Mix very well. Drop from buttered teaspoon onto well-buttered cookie sheet. Shape into neat balls with buttered fingertips. These should be at least 1 inch apart. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 8 or 10 minutes or until delicately tinged with gold. Remove from pan at once and let cool and dry on waxed paper.

TUTTI-FRUITTI BALLS

(Unbaked)

Quickly wash, then dry apricots then grind them and measure 1-2 cups. (The apricots should not be pre-soaked.) To them add 2 cups shredded cocoanut or 1 cup shredded cocoanut and 1-2 cup chopped walnuts or almonds and 1-2 cup mixed sliced glace cherries. Add also 2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk and blend well. Shape into balls between moistened palms, then roll in icing sugar. Let these dry until firm.

Any of these little tidbits would be pretty and interesting on a plate of dainty and varied cookies.

Beauty

By HELEN JAMIESON

TYPES OF BEAUTY

There are many terms for feminine beauty and each one has a slightly different meaning. Here is a fine distinction between them.

The beautiful woman is blessed with an ample blossom complexion, perfect features and a dainty figure. There are not many women entitled to be called beautiful because in order to be so classed one has to be flawless in appearance.

When we say a woman is handsome we think of one who is regal, has poise is distinguished of manner. She is the ideal and has been through the ages.

Prettiness is associated with youth. This fresh loveliness may last through the late teens but in the twenties appearance takes on a more mature form that may or may not place a girl among the good-lookers.

Then, there is the woman to whom others refer as fascinating, captivating or charming. She is the luckiest one of all since she is not blessed with beauty, good looks or features or a graceful figure. She has developed qualities that make her admired and beloved.

She is intelligent; if she were not she could not be charming. She has nice manners, a pleasing voice, is tactful. Her friendship is sought and the members of her while family adore her.

Of the attractive woman there are many types. One may be attractive by her eyes, another has a flair for clothes; another's interest in the arts or conversational gifts make her interesting. All these types appear more to one person than to another, but the charming woman appeals to all with whom she comes in contact.

Every attractive woman should endeavor to make the most of her looks. There is no virtue in dullness. But real beauty includes something more than external appearances and physical perfection.

SIZE OF KNIVES AND FORKS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently a friend of mine's present parents gave me quite a few pieces in the silver pattern that I had chosen. They gave me as many pieces as they could afford at that time, with the intention of completing it at my wedding, and explained that they plan to give some pieces on such occasions as Christmas, wedding anniversaries, and so forth. We have no dinner knives and forks, but we do have the luncheon-size knives and forks. When we start housekeeping soon, will it be correct for us to use the luncheon knives and forks as dinner knives and forks? — Recent bride

Yes, certainly. As a matter of fact, many people prefer the medium-size (luncheon) knives and forks to the larger size (dinner) knives and forks, and don't make much point. If any point, about owning both sizes. And you will find many convenient uses for your medium-size knives and forks.

BRIDE'S MOTHER WRITES FINE LETTER TO GROOM'S MOTHER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our son is to be married in a few weeks to a young lady whom we haven't met. She lives in a distant city, and we will not be able to attend the wedding. We haven't met the bride's parents either, but today we received a lovely letter from the bride's mother, telling us in full detail the plans for the wedding. Should I answer this? If so, would you please suggest what to say? We do so want to do the right thing. — His Mother

Here's a kind and gracious woman indeed, who knows just what the mother and father of their daughter's bridegroom-to-be would want to know about the plans for the wedding they will not be able to attend. I can well imagine how deeply touched you and your family were at such warm-hearted thoughtfulness. And yes, indeed, you must answer this letter, and as soon as possible.

Tell this mother how happy you and your husband were to receive the wonderful letter, how deeply you appreciate her kind and gracious thought of you, how thrilled you are to know the plans for the wedding, how happy and proud you would both be if you could attend this wedding so dear to your hearts. Tell her too how happy you and your husband are to welcome into your family such a fine and charming girl as their daughter is . . . and tell you know because of the beautiful things your son has written you about her. Write from your mother-heart to her mother-heart, as she did to you . . . and now it's your turn to tell her the things you know she would like to have share with her.

FORMAL INVITATIONS SHOULD BE MAILED

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our daughter is to be married soon, and we are assembling our list and planning the invitations. One special question: We have lived in this neighborhood for many years, and we have quite a few neighbors to whom we are especially devoted. Our daughter, the bride-to-be, and my husband think that the invitations (formal, engraved invitations) should be mailed to these neighbors, just as the rest of the invitations are to be mailed, but I thought maybe I should deliver these invitations "in person." What do you suggest about this? — Mother

My advice is that you mail these formal invitations to your neighbors, just as you mail the other invitations.

CHRISTMAS-TIME IS ADDRESS BOOK-TIME

Christmas-time is the time when most of us get our address-books in up-to-date condition. For this wonderful letter, and deeply appreciate her kind and gracious written or printed-on address-stickers are of good and timely service . . .

And live upon a street

And it will often help you much

To have your list complete!"

Five Dresses Sold Shortly After Showing

By PAULINE KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—Fifteen minutes after Canadian fashion designers concluded their first style show in New York Tuesday five of their dresses were sold.

Orders rolled in just as the 13 designers from Montreal, Toronto and St. Catharines were experiencing the let-down period after the strain of watching their creations being previewed by one of the toughest fashion audiences in the world.

The show, sponsored by the Canadian Association of Couturiers, the Canadian government and textile manufacturers, was Canada's first plunge into the fashion prize already.

Models sold were creations of Montreal designers Marie France, d'Anjour, Raoul-Jean Fourre and France Davies.

SOLD, TWO

Designer Davies sold two—a gold nylon fleece "bunny hug" coat which featured a deeply flared back and unusual geometrical design lining of blue linen. The coat drew applause when it appeared on the ramp a few minutes before.

Her second sale was a two-piece coral dress, a flared coral cape worn over a form-fitting low cut under-dress.

"Versailles," a coat-dress ensemble of violent red and soft grey, was sold by Marie France. It demonstrated the "wing look" with wildly-flared coat belted over a very simple, moulded grey dress.

FLOWERED CREATION

"My Garden," a fragile, flowered creation by Couturier Association president Raoul-Jean Fourre, also went on the block. Couturier d'Anjour sold a cocktail dress, a frothy nylon lace satin number worn with pink fox strap furs.

But the one question still bothering couturiers is price. Buyers and department store representatives wanted price quotations. Most of the designers hadn't got around to working out any scale.

Other buyers asked where they could get gowns manufactured in large quantities. This the association hopes to lick by getting department stores interested in their models for mass production.

Women's Activities

The December meeting of the Carnifton W.M.S. was held in the Sunday School rooms with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. J. Williams, opened the meeting. A few thoughts on Christmas followed and a hearty welcome was extended to the members and visitors.

The Mission Band leader, Mrs. R. Pound, read an interesting letter from Miss Agnes Quinn, missionary nurse at Ahousat, B.C., thanking the Mission Band for the Sunday School papers sent to her. Following is part of the letter.

INDIAN VILLAGE

"Ahousat is quite a large Indian village, about 400 people, with the houses close together. Our church is the centre of the social life of the village. The children look forward eagerly to Sunday School. There are two teachers and myself.

"Every Monday, after school, the junior teacher has Mission Band at the church, which stands on a hill where everyone can see it.

"Wednesday, our W.M.S. meets in the afternoon. One meeting a month is for study and devotions. At the others we sew. Last year we made a nice quilt and this year we are making another.

"Thursday evening we have prayer meeting. For this, we gather in different homes. Sometimes I lead the meeting and sometimes the native people do so.

"On Friday, our Y.P.U. meets, since we had no mid-week group for Explorers, Tyro or CGIT this year, all those who are over the Mission Band age come to the Y.P.U. We have devotional study and discussion and end up with games.

FULL WEEK

"Saturday, we try to keep free, as I have to prepare for the Sunday services. We have a service at 11.00 in the morning, Sunday School in the afternoon, and a sing-song service in the church at 7.30 in the evening. So you see it is a pretty full week.

"I do the nursing in the village. We have a nice, small dispensary provided by the Department of Indian Affairs. There is no place for patients, so I go to the homes and if they are very sick I send them to the hospital at Tofino, 12 or 16 miles away. We go down in one of the small fishing boats, which is pretty hard to get there in bad weather.

"With very best wishes for success in your work and may God bless each one of you who help to love and serve Him."

Christian Stewardship secretary, Mrs. A. Holgate, gave a report and stated the "Goal" for 1955 is the same.

The missionary for prayer is Miss Elizabeth Utling.

Mrs. G. Brenton took charge of the meeting, taking the worship service from the Missionary Monthly.

Mrs. H. Farnham read the Christmas story from St. Luke, and Mrs. G. Brenton gave a Christmas story.

Mrs. D. Williams favored with a solo and Mrs. L. S. Throop gave some worthwhile thoughts pertaining to Christmas.

Rev. L. S. Throop dedicated the offering and Rev. W. R. Merrick closed the meeting with prayer.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour spent.

SCIENCE TEACHER

LONDON (CP) — The United Nations educational, scientific and cultural organization reported Dr. Herbert H. Grantham, Canadian educationist, has arrived in Hashemite, Jordan, to act as a government adviser on science teaching.

Farm Women Yearning For Better Things

OTTAWA (CP)—A farmer's wife, mother of five children, said Tuesday that farm women are yearning for some of the better things of life—and they want them now, "not when many of us will be only a name on a tombstone."

Mrs. Evelyn Prosser of Blackstone, Ont., women's president of the Ontario Farmers' Union, said farm women are tired of working to make profits for everyone who handles their products, except their own families.

"And we are more than a little angry," she said in a speech before the annual federal-provincial agricultural conference.

Egg prices have dropped sharply she said, and just when farmers need federal price support, it doesn't seem to be working. And when it does, "it acts as a protection not for the producer but for the dealer."

HIGH IN CITIES

"The same drop in prices applies to chickens and turkeys this fall, so that after a summer's work the farm woman finds prices she is receiving do not adequately cover production costs. And yet, when farm women go shopping for necessities, they find that city consumers are paying high prices for eggs and poultry meats."

Mrs. Prosser said the women themselves might be at fault for the present state of affairs. In earlier days of farm organization, this group, "skilled at taking a hand in the organizations. But later, when the big parent bodies were organized, they pinned their faith on the co-operative movement settling their problems.

"We farm women aren't taking any more chances of leaving it all to the men," she said. With farm unions coming to life, they were participating as equal partners with the men. The women believed a poultry producers' pool-keting board would get them better prices for eggs and poultry meats.

Women wanted more electrical power for their homes, better roads, and wanted the federal government to "fulfil its promise of institutin' a national health scheme."

Pink and Mink Top Color Tones In Draperies

By VIVIAN BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — Pink and mink appear to be the top color tones in the draperies shown by makers of roller prints at a New York drapery and curtain showings.

All over town, too, pink is the darling of the fashionable market—curtains, slipcovers and bedspreads. Beige to brown mink shades — tawny wild or darker ranch-mink white backgrounds — embellish motifs such as leaves as one of the more popular designs.

Sometimes the pink is icy, other times it is soarngey in melon hues or a flattering (to women) pinky mauve. Apple green is new on the scene. Charcoal and turquoise hold their popularity and white is everywhere as background or to quench a too-colorful motif. Purples in deep tones strongly. There are more two-color combinations as well as more color colors seen less popular than in recent years.

Plaid and geometric combinations—color related with solids, leaf and floral motifs as well as conventional prints are shown. The international theme represents about five per cent of each line. Even scenics appear smaller, however, than usual in most designs.

Corduroy has emerged in solid and prints for draperies. Fortisan and fiber glass are popular in sheers. Nubby textured weaves, cark and sailcloth (in tiny all-over print gaining momentum while antique satins seem to be losing ground. One firm showed a millions insulated drapery fabric.

Organdie, dacron, nylon and cotton non-tarnishable and machine-washable.

Sister Can Tell Babies Apart In Nursery

TORONTO (CP) — About 19 babies a day are born at downtown St. Michael's Hospital but Sister Vincentia, supervisor of the obstetrical department, can tell them all apart while they are in the nursery.

Her life is devoted to making the obstetrical department and the nursery as safe as possible for infants.

"Our death rate last year was only 10 in 1,000 and those were mostly premature or babies born with congenital deformities."

The rate for all Canada is 38 in 1,000.

Sister Vincentia credits her hospital's good standing to cleanliness and efficiency.

She graduated in 1922 and first did public health nursing and worked with the Victorian Order of Nurses in Cobalt, Ont.

Later she entered the Order of St. Joseph and she was assigned to the obstetrics department at St. Michael's in 1928.

RESEARCH SPECIAL COT

To teach new methods how to care for babies, she designed a special cot. It is glass-enclosed, open on one side, with a metal cabinet underneath for bedding, clothing, washing and feeding equipment.

Twenty-five years ago 85 per cent of babies were born at home.

"That's when people had homes with plenty of room," Sister Vincentia said.

But times have changed and frequently it is hard to get help.

St. Michael's Hospital, in which 2,634 babies were born last year is preparing for a community appeal next January and February for $5,105,000 to pay for expansion and equipment.

KARACHI (CP) — An air-conditioned cigaret factory being built by the Pakistan government will go into production next October. It will use more than 4,000,000 pounds of Pakistan tobacco annually.

VALUABLE HATS

GLASGOW (CP) — A fabulous-old scheme was started by a firm of undertakers here. Top hats proved so scarce that a new smodern hat was offered for every topper brought in.

Algoma Woman Sheds Apron For the Bush

LOCHALSH, Ont. (CP)—An Algoma housewife doffed her apron every year about this time and takes to the bush.

Mrs. Alma Lavole, mother of seven children, is Algoma's only woman guide. At 35, she matches wits and stamina each fall with some of the best guides in the Ontario woods.

This tiny village 250 miles west of Timmins is home for Mrs. Lavole and her husband, a power company lineman. She was born at Trois Pistoles, 200 miles north of Montreal, and has always loved the woods but never got interested in hunting and fishing until her marriage 20 years ago.

Now her husband is ruefully looking to his laurels. He's been hunting for 30 years in Algoma, but he says "they don't come any better than Alma."

EXPERT TRACKER

His wife has shot one 1,000-pound bull moose this fall and has set her sights for more. She recently tracked down a 1,200-pounder bull for Michigan businessman W. T. Hill of Lansing.

Seven other guides in the Algoma area, all men, are philosophic about Alma's exploits. The trade is sharply competitive but one said

"what can you do with a woman whose mind is made up!"

Flourishing Economy of B. C. Expected to Set Record Pace

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's flourishing economy promises to set a record pace for construction in 1955.

On the drawing boards for 1955 are a host of projects—schools, power lines and facilities, multi-million-dollar pulp mills, defence projects, government buildings, hospitals, bridges, banks and office buildings.

The latest survey produced a figure of construction value for between $80,000,000 and $90,000,000; not including defence work, considerable other government construction, hydro-electric power expansion and projects not yet announced.

The 1955 figure could soar even higher if the Frobisher interests launch their multi - million - dollar metallurgical and power development in northern B. C. on Oct. 1, 1955—the date mentioned as the possible start of construction. The project entails expenditure of $270,000,000 by 1962, and $700,000,000 in all.

PLAN LARGE MILLS

Tenders will be called early next year for a $15,000,000 pulp mill at Duncan bay on Vancouver Island (Crown Zellerbach, Canada, Ltd.) has been forced to delay the project because of poor weather conditions.

Another mill scheduled for Vancouver island involves the expenditure of $25,000,000 by B. C. Forest Products, Ltd.

B. C. Electric Company has not yet announced construction plans for next year, but it is understood the firm will spend a record amount on power lines and other hydro-electric units in the Greater Vancouver area, on Vancouver island and in the interior.

One phase of B. C. Electric's long-range building program involves a $9,300,000 transmission line from the area north of Squamish to Rosedale in the Fraser valley.

L. S. W. Wells, district architect for the federal department of public works, said construction under his jurisdiction in 1955 "will be quite up to 1954—or better." Among projects planned are government buildings at Nanaimo, Nelson, Princeton and Golden. Official announcement is still awaited on others at New Westminster, Castlegar, Vernon and Tyail.

Almost certain to get under way in 1955 is a $10,000,000 bridge to replace the angled Marpole span linking Vancouver's Marpole district with Lulu island in the Fraser river estuary.

Tract of Land To Be Developed As Prov. Park

FOREST, Ont. (CP)—A 4,000-acre Lake Huron shoreline tract known as The Pinery will be bought by the Ontario department of lands and forests and developed as a provincial park, it was announced Friday.

C. E. Janes, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Lambton east, said the provincial government has passed an order-in-council giving the department the go-ahead to begin negotiations with the owners on a purchase price.

"The department of lands and forests will offer a fair price, but if negotiations are not successful the department will expropriate the area," said Mr. Janes.

FOR 10 MILES

The Pinery extends for about 10 miles along Lake Huron between Port Franks, just north of here, and Grand Bend. Forest is 25 miles northeast of Sarnia.

The announcement climaxed several years promotion by the Ausable River Conservation Authority to secure The Pinery as a public outdoor playground for western Ontario residents. Work on the project is expected to start by next spring.

John A. Morrison, ARCA chairman said: "This is one of the beauty spots of western Ontario. If it had been allowed to fall into commercial hands it would have been one of the biggest sins the government could have committed."

Port Manager at Churchill Winds Up Affairs in Town To Retire After 25 Years

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP)—Bill Twolan stayed here only five months out of every year, but his reputation gained him the honored title of "Mr. Churchill."

Sunday Mr. Twolan wound up his affairs at this Hudson bay town of 900 people for good. He retired as port manager, the only one to be appointed since the northern port was opened in 1929.

Mr. Twolan, 64, claimed both Churchill and Ottawa as home. For seven months of the year he resided in Ottawa but for the remaining five he was at his office at the government dock supervising the port operation and grain handling at the government-owned elevator operated under the supervision of the national harbors board.

WAS AT WELLAND

Mr. Twolan resigned his position as supervisor of construction on the Welland canal to come to Churchill in 1928. He was appointed port manager 10 years later.

He said in an interview that at times it wasn't the easiest job. There were some "pretty discouraging" years while the port and elevator were being kicked around as a political football.

The elevator went into operation in 1929 shortly after the Hudson Bay Railroad was completed. Grain from northern crop areas is shipped by rail through Midson Bay Junction and The Pas, Man., to the port where it is loaded on to the grain boats for the trip through Hudson strait and across the Atlantic to United Kingdom and European ports.

CHEAPER SHIPPING

The distance from Churchill to Montreal by The United Kingdom is approximately the same—2,900 miles, he said. But the argument in favor of Churchill shipping is the saving on shipping charges from Churchill to Montreal.

He said it is from three to four cents a hundredweight cheaper to ship grain from prairie granaries to Churchill than to Montreal.

The future looks bright for Churchill," he said. "Ocean shipping business is gradually working its way up here."

The Canadian northwest board is annually increasing the amounts of grain going through Churchill, he said, and the government now is boosting the grain storage capacity to 2,500,000 bushels to 5,000,000 bushels.

The elevator, which hires approximately 250 men during the shipping months, has a storage capacity of 23, handled 12,000,000 bushels of grain this last season. A record 26 ocean shipping vessels called the port, compared to 21 in 1953. The 1,854-foot government dock can handle three grain boats and one general cargo freighter at one time. The harbor depth is 36 feet at low tide.

Mr. Twolan discounted the idea that the northern passage is a dangerous shipping lane. He could recall only two shipping accidents since the port opened; one ship ran aground on a sandbar during a 100-mile gale at the strait entrance and another struck an iceberg at the same area, both in the early 30s.

PRINCIPAL DIED

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—J. MacGregor, 61, supervising principal of Waterloo public schools since 1951, died here today. He was born in Schreiberville. Survivors include his widow, the former Leona Mand's new warehouse at Namao, nine miles north of Edmonton.

Known affectionately as "the Boggy depot," the 38,500,000 one-storey structure is one of the largest buildings in Canada.

The warehouse staff use bicycles to get from one area to another. A 50-ton diesel locomotive runs on the five miles of track in the building and to a railway siding 3½ miles away.

UNION ORGANIZED

The depot receives all technical equipment such as radios, weapons and airplane parts from factories across Canada and is the distributing point to air force units from Winnipeg to Aklavik. The staff of about 300 civilians and 200 airmen is below the number that would be needed in wartime.

The depot is designed to handle [illegible] to truck's height. Nine miles of [illegible] and bolts to aircraft wings, [illegible] are stored in island offices [illegible] receiving, inspecting and stocking goods.

Supplies are received at a covered ramp with 20 hydraulic hoists capable of lifting a truck's height. More than 30 mobile cranes handle the supplies instead of manual labor.

For shipping parts, the depot has its own assembly-line packaging area and shops for making wooden crates and cartons.

From the cataloguing of the [illegible] of the depot, an order can be filled and on its way within an hour.

Winter Ferry Fares Opposed By Residents

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of about 4,000 residents on Centre and Ward's islands in Toronto harbor have organized a public meeting to fight the proposed tripling of winter ferry fares.

Spokesmen for the residents who live in the year round on the islands said the fares, announced by the Toronto Transit Commission, will hit the poorest communities that have sprung up there.

The commission operates the ferries that run between the islands and the city.

The protest meeting is scheduled for next Tuesday, the eve of the scheduled fare increase. It comes from the present 10 cents.

International Airliners Steadily Bring World Closer Together

By A. B. GARRETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

COPENHAGEN (CP)—The door that leads to Damascus also leads to Winnipeg and Rio de Janeiro.

The door is in Denmark's Kastrup Airport, but similar doors are found in airports all over western Europe where an international stream of international airliners steadily brings the world closer together.

From Winnipeg, it is only a 16-hour hop over the new polar route to Scandinavian Airlines system at Copenhagen—and you turn your watch ahead seven hours on arrival. Two more hours and you can be in Zurich, Switzerland; another two and you are in Israel. The man beside you may be off to Beirut; and another may be headed for Johannesburg.

London, Paris and Rome still are the big European airports, but newspaper men who travelled the polar route and made a flying tour of other western European airports found that Copenhagen, Frankfurt and Zurich are also growing fast.

An estimated 4,000 persons pass through Copenhagen's airport daily and the field sees 150 to 160 operations daily, mostly by foot-enginded planes.

The old Zeppelin base at Frankfurt is an airways crossroads, and the busiest airport in Germany. Last year 1,400,000 persons used the field, and airport director Hans Weber said the figure will be 20 per cent increase this year. Besides handling 21 civilian and cargo airlines it is the base for a fourth-fifth amount of military flying as well.

The old Dolderbahn terminal at Zurich, only recently completed on the most up-to-date principles, already is too small and too far out.

On board airliners, announcements are made in as many as four languages, sometimes three. Stewardesses on one line must speak five languages. Their work takes them to all corners of the earth.

Purser G. Anderson of SAS made the first commercial flight through the Arctic from Winnipeg to Copenhagen. He also was purser on a trip to Brazil. And the following week-end he was on route back to Winnipeg over the polar route.

NUCLEAR FISSION EXPLAINED FOR THE LAYMAN

Diagrams in the U.S. exhibit show how the atomic reactor of the power plant will take the place of coal. Water heated by the atomic reactor will power steam turbines which in turn will generate electricity. According to information on the walls around the exhibit, the first commercial atomic power plant will go into operation in 1957 near Pittsburgh and will generate enough electricity to supply a town of 100,000 persons. An similar engine of this principle could keep a ship at sea for several years without refuelling. (Central Press Canadian Photo)

A U.S. exhibition of the peaceful time application of atomic power on display at U.N. headquarters in New York includes this plastic dummy designed to protect workers from radiation.

18 Launching Bases Erected By Soviet Bloc

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) —, A Swedish political says Russia has constructed a string of 18 launching bases along the Baltic sea coast from which a murderous barrage of guided missiles could be directed against the West.

Industria, a usually well - informed trade and industrial magazine, publishes a map showing the bases lying from the Estonian capital of Tallinn southward to Riga and Kaliningrad and northward to Porkkala, a naval base outside Helsinki which Finland was forced to lease to Russia following the Second World War.

Each of the bases, Industria says could theoretically carry 800 robot-controlled flying bombs an hour westward over the Baltic. "Within 10 minutes Stockholm could be laid under the fire of robot projectiles and robot-bearing atom bombs."

The magazine says development of guided missiles has expanded to become "Russia's fourth fighting service" and is handled by a special organization in Moscow.

President Calls For Compulsory Military Training

TORONTO (CP)—A. E. Lanning, president of the Canadian Corps Association, called Saturday for the compulsory military training "in the reserve forces, at least, and without exception."

Mr. Lanning, speaking at the annual meeting of the association here, said he believed the Canadian government would get a pleasant surprise at the improvement in the health of young Canadians and the decrease such a program would produce in the percentage of physical defects and ailments.

The convention passed a resolution urging compulsory military training of all male Canadians reaching their 18th birthdays for a period of 12 to 18 months.

Other officers elected included: J. Hadd Cleary, Normnda, Que., vice-president.

TCA Gets First of 22 Viscounts, British-Built Turbo-Prop Plane

MONTREAL (CP) — The latest innovation to commercial air transport in North America was exhibited here Sunday when a sleek four-engined airliner was delivered to Trans-Canada Air Lines at nearby Dorval airport.

The Vickers Viscount, powered by turbo-prop engines which reduce vibration and noise to a minimum, was flown here from Britain by G. R. Bryce, chief test pilot for Vickers-Armstrong.

The 40-passenger craft is the first of 22 ordered by TCA for service on domestic and U. S.-Canadian routes. Designed for short and medium ranges, the Viscount is expected to go into service in February on the Montreal-Toronto-Sault Ste. Marie- the Lakehead-Winnipeg run.

The Viscount's four Rolls-Royce "Dart" engines, which each develop 1,400 horsepower, give the plane a cruising speed of 320 miles an hour.

LITTLE VIBERATION

The turbine - propeller engines are responsible for the lack of vibration generally associated with aircraft powered by piston-fired "conventional" piston-propellor engines.

The Viscount, which costs about $1,750,000 each, is the first of its type built in Britain and Europe.

TCA says it plans to train about 40 two-man pilot crews to fly the Viscounts, and the majority of these will be Canadian citizens. The new plane will first be taken to Winnipeg to train engine crews.

LONDON (CP)—The Manchester Guardian suggests structural changes made in the British Viscount airliner for North American service may eliminate some of the aircraft's "pullup" trouble.

The newspaper specifies the substitution of gasoline for kerosene as fuel and the securing of some windows which formerly served as escape hatches.

NO COMMENT

No comment was immediately available from Trans-Canada Air Lines, which plans to use 22 Viscounts into service early in 1955.

It is understood a wide-cut gasoline fuel is to be used in the RCA Viscounts because kerosene is not suitable under severe Canadian winter conditions. The use of gasoline and a high-energy ignition system under the four engines to be started at sub-zero temperatures after standing idle 12 hours.

Changes in the Viscount windows were made to improve sound and temperature insulation, it was understood.

Hemlock Looper, Woolly Aphid, Eat up Forests

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Two hungry bugs, the hemlock looper and the balsam woolly aphid, are attacking Newfoundland forests in epidemic proportions.

In the Hare Lay region alone 500,000 cords of pulpwood have been killed by the looper which has infested 25 square miles of the St. Barbe district.

The aphid, first discovered in the Cape Anguille mountain area, has spread to the east as far as Goose Arm logging area of Boatwater's, near Deer Lake.

The Newfoundland Forest Protection Association has called for major assistance from the federal government to fight the infestations.

The association's chairman, Albert Martin, said the spruce attack balsam fir of every age class at an amazing speed.

"One compensating factor," he said, "is that this troublesome pest may change the composition of our west coast forests from fir to spruce."

Mr. Martin said "no adequate control measures have yet been introduced for either of these two forest outbreaks."

Former Canadian Boxing Champion Killed in Crash

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Johnny Greco, 31, former Canadian welterweight boxing champion, was one of nine persons who died in accidents in eastern Canada during the weekend.

There were five deaths in Ontario—four in two-car head-on collisions—two in Newfoundland and one each in Quebec and Nova Scotia.

The fifth fatality in Ontario was the victim of a train-car crash, in which Raymond one man was killed in a mining accident and another was hurt in an industrial mishap. In Nova Scotia a soldier died in a hunting accident and a man was killed and another injured in a traffic mishap.

HITS TREE

It was one of the lightest weekend tolls in recent weeks.

In Westmount, a suburb of Montreal, Greco died of a broken neck after crashing his car into a tree. Driven a crash of speed, he lost control a gate of $148,000 in New York for the Canadian Sean Jack.

In Toronto, a five-week-old boy was killed and his twin brother severely injured in a car-train collision. Either Brian or Barry Millard—the doctor won't identify which until the mother, seriously hurt, is well enough to name him. She is the only one who can tell the twins apart.

Three-year-old Georgina Meld Ford of Hastings, Ont., was killed in another two-car crash near Campbellford, 36 miles southeast of Peterborough.

In Prescott, 40 miles southwest of Cornwall, taxi driver John Colvile, 37, died when a Canadian Pacific passenger train smashed into his car at a level crossing.

DIE IN CRASH

GIG HARBOR, Wash. (AP)—Seven persons died in crashes that were killed Sunday when their Sabre jet planes collided in flight and crashed.

TO HELP DISABLED

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has proclaimed the Disabled Persons Allowance Act to take effect Jan. 1, a special edition of the Canada Gazette reported Saturday. Eight provinces—all except Quebec and Prince Edward Island —have signified their intention of entering into an agreement with the federal government to pay $40 a month allowances to totally and permanently disabled persons.

Oratorical Outbursts Against Federal Govt. Over Taxation Agreements Stilled in House

By RICHARD DAIGNAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Duplessis, stepping cautiously at the threshold of a taxation agreement with Ottawa, has set a new pattern in the Quebec legislature.

Oratorical outbursts against the federal government, the easement of many angry legislative debates on provincial rights, have been stilled in Union Nationale party ranks.

The 64-year-old Quebec leader, once the sharpest critic of Prime Minister St. Laurent and the federal government, has been acting the part of Union Nationale lion himself.

FOUR WEEKS

The session, opened Nov. 17, has moved from an inauguration filled with an atmosphere of co-operation with the federal government on the Quebec income tax problem through four weeks of discussions. But there have been no charges of federal encroachment on provincial rights, no warning that federal policies are a threat to the survival of French language and culture.

Instead Mr. Duplessis has cited Ottawa policies in support of some of his government measures.

In defending his bills authorizing the government to appoint eight parliamentary assistants and regulating the resignation of members of the elected legislative assembly, Mr. Duplessis told the baffled Liberal Opposition he was only following in Ottawa's footsteps.

FROM MEETING

The new pattern of co-operation between the Quebec government and the federal authority seems to stem from the meeting in Montreal Oct. 5, between the prime minister and Mr. Duplessis. While the two political leaders are seeking a solution to a 10-year taxation disagreement.

Through these years Quebec is the only province that has refused to lease all or part of its taxation rights in return for federal subsidies. All other provinces have done so under agreements expiring in 1957.

Now some temporary agreement seems to have been worked out but details are not known officially. Mr. St. Laurent and Mr. Duplessis and their respective cabinets.

It is understood the temporary agreement will either lighten or relieve the burden of federal taxation on Quebec taxpayers. Just how the terms of the agreement will be ready for announcement is not known.

Many Sentenced

CAIRO (AP) — An Egyptian court Sunday sentenced five more members of the Moslem Moslem Brotherhood to death by hanging on charges of plotting to assassinate Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser and overthrow his regime. Six other members were hanged last Tuesday.

Four more were sentenced today to life imprisonment at hard labor, five to 15 years, and 10 to 17 years. Several others were acquitted.

The scholarships provide for travel and study for six months in the United Kingdom next year, working on farms and studying British agriculture.

Two Arrested After Woman's Death in Calgary

CALGARY (CP) —Police said Sunday night they have arrested two persons in connection with the Nov. 13 death of Mrs. Margaret Thompson, 33, of Calgary.

Det.-Insp. Kenneth McIver said Mrs. Agnes McCain of Calgary has been charged with manslaughter and George Clark of Moose Jaw, Sask., charged with being an accessary after the fact of an abortion.

Both were scheduled to appear in police court today to hear formal charges read against them.

Mrs. Thompson, mother of five children ranging in age from four to 12, was found dead in bed at her home.

BURIAL HELD UP

Four days later, after the body had been forwarded to relatives in Kingston, Ont., Alberta's chief coroner asked Ontario's provincial pathologist to have the burial delayed and an autopsy performed.

McIver said police have received only preliminary reports of the autopsy results and are still awaiting the official report. The report was received Nov. 23 by Attorney-General Manning of Alberta.

It was said at first that Mrs. Thompson had died of a heart attack.

Hoarded Supplies Now Circulating In Pakistan

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — A sharp government shakeup and the offer of $105,000,000 in United States economic aid have combined to loosen hoarded supplies in many sections of Pakistan.

Basic foodstuffs, including steel and cotton yarn, have started to flow back into the markets.

This does not mean that Pakistan's economic crisis has been solved. But one of the biggest factors in the inflationary picture —has been eased.

One of the latest pronounced developments has been a sharp drop in the cost of native yarns following government pressure.

A combination of political and economic factors caused the collapse of Pakistan's Korean war markets had sent prices to record high levels here and slashed the buying power of this young nation's 80,000,000 people. With this situation came hoarding.

Under the U.S. assistance program, Pakistan receives enough economic help this year than its larger neighbor, India. The funds will be used in part to furnish steel, sugar, long staple cotton for textiles and fertilizer to a value of about $40,000,000.

Another $35,000,000 will be used, according to the new commerce minister, M. A. Hazsen Ispahani, for the purchase of wheat and agricultural surplus items at cut rates, including cotton and tinned fruit, tobacco, cooking fats and powdered milk.

Members of the American aid fund will finance technical aid, capital goods and relief supplies to meet short-term needs.

'Yes, There Is a Santa Claus, Professor Answers Chisholm

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dear Dr. Brock Chisholm:

Yes, there is a Santa Claus.

Unfortunately, children are beginning to doubt that old St. Nick exists. Some of the blame for this rests on those children who don't know what to tell them can take heart from Dr. Edna Signori, psychiatrist who built like a football player and wears his hair in a short brush cut.

Dr. Signori, head of the University of British Columbia psychology department, says we think Santa Claus is merely a myth.

"I'm not ashamed to say I think Santa Claus is merely a myth," Dr. Chisholm, native of Oakville, Ont., and former director of the World Health Organization, created a furore when he told the first cams out against parents allowing their children to believe in Santa.

He reiterated his stand in a recent interview at his home in Victoria by saying a child taught that Santa Claus and other myths is in for a rude awakening later. He believes this needs his parents told him were lies.

Dr. Signori, however, said in an interview that his belief in Santa Claus is the child's way of detailing with an abstract concept.

His own children, nine-year-old Jean and seven-year-old Peter, have a positive and creative outlook.

"Santa Claus is not just a step away from the boogy man which has been used to strike fear into young children. He stands for a set of values which is quite different.

Economists Sure Canada Will Resume Advance But Slower

By DUNCAN D. MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada had a baby boom, a boom in housing and a crop failure in 1954.

It was a year of contrasts: of rising prices for those with jobs and a rise also in the number of unemployed; of heavy consumer buying and declining farm income; of economic strength at home resisting the influences of weakness abroad.

It was also a year of reappraisal: of a breathing spell to review the spectacular economic advance in post-war years and to judge the nature of the road ahead. Economists were sure Canada would resume her advance, but feared it may be slowed by the slower United States pace.

NATIONAL PRODUCT DOWN

Taped by the gross national production, the major yardstick for measuring economic progress, Canada appeared to have slipped slightly from her high position. After year of continuous advance, the 1953 national product was down by about $400,000,000 to an estimated $25,800,000,000 from the record in 1953.

But the decline was something humans could not avert. Bad weather smashed at prairie grains, cutting Canada's wheat crop to less than one-half of the near-record 414,000,000 bushels produced in 1953. Other crops and other regions also suffered.

Federal authorities estimated the crop failure would cut net farm income to a seven-year low of about $1,300,000,000 from $1,600,000,000 in 1953, and some $800,000,000 below the peak of 1951.

But farmers had a lot of unsold wheat carried over from previous bumper crops and many had money banked which they continued to pour into the consumer stream. However, the decline in net farm income showed on the cash registers of many prairie retail stores.

BUOYANT SALES

Though national production was down, personal expenditure on consumer goods and services was estimated at about $15,800,000,000, topping the previous high of $15,200,000,000 in 1953.

Canadians also invested a record $1,800,000,000 in housing, up from 1,700,000,000 in 1953. They had to pay higher interest rates for mortgages. Builders got away to a poor start hampered by bad weather early in the year, but the demand for homes found no saturation point.

But other manufacturers, such as the textile makers, found razor-keen competition from abroad shading at domestic markets. Amidst this rise in world competition, the government found demands for tariff protection increasing. There were indications it might make a few changes in 1955.

WORLD COMPETITION

Heavier world competition and the decline in some phases of Canadian manufacturing reflected the power of the Canadian economy to absorb new workers. The number of workers without jobs and looking for work on Oct. 25 rose by 69,000 to 179,000 from 151,000 last year.

But for the 4,810,000 who had jobs, times were fairly good. Total labor income was estimated at about $11,800,000,000 for the year, up about $300,000,000 from the previous high in 1953.

Canada also was in the midst of a baby boom. The birthrate, rising to a seven-year high of 28.8 per 1,000 persons in 1953, was continued and possibly exceeded in 1954, authorities estimated.

This rising birthrate, combined with a continuing influx of immigrants, boosted Canada's population to 15,200,000 at mid-year 1954 and likely will increase it by another 800,000 by 1956.

Famous Antwerp Diamond Houses On Tight Profit

By RONALD FRASER

ANTWERP, Belgium (Reuters) — The diamond industry, formerly one of Belgium's main sources of prosperity, is facing a serious crisis.

The famous Antwerp diamond houses, known the world over for the quality of their cutting and polishing, are operating on slender profit margins and troubled by frequent strikes.

Nearly every one-quarter of the city's 12,000 diamond workers are unemployed, while the wages of those at work have dropped considerably from the immediate post-war period when they were considered "the aristocrats of European labor."

Imports of polished diamonds are rising year by year to give increased competition to the national industry, which ranks second only to London in Europe.

The Antwerp industry, which paid, with its exports of cut gems, for nearly five-sixths of Belgium's imports after the war, has been hit by an increase in the price of rough diamonds.

INCOME LESSENED

These lustreless pebbles, which are transformed by Antwerp's skilled cutters and polishers into valuable gems are the industry's raw material.

Antwerp's diamond merchants, whose annual turnover is about $56,000,000, claim that prices for polished stones have risen faster with rough diamond prices in recent years.

They say that the 3,500,000 carats of rough diamonds imported on an average per year cost more than $56,000,000, while the 500,000 carats of polished exported somehow bring in just over $53,200,000.

Although the Belgian Congo produces about two - thirds of the world's output of rough diamonds, the Antwerp industry depends for its supplies on a trust headed by Sir Ernest Oppenheimer.

The trust, the Diamond Trading Company, has a virtual monopoly of distributing rough diamonds to manufacturing centres and buys the entire Congo output. By keeping the prices for rough diamonds firm, it aims at maintaining a stable market for polished gems on the world market.

INFERIOR QUALITY

Antwerp diamond merchants say that the trust must supply them with more good-quality rough diamonds if the industry is to survive.

Diamond merchants say they never must import a large quantity of so - called "marginal stones" which fall between the category of the industrial and the gem diamond. These marginal stones are turned into gems, because the market for industrial diamonds has fallen considerably. But they fetch little as jewels.

The Congo output consists mainly of "stands," the small stones used for industrial purposes and does not interest the majority of Antwerp's cutters who handle only the larger stones used for jewelry.

Antwerp diamond merchants consider that the importance of the Congo's production justifies their visited Belgium recently for talks with the government. It was unofficially announced that the diamond trading company was ready to make concessions.

Hastings Farm Forum

Five forums reported meeting last Monday, namely: Brookdale (11) at Sam Nicholson's; Foxboro (15) at Harry Godfrey's; Hazzard's (8) at Phil Harris'; Malone (11) at Clarence Hagerman's and River Valley (13) at Roy Rusk's. The topic under discussion was "Mental Health Insurance Plan."

In answer to this question the forums agreed that several services are functioning, such as: Cobalt Clinic, Hospitalization and Medical Services, and Blue Cross with associated medical services. Harzard's mentioned a nursing home in vicinity, four doctors, one dentist and felt services satisfactory, though hardly adequate. The M.O.H. visits the schools.

One member of Brookdale spoke of their W.I. sponsoring a nurse to the two schools in their district. One problem related to most of the forums was that eye and dental inspection was neglected.

Melrose also specified the problem of the high cost of drugs and blood transfusions.

River Valley thinks there should be a provincial plans to start with and lead up to a national one. Melrose reminded should be a provincial plan to be paid for. They state that already old age pensions and baby bonuses are being received.

FEELING SLUGGISH due to constipation?

Not me!

I'd never heard of a diuretic when my Old Country neighbour suggested that was what I needed to get over feeling listless and run-down. But I tried Kruschen on her advice and it's made a new woman of me! Now I realize that a diuretic can be just as important as a laxative in ridding the body of clogging wastes. Kruschen is both a gentle laxative and a diuretic. Actually the salts in Kruschen are similar to those in famous healing Spas and they act in the same way to tone up a sluggish system. Canadian Armed Forces Settle Down to Period of Consolidation

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—After rapid expansion in the three previous years Canada's armed forces in 1954 settled down to a period of consolidation.

With the "crash" program mostly behind them, they could take more time to look after details and oil the works.

Defence spending continued at its high level of 1953. More than $2,000,000,000 was appropriated for defence, about one-fifth of it for aircraft alone.

HUGE EXPENDITURE

When the end of the current fiscal year is reached next March, Canada will have spent about $7,000,000,000 on a four-year defence build-up, more than $1,000,000,000 of this for direct military aid for its European allies.

The strength of the armed forces remained fairly constant at about 116,000—50,000 army, 48,000 RCAF and 18,000 navy. The army experienced some difficulty in avoiding a drop in manpower; the air force found some trouble recruiting aircrew; the navy was still short of its target of 21,000 personnel.

The services got a new chief July 1 when Defence Minister Brooks Claxton left the cabinet to enter private business and was succeeded by Ralph Campney, associate defence minister.

One of the more heartening events of the year for the services was the recent decision to bring all soldiers in Korea back to Canada—probably by the spring. Brig. Frederick Cliff of Saskatoon, last commander of the 25th brigade, will return immediately and become director-general of army personnel at headquarters here.

Earlier it had been decided to cut forces in Korea by two-thirds.

BOOST IN MORALE

Defence officials said the withdrawal would probably mean a boost in service morale, especially in the army, because headquarters had been having a hard time to avoid keeping some men overseas beyond their normal tours of duty. Canada was maintaining two brigades abroad, one in West Germany as well as the one in Korea.

Meanwhile, at home, the army proceeded with formation of the 1st Infantry Division under Maj.-Gen. John Hockingham with headquarters at Camp Petawawa, Ont. Elements of the division worked on during the summer at the army's big new training centre, Camp Gagetown, N.B. The 426-square-mile camp, big enough to train an entire division at one time, will eventually cost some $40,000,000.

In Germany, the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade underwent atomic training for the first time, working out under a mock atomic-bomb attack. Near the end of the year, the troops began to move into new married quarters in the brigade area near Soest.

The year also saw a reorganization of the 45,000-member reserve army designed to bring it more in line with the needs of the regular force. Names of some famed regiments disappeared in the overhaul. Though a decrease in reserve strength was expected, the number fell little more than 1,000 between March and the end of October.

SWITCH IN TANKS

In the field of weapons, the army completed its conversion to British Centurion tanks and began designs of a new weapons carrier to replace the Bren gun carrier.

Some 60 soldiers were sent to Fort Bliss, Texas, to be trained on Nike, the U.S. army's anti-aircraft, ground-to-air guided missile. Colorado tests of the Nike are to be carried out at Fort Churchill, Man., early next year. American atomic cannon were tested there last winter. During the year, the army formed its first peacetime anti-aircraft regiment.

The army will likely get two new small arms weapons: the Belgian Fabrique Nationale automatic 300-calibre rifle in place of the Lee-Enfield .303 and the British Patchett sub-machine gun in place of the British Sten.

Most of the RCAF's fighting power was concentrated in Europe, where the four-wing air division remained on garrison duty at bases in France Germany and England. The one wing in England is to move to France early next year.

The air division received in a steady stream from Canada new Sabre jet fighters equipped with Canadian Orenda engines.

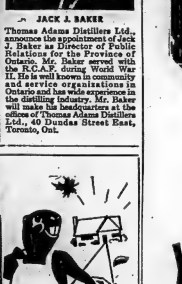
At home, final stages were reached on development of an air-to-air guided missile to arm Canada's fighter planes. This work, together with development of the CF-105, designed to replace eventually the two-engine, long-range CF-100 jet interceptor, cost about $8,000,000 during the year.

In November, Canada and the U.S. announced they will build a distant early warning radar line across the far north. This announcement came even before start of construction of the mid-Canada warning line along the 55th parallel.

52 WARSHIPS

By the end of the year, the navy had 52 warships in commission: one aircraft carrier, two cruisers, 10 destroyers, eight converted frigates, seven coastal escorts, eight minesweepers, one arctic patrol vessel, one auxiliary coastal minesweeper, one repair ship and 13 small craft.

Besides this, there are six patrol craft for summer training on the Great Lakes, 36 vessels in reserve and 112 naval auxiliary vessels manned by civilians.



Since the defence build-up started, the navy has taken delivery of 27 brand-new ships and is to get 61 more.

Late in November, the first draft of 200 volunteers left for England to take submarine training with the Royal Navy. Most of them then will serve in the RN's sixth submarine squadron which is to be based at Halifax.

Early next year, the navy and RCAF will start taking delivery of the first of four new types of planes for anti-submarine and convoy operations.

GAIN A POINT.

While the week-end senior "B" picture for the Memos did not change insofar as the group standing goes, it did give the Boucher-men an extra point over the fourth spot Whitby Wrens, despite the fact the Whitby crew handed the Cornwall Colts a 4-3 defeat Saturday. Kingston Goodyears helped themselves to a brace of victories and now lead the loop with 25 points, but the Colts cut their lead to three with their win over the Wrens.

The Memos could not stand prosperity and dropped a 6-3 decision with the Brockville Magedomas after leading 3-1 at one time. However, they roared back into form after an overnight rest in Clinton, defeating the Aluminum squad 8-3 with Keith MacDonald leading the pack with two goals an an assist. Bob Wilson broke into the scoring column with a neat one while Frank Beidel also clung one home and was credited with an assist. Erwin Duncan scored the fifth with brother Edwin assisting. The game was one of the cleanest played in Clinton with only three penalties being handed out, all going in the name of the border team.

The Memos now boast 20 points, two in arrears of the Colts, with Whitby bringing up fourth spot with 17. Clinton has sixteen, while Brockville is one point behind. The Petes have garnered nine points, but can improve their position with a win over Whitby in Peterborough tonight.

MR. RODDEN HAS THIS TO SAY:

Our erudite contemporary, Mr. Michael J. Rodden, in his columns this other day used the word "mystified" when commenting on the Peterborough Petes situation. Here is what the estimable MJR writes:

"The word 'mystified' is used in lieu of an Oshawa rumor that the Peterborough management may be forced to throw in the sponge. From another source it was learned yesterday that Dick Peloquin and Gracey Potvin, recent reinforcements, will play against Cornwall tonight and then will hit the homeward trail.

"With crowds down around the four and five hundred marks and crews visitors to show in 18 engagements the Petes are in dire need of help and may ask the OHA executive for permission to use the services of some of the East Yorkshire Motor players who have been sidelined by the club's decision to withdraw the team from competition. In such an arrangement the Lift Lock club might get three or four capable performers and erect a machine that would command respect and win more games than it would lose.

"Unofficially, it has been learned that the Goodyear management will support any move made to strengthen the Petes provided that only players of senior 'B' calibre are involved. It is also thought unlikely that objections would be raised by the other clubs in the group race. The departure of the Petes, who are still colorful despite their troubles, would be felt throughout the circuit both from a competitive and financial viewpoint.

"What Peterborough needs more than it does anything else is a modern arena but the erection of same has not gone past the speculative or talking stage. Fans in this area just won't support hockey in structures that are passe and Peterborough will have to march with the moderns or fall by the wayside."

Anent the last paragraph, Mr. Rodden should keep abreast of the times. He should know that the good people of Peterborough in the recent civic elections approved a by-law to raise funds to construct a Community Centre that will eclipse even the glittering structure in Reddenville. If the Peter'ro'C. is built according to plan it will be the best of its kind between Toronto and Montreal.

But as Mr. Rodden remarks, "Fans in this era just won't support hockey in structures that are passe and Peterborough will have to march with the moderns or fall by the wayside."

The only thing wrong with that paragraph is that "Mike" should have written "Belleville" instead of "Peterborough."

Harry Watson, Litzenberger Help Them Whip Leafs 2-1; Canadiens Lead Pack by Four

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Black Hawks, plasma patients in the National Hockey League, are perking up with the new blood.

The Hawks, in last place and in rough shape until they got a transfusion—a couple of hot-shot forwards—last Friday, had one of their liveliest weeks in the big time by splitting two games. The most significant thing was their 2-1 victory over the tough Maple Leafs at Toronto.

They played like champions against the Leafs but faltered slightly at Chicago Sunday night when they were nosed out 4-3 by Detroit Red Wings in a last-period comeback failed to give them a tie.

WATSON SCORES

The Hawks had leftwinger Harry Watson, purchased from the Leafs, and rookie rightwinger Eddie Litzenberger, from Montreal Canadiens, in the lineup. Watson scored one goal and assisted on two others. Eddie did likewise. The Hawks brought seldom-seen cheers from 5,400 fans when, in the last department, The $9-50 split left them still in last place with 16 points—two victories and 16 losses in 28 games.

In other weekend games, the Leafs and fifth-place Rangers tied 1-1 at New York Sunday night and Boston Bruins and Canadiens deadlocked 2-2 at Boston. The Bruins defeated Canadiens 3-0 at Montreal and the Red Wings whipped the Rangers 4-1 at Detroit in Saturday encounters.

Canadiens are still heading the league race, four points up on the Leafs and Red Wings. The Wings moved into a second-place tie with Toronto.

Dave Creighton, a former Leaf sent to the Hawks in the recent deal, scored the winning Chicago goal Saturday by beating netminder Harry Lumley at 13:03 of the third period. Jack McIntyre scored the other Chicago marker. Leftwinger Sid Smith tallied for Leafs.

DETROIT WON

It was a different setup against the Wings. The Detroiters took a 2-0 lead in the first period before the Hawks drove back. Glen Skov led the winners with two goals. Alex Delvecchio and Earl Reibel scored the others. Defenceman Gus Mortson, Watson and Litzenberger accounted for the Chicago goals. The Leafs had to be satisfied with a deadlock against Rangers when Ron Murphy slammed a three-footer behind Lumley at 15:44 of the final session. Murphy's goal, scored seconds after the Leafs were short a man on Rudy Migay's tripping penalty, came on a screened pass from Paul Ronty. Leafs grabbed a 1-0 lead in the opening period and it appeared to be big enough.

Bruins had little trouble against Canadiens Saturday.

Leo Labine, Leo Boivin and Lorne Ferguson scored for the Bostonians in the rugged game in which 17 penalties were called.

Bernie Geoffrion scored his 20th goal of the season to give Canadiens a tie Sunday night. He whipped one past Sugar Jim Henry at 7:02 of the third period before a Boston Garden crowd of 10,145.

CAEM BACK

The Montrealers took an earlier lead in the first period on Dollard St. Laurent's goal but Bruins came back when Eddie Sandford evened it up. Henry sent Boston into a 2-1 lead but Bruins couldn't stand up under the pressure.

Gordie Howe fired the winning goal and set up an insurance tally Saturday night for Leavick, Delvecchio and Marcel Bonin got the other Detroit markers.

Murphy scored the lone New York goal at 2:06 of the first period but that was it for Rangers.

Rookie netminders Tom Green and Ross Mervyn found themselves in the same predicament Saturday as the heroic little Dutch boy who kept his finger in the dike during the flood. The only difference was that Green and Mervyn couldn't stop the surge.

Green, goalkeeper for Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, found himself the victim of a tremendous assault in Galt Saturday as the home-town Black Hawks ran wild with a 14-3 victory over the last-place Canucks.

Mervyn, meanwhile, wasn't doing much better in St. Catharines where the TreePees walloped his Barrie Flyer teammates 12-3.

In the only Sunday action the league-leading St. Michael's College Majors came from behind to edge Guelph Biltmores 4-3 in Toronto.

LED INSPERS

Mac Lalande was the leading firing four goals. Dick Cherry and Floyd Smith notched two each and singles were by Ed Sleever, Myron Stankiewicz, George Ferguson, Forest Pilote, John Chasczewski and Ravelich.

Whitey Youngberg, Bob White and Stan Baluk scored for the Canucks.

Twenty-eight minutes, including 10 five-minute majors and a 10-minute misconduct, were handed out during the game.

At St. Catharines 2,045 fans saw veteran Hank Ciesla count three times to lead the TreePees. Barry Cullen scored twice and singles went to defencemen Elmer Vasko, Cec Hoekstra, Ab McDonald, Matt Thomson, Ed Hoekstra, Bob Butler and Mitch Plate.

Dan Pellatini, Hugh Ball and John MacDonald were the Barrie marksmen.

St. Michael's who blew a 2-0 first-period lead when Guelph scored three unanswered goals in the second, salvaged the victory with two third - period markers. Rookie Frank Mahlovich tallied the winning goal after Pat Hannigan had tied the score with his second goal of the afternoon. Ken Linseman scored the first Irish goal.

Bob Forhan got two of Guelph's goals, Ron Howell the other.

The victory, witnessed by 4,451 fans, was the fourth consecutive for the Majors and their fifth in 31 games this year. Guelph is in third place with 11 wins and a tie in 30 games.

The Belleville Memos maintained sole possession of third place in the senior "S" group standing over the week-end, losing to Brockville 6-3 Saturday night and defeating the Clinton Comets 5-3 in Clinton, N.Y., Sunday afternoon.

The division of spoils gives the Memos 20 points, three ahead of the fourth place Whitby Wrens, who defeated Cornwall 5-3, in a Saturday game. Sunday's victory gave the Memos two wins in three starts in as many days. They meet Whitby on the latter's ice on Wednesday.

BROCKVILLE 6, BELLEVILLE 3

BROCKVILLE — Trailing 3-1 going into the final period, Brockville Maggedonas exploded for five goals in 17 minutes to chalk up convincing 6-3 win over Belleville Memos here Saturday night. Attendance was 1,079.

Brockville enjoyed a healthy edge in the scoring department while they outshot Memos 15-5 for a 1-0 edge in shots. Memos had chances to dominate the second stanza with many on foot but only to have Brockville rebuild. Brockville rally pull the game out of the fire in the third period.

Belleville having beaten Whitby the night before with a score of 5-3 Brockville was better rested and finished stronger.

Davey Jones with the slipery doodle twice to outmaneouvre the Brockville goalie. First with assists from McGregor and Chandler and in the last minute on a rushing combination with Gover and Wade, the only goal to be scored against a short handed team.

In the third period the Magedomas, facing a two goal deficit turned on the pressure and consistently outmaneouvred the tiring Memos. Five times they lined up lamp with Bisher and Davidson each doing it twice and Gibson once. Memos still kept the edge in shots on goal firing 13 to Brockville's 11 but were unable to get close enough to fool Charron in the Brockville nets.

BELLEVILLE 5, CLINTON 3

CLINTON — The Clinton Comets bowed to the Belleville Memos 5-3 here Sunday.

Belleville ripped into the Comets for a 4-0 first period lead only to have Clinton come back for a three goal second period on the heels of three goals in the same 20 minutes. It was a 4-3 encounter before the last period proceed.

The Memos proved a rugged first period as they raced to their 4-0 lead and at the same time threw one of the best team defences displayed here.

Their sub goalie, Don Barclay, playing the entire game, Tony Parisi sparked this phase with remarkable saves.

GOALIE SCORED

His rival in the nets, Clinton's Doug Coxon, was responsible for the fourth score, credited to Frank Bettiol. Fumbled the puck about but in attempting to pick it up over the line the puck was back.

Blanked for the first half one the game, Clinton came back to score the three goals in a two minute span.

Marv Thompson, who skated at left wing for Clinton, then slapped one ricochetd off Doug Houston's stick.

Marv Thompson, who skated at left wing for Clinton, then slapped a nifty stop on Coxon on the ensuing play.

Twice Belleville defencemen got shots but there was no answer for a play started by Wayne Steele and engineered by Timming.

The latter carried down the left side alley and then centered his high pass for Thomson.

Marv connected just as the disc was flying below Barclay's left shoulder. He added an unassisted marker at 36 seconds but it proved to be the game's final tally for the locals.

The hard-played third period provided plenty of action but only one goal.

It came on a face off play, with Clinton's Mackenzie drawing the score on Johnny Muckler's pass.

The opening period of both ends of the game was played with but three penalties, all on the Comets.

The game picked up speed as it went along as indicated by the scoring. The first period was a contest of close checking with only one counter for Brockville in the last minute of play.

The second period belonged to Belleville, who scored on three of their 12 shots on goal while Brockville had but ten tries. Davey Jones with the slipery doodle twice to outmaneouvre the Brockville goalie. First with assists from McGregor and Chandler and in the last minute on a rushing combination with Gover and Wade, the only goal to be scored against a short handed team.

In the third period the Magedomas, facing a two goal deficit turned on the pressure and consistently outmaneouvred the tiring Memos. Five times they lined up lamp with Bisher and Davidson each doing it twice and Gibson once. Memos still kept the edge in shots on goal firing 13 to Brockville's 11 but were unable to get close enough to fool Charron in the Brockville nets.

Windsor Bulldogs jumped from second-from-last spot to third place in the Ontario-Quebec Ice Hockey Association Senior A League during the weekend with a win and a draw.

Bulldogs aimed high. They defeated the league-leading Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen 6-3 in a game Saturday and battled to a 4-4 overtime tie with Stratford Indians at Stratford Saturday.

In other games Kitchener-Waterloo defeated Niagara Falls Cataracts 9-6 on Tuesday. Dutchmen secured eight in the second and third periods, but Bulldogs kept c-o-m-a-n-d and checking consistent.

Gee, Gord Haidy, Walt Pawlychym, Ric Seguin and Ed Abbati and Frank Babcock shared the Windsor goals. Gee also assisted on two, Jack McKechnie and Clare Jones scored the Dutchmen goals.

The Dutchmen played Saturday, scoring three goals and an assist by Bob Attfield, former Bulldog back goal. Tommy Walker, Lou Bendo, Mickey Roth and Maurice Stevenson accounted for the Stratford goals.

Dutchmen were held to a 3-3 first period tie by Bob Attfield and Cataracts. But they broke loose in the second to score five unanswered goals.

Johnny Greco, Ex-Welter Champion, Dies in Car Crash Near Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Free-swinging Johnny Greco, former Canadian welterweight champion and Madison Square Garden favorite, was killed Sunday when he crashed his car into a tree in suburban Westmount.

The 31-year-old battler, who once drew a gate of $146,000 in New York for a bout with Benn Jack, was dead on the spot at the time of the accident. He died of a broken neck before help could reach him.

Greco was a fixture in the Gotham bonville with his wide-open, slugging style. During his 14-year professional career he fought 105 bouts, losing only 12, and winning over two-thirds by knockouts or near knockouts.

While serving in the Canadian Army during the war, he won and successfully defended the world lightweight crown with Bob Montgomery but the army refused to let him go through with the bout.

Greco started boxing when he was seven years old and turned professional at 16. His purse for his first fight was $50 but a few years later he earned $54,000 for a fight with Jack.

A fight against Laurent Dauthuille of France in 1949 at the Montreal Forum drew a $100,000 gate of $76,000, largest in the history of boxing in Canada. By that time, however, he was on the way downhill and lost by a knockout.

He quit boxing for a time a short while later, after losing to Tough Buddy Grasiano. After an unsuccessful comeback, he quit again, but returned to the ring in November, 1963. He won five of the rib-rocking body punches left, how ever, and he was beaten in two out of three bouts by flatic unknowns.

During his better days, Greco fought Sugar Ramon Robinson Garden, 11 of them main attraction. In Canada, he won the welterweight crown in 1946 and defended it seven times before losing to Arthur Gravelle in 1952. He regained the title a month later and successfully defended it seven times from the ring.

Greco never married and lived with his mother and father and two sisters, who survive. Funeral services will take place Wednesday.

First Knockout in 7 Years in Ring Kills Former Olympic Boxing Champ

BOSTON (AP)—Big Ed Sanders was knocked out only once in seven years of competitive boxing—but it proved his last bout.

The former Olympic heavyweight champion turned professional died Sunday at age 31 of a fatal ring knockout blow. But the soft-spoken, well-conditioned Negro never knew it.

He was unconscious for the 38 hours he clung to life after his 11th round knockout by New England heavyweight t i t l i s t Willie James.

An autopsy revealed Sanders died of a "subdural hematoma" (bleeding between the brain and the layer of tissue separating the brain from the skull).

Less than an hour after the 217-pound, six-foot, fourteen giant stationed here with the navy slumped to the canvas after Round 11, he was undergoing a delicate four-hour brain operation by Dr. William Sweet, well-known neurosurgeon.

Dr. Sweet said Sanders bled from more than one point inside the skull, indicating "he was by several damaging blows."

The death was the sixth in boxing in the United States during the three days. Featherweight Ralph Weiser died Friday night at Chamath Falls, Ore., after a knockout by Teddy Hall of Vancouver. In the ring Friday night at International Amphitheatre, Bobby Callaghan of London died Dec. 5 two days after collapsing in his dressing room after a fight with Don Sleet, also of London. Dec. 4 a boxer died and resulted from injuries in service training camp bouts.

"I'm terribly sorry," James kept muttering in his anguish upon hearing the news of Sanders' death. "I didn't realize I hit him so hard. I thought he would get up in a couple of minutes. It's an awful, awful thing."

James added: "I don't know whether I'll fight again."

Browns Win Eastern Title

NEW YORK (AP)—The Cleveland Browns, the most amazing team in pro football history, have captured their fifth straight division championship in the National Football League and moved after their first "world series" victory over the Detroit Lions.

Coach Buddy Parker's well balanced Lions have the defensive Paul Brown - coached champions two years rimming in the postseason money game.

The two will clash at Cleveland on consecutive Sundays, due to an October postponement. The first started with Dec. 20 and they will amount to a warm-up or "scouting" game for the two they come to grips Sunday in the make-up game.

The Browns, in their eighth straight victory, drubbed Pittsburgh 42-7 Sunday to be marked the ninth straight time the Browns have won a pro football crown. They started with Don Hutson in the old All America conference.

BIG COMEBACK

It was the climax to a brilliant comeback for the Browns, who were written off in October after they dropped two of their first three games.

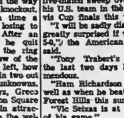
The Lions, with their title already assured, played host against the Chicago Bears and were taken 26-24. They did playing without No. 1 quarterback Earl Layne, who is nursing a broken nose and bruises, failed with a 21-point last period. Chicago, by winning, grabbed second place in the western conference and finished it best season since 1950 with an 8-5 mark.

The Philadelphia Eagles grabbed second spot in the eastern conference, overwhelming the New YorkGiants 29-14.

Sasky Riders Drop $8,429

REGINA (CP)—An $8,429 deficit on 1954 operations was reported Sunday at the annual meeting of Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The loss, blamed partly on bad weather, was disclosed at the eastern Interprovincial Football Union club, compares with a net profit of $20,000 in 1963.



Talbert Looks For Clean Sweep Against Swedes

BRISBANE (AP) — Happy Bill Talbert's confident belief he's the most popping off his captain's jacket today over the prospects of five-match sweep over Sweden for his U.S. team in the interzone Davis Cup finals this weekend.

"I will be sadly disappointed and greatly surprised if we do not win 5-0," the American team leader said.

Tony Trabert's improvement the last two days has been tremendous.

"Ham Richardson is playing as well as when he beat Lew Hoad at Forest Hills in September. Throughout his entire journey, no matter how far south he flies, he is greeted by gun fire. The same is true of woodcock, shore and marsh birds such as snail and gallinule, and waterfowl.

Even the non-game varieties are not safe from the hazards of migration. One thing which contributes largely to their troubles is the fact that they migrate at night. This is true even of the shrikes.

On clear nights, when there is no overcast, migration takes place without any difficulty. But on cloudy nights, when there is poor visibility and a low ceiling, the little migrants encounter all sort of trouble.

NO SEE TV

Last October 5th, there was cloudy weather in Missouri. With a heavy overcast and a 400-foot ceiling, thousands of migrants were moving southward ahead of an approaching cold front. The new broadcasting towers of the TV broadcasting tower of Station KOMU called the Conservation Commission, suggesting that some birds struck the investigators.

These cast, together with more than a hundred from nearby university, found scattered over an area of approximately three square about 100 dead birds. Sixty-five species were represented among the fatalities were found among shore birds, doves, and practically all species of migrant songbirds.

They range in size from tiny warblers to the large American bittern which has a wingspan of about three feet. There were more than 300 catbirds among the recovered bodies. Evidently all of the little travelers had collided with the broadcasting tower or its supporting guy-wires. Incidentally, the fatalities were all for six when the tragedy occurred.

Folks who live in coastal areas and in the neighborhood of lighthouses, with newspaper stories of great numbers of birds being killed by flying into light houses, particularly on rainy or snowy nights.

OBSTACLES TAKE TOLL

Tall radio and telegraph wires take their toll among the migrants. During inclement weather, birds collide with these obstructions, particularly when the lines cross mountain passes.

Fortunately not all of these collisions are fatal. To be sure, the birds are stunned for a while but in a short time they recover their senses and resume their journeys after a few days of rest.

The woodcock is a migrant which, for some reason of his own, flies habitually at low altitudes. Consequently, the hunters who have investigated the habits of the woodcock show that about 50 per cent of those examined had unformed breastbones, evidently the result of past collisions during migration. This is true, also, but to a lesser degree, of some snipe.

So, as I say, following the sun by migrating at normal nightfalls has its disadvantages. But the same habit has its advantages, too, since outside my office window, I would be willing to risk the hazardsof 1 in the business of minding a migratory beats.

Kansas Will Sell Franchise

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City Athletics announced Saturday they have signed a franchise agreement with Finis Farr, a Kansas City businessman, to sell the franchise now held by Ottawa.

The Athletics inherited the Ottawa franchise when the Philadelphia Athletics moved to Kansas City.

Athletics are currently investigating the Tampa-St. Petersburg area in Florida as a possible location for the Kansas club, and may sell the franchise to interests there.

Trabert May Be Benched

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—Unless he shows marked improvement in the next four days, Tony Trabert may be benched and replaced by Chuck Richardson for the interzone Davis Cup finals against Sweden.

Trabert, non-playing U.S. captain, indicated as much Saturday after the Americans' workout practice session at which special attention was given to Trabert.

Another source revealed secret moves on the Milton courts here next Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday for the right to challenge Australia for the international trophy.

Quebec, Marlies Play to Tie

TORONTO (CP)—A third-period goal by rightwinger Gerry James with 45 seconds remaining gave Toronto Marlies a 4-4 tie with Quebec Formentera in an exhibition hockey game before 4,451 fans here Saturday night.

The game was the first of the season between the two members of the Quebec Junior Hockey League and a club from the Ontario Hockey Association junior league, and it was a rough-and-ready series with 30 minutes in penalties.

Veteran centre Guy Rousseau, who scored once and added two assists, stood out among the visitors. Walt Bradley scored a pair of Quebec goals while the other marker going to Willie O'Ree.

Glenn Lesiuk and Ross Snedden and Ken Girard preceded James' tying marker for the fifth-place Marlboros of the OHA Junior A.

Migratory Birds

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author And Creator of Science Tables.)

Life certainly is not all beer and skittles for migratory birds. To be sure, they follow the sun and for that they are to be envied. However, they do their traveling under their own power and therein lies a multitude of hazards.

Consider, for example, the migratory game bird. Shooting seasons are arranged, for the most part, so that the gunner can take advantage of the migrations. That is about the only time of the year that the migrants would be available to his gun.

A mourning dove, who has nested and spent a pleasant summer in New York State, starts southward in September. Throughout his entire journey, no matter how far south he flies, he is greeted by gun fire. The same is true of woodcock, shore and marsh birds such as snail and gallinule, and waterfowl.

Even the non-game varieties are not safe from the hazards of migration. One thing which contributes largely to their troubles is the fact that they migrate at night. This is true even of the shrikes.

Hornets Alone In Top Spot In American

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh's Hornets are alone in first place in the American Hockey League today thanks to a pair of rookie performers with last-place Buffalo.

The Hornets battled from behind for a 3-3 tie with the Providence Reds Sunday night, good for a one-point edge over Springfield Indians, who fell out of first place after they were blanked by Buffalo 1-0.

Rookie goalie Hank Bassen shut out the gate on the Indians and rookie Kenny Wharram scored the lone goal. Bassen's first shutout of the season. Earl Ingarfield provided the game goal for Pittsburgh at 17:31 of the second period.

Most bridge teachers agree on basic principles. If they seem to conflict it is because they talk a different language. Each may express in odd terms the guides he advocates.

Take the second bid by responder. Suppose he simply assists a major-suit opening at his partner; like one heart, two hearts. If opener then bids two no-trump what does responder do?

Culbertson says the responder makes a second bid with 3½ honor tricks, or 1½ to 2 honor tricks and strong trump support; otherwise, pass to show you lack the honor trick strength advised.

He also says if the second response is three in the opener's suit or three in a new suit it is a sign-off, a signal that asks the opener not to continue the bidding.

Goren says the second bid by responder is three no-trump with a balanced hand and mostly high card points; or jump to four in opener's suit with four trumps and more than seven dummy points.

He goes on to say: Without these requirements, as a rule refrain to throw in opener's suit. This is not considered like another raise. It is a pass-or-correct sign-off. (What I would call a rescue.)

Accordin' to Gordon, responder with only three trumps and a four-card fourth-trick he raises to three in the first suit, a third high he may raise to three no-trump.

Sit north with the hand shown here:

♠K 6 3
♥A 5 4
♦5 4 3 2
♣7 6 5

Your south partner opens with a heart and your first response is two hearts. If south then bids two no-trump your second bid should be three no-trump not three hearts or pass.

All arrows would or should do the same thing with your hand. Not all will tell you so in the same words as Culbertson gives above. This is why you need my future series on proof of bids.

Maritime Provinces Making Bid to Cash in On Prosperity

By GERALD FREEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HALIFAX (CP) — Eighty-seven years after Confederation the maritime provinces and late — start-ing Newfoundland are collectively making their biggest bid to cash in on Canada's prosperity — by contributing to it.

The Atlantic Provinces Economic Council has been brought into being to provide the spark for economic development of this eastern region. Cooperative development, it is felt, may be the answer to many of the Maritimes' problems.

Not too long ago spokesmen were regularly from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island to Ontario and Quebec were explointers; tariffs, taxes and freight rates were juggled to the advantage of central Canada; the Maritimes were dupes of Confederation.

WORKABLE APPROACH

The Atlantic provinces still want a share of the economic prosperity they consider their due and still can be expected to protest if their treatment seems unfair, but by giving reality to dreams many maritimers have had for years they are providing workable approach to a complex situation.

They hope, through co-operation among themselves and as units in the Dominion as a whole, to rejuvenate their economic system which suffers from the geographical location of the provinces.

The new attitude was voiced by Mayor Richard A. Donahoe of Halifax at a recent meeting here of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce when he said: "We are all Canadians. If one part is hurt it is felt by all Canada."

That was also the tone of the meeting here in September that resulted in the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council becoming a reality.

BROAD SURVEY

The council, now seeking incorporation and a permanent executive secretary, will survey the economic potential of the four provinces and recommend ways to take advantage of it. General membership in the council will be open to anyone but its board of directors will be limited to an equal number of representatives from each province—not fewer than five and not more than 18.

The council will try to answer questions such as these:

Can all the Atlantic provinces profit from New Brunswick's new mineral discoveries, and how?

Can plastics and turbine engines boost Nova Scotia's sagging coal industry?

Will forests support more pulp and paper mills?

Would precision manufacturing best suit freight rates and give the Atlantic provinces a greater share in the national economy?

How can investors' purse strings be loosened?

NOT NEW IDEA

Co-operation within the Maritimes is not a new idea. As long ago as 90 years there was an abortive bid for political union among the then maritime colonies but there was no wide support for such a union then, nor is there now.

The groundwork for the present council was laid last year at a meeting in Moncton among the Maritime Provinces Board of Trade, the premiers of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island and a cabinet representative from Newfoundland.

The council is considered the answer to isolationist demands by the Maritime Trade Board, which has been of representatives from each province—not fewer than five and not more than 18.

The council will try to answer questions such as these:

Can all the Atlantic provinces profit from New Brunswick's new mineral discoveries, and how?

Can plastics and turbine engines boost Nova Scotia's sagging coal industry?

NOT NEW IDEA

Co-operation within the Maritimes is not a new idea. As long ago as 90 years there was an abortive bid for political union among the then maritime colonies but

ECONOMIC GRANDMOTHER

The council will be economic godmother to 1,600,000 persons, about 10 per cent of Canada's population.

That 10 per cent is supported by 5.7 per cent of the country's agriculture, 4.8 per cent of the mining, 4.5 per cent of the manufacturing, 11 per cent of the forest products and a top-heavy 44 per cent of the fishing industry.

Wages and salaries in the Maritimes are lower on the whole than in the rest of Canada although in Newfoundland and the United States military projects since the war has boosted the average weekly wage to $55.54, about one dollar more than in Quebec. New Brunswick's average is $48.92, Nova Scotia's $48.45 and Prince Edward Island's $44.23.

Danny Thomas Always Clowns Even While Having Lunch

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Danny Thomas was in the Motion Picture Centre Cafe at lunchtime, putting on an impromptu show. Danny, whose love of entertaining is as plain as the scowl on his face, was quipping with the waitress, playing the cigaret machine like an organ and organizing all the other luncheon in a large chorus, Fred Waring style.

Between all this he was downing his lunch and conducting business for his TV show, "Make Room for Daddy," which recently won a Christopher award. The question arose of a casting for a blonde siren. Danny suggested Kim Novak.

"Oh, we can't get her," an underling replied.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE

Whereupon Danny lapsed into one of his philosophies. "Never say 'can't'," he said, embodying one of the credos that made him a star. He cited as example:

"Recently I wanted to use the song 'There's No Business Like Show Business' on my show. Everyone told me that was impossible. Fox had tied up the rights to the song on films.

"Impossible, eh? I called Irving Berlin in New York. 'Hi, Danny,' he says, 'how about sharing some bacon fat with me?'

"You see in 1945, I was entertaining the troops in Italy, and Irving was there with 'This is the Army.'

One night we were in a miserable billet with Bob Hope's unit, of all people. And the only thing we had to eat was greasy bacon fat that had been fried and poured over stale bread.

"Well, I asked Irving if I could use his song. And he said, 'Danny, you don't even have to ask. Of course you can use it!'"

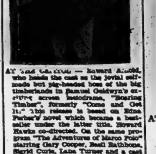
And that's why he says, "never say 'can't'."

DISNEY PLAN WATCHED

The talk of the TV trade is Disneyland and "how can they say do it?"

Why he's giving away every thing the studio! exclaimed one film executive.

And it surely looks that way. So far Walt has dispensed on his Wednesday ABC show three feature pictures—"Living Desert," "Alice in Wonderland," a host of Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and Pluto cartoons, some true-life adventures and ample portions of two future releases, "The Lady and the Tramp" and "20,000 Leagues under the Sea."



If sponsors had to pay for the original cost of these films, the tab would run into many millions of dollars.

But Disney doesn't view the production the basis of profit on the TV show alone. He looks at the long-term purpose of his new films by creating interest from TV viewers.

If Disney's plan works, you may see more movie studios adopting similar methods.

AT Cmd Lt-Gen. — Samuel Goldwyn, who leads the cast as the jovial colonel, and pin-headed boss of the big timberstakes in Panavision and Technicolor screen production, "Soaring Eagle," formerly "Gone and Out-lit." This release is based on Zane Grey's novel "The Mysterious Rider" and follows the latter title. Howard Hawks co-directed. On the same program "The Adventures of Marco Polo" starring Gary Cooper, Basil Rathbone, Sigrid Gurie, Lana Turner and a cast and Maria Toren.

Carving Suggests Old Civilization On Pacific Coast

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—A carving found near here recently and other discoveries of the past suggest an ancient civilization in the Pacific northwest.

The find is a reptile's head carved from a solid piece of sandstone uncovered under a bed of gravel while digging a cellar in a basement. The discovery site is believed to have been a tribal feasting ground.

In Petroglyph park, two miles south of here, strange carvings defy man to name how age, but estimates place their time before that of the Indians. The reptile's head would appear to belong to the same period.

At Sproat Sproat lake there are further examples of petroglyphic carvings.

AT THE BELLE

"Saadia," M.G.M. Adventure-Romance, Unusually Entertaining, Fascinating, in Technicolor.

"Saadia" had a unique beginning. It was written for the screen after Columbia producer Albert Lewin had personally toured the desert and mountains of Morocco, found the perfect palace to the mud huts of nomadic tribes.

An outstanding cast headed by two of Hollywood's top-ranking stars, Cornel Wilde and Mel Ferrer, and a screen newcomer, Rita Gam, hailed as filmdom's newest glamor girl.

While Wilde and Ferrer need no introduction to moviegoers, Miss Gam, for the record, is the young New York actress who has been briefed as "The Thief" signed by M.G.M. even before the release of that silent film, which has assigned the feminine lead in "Saadia." Early rushes have proved that the newcomer has dramatic talents to match her arresting beauty.

Behind "Saadia," almost a one man undertaking, is Albert Lewin, who has been producing stunning French novel, but the author, toured Morocco, then wrote the screen play. M.G.M. studio head, Dore Schary, gave Lewin the green light for the unusual task to film "Saadia" in Technicolor in its entirety. Interiors and exteriors on location thousands of miles from studio facilities. Many of the most successful films include "The Picture of Dorian Gray" and "The Flying Dutchman," not only accomplished the difficult task, but on completion of the picture was awarded the Legion of Honor for "Service to Morocco."

M.G.M.'s "Saadia" is starting today at the Bells Theatre, with Mel Ferrer and Cornel Wilde co-star, Warner Bros. Technicolor novelette, "Blacky Fury," and the Paramount News.

Three Old Friends Meet First Time After 40 Years

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Three old friends met in the MGM commissary for lunch. The last time they had all been together was 40 years ago when they appeared in "The Birth of a Nation," a film about the United States Civil War.

One was Lillian Gish, as sweet-faced as when she played Elsie Stoneman in the D. W. Griffith classic. She had returned to MGM for the first time in 36 years to play in "The Cobweb."

Another was Mae Marsh, who scored as Flora, the little sister in "The Birth of a Nation." Still a lovely woman, she has remained active in films.

The third was Donald Crisp, London-born Oscar-winner ("How Green Was My Valley") and repeated to be fabulously wealthy. He played General U.S. Grant in the picture.

ALL PRAISE GRIFFITH

The trio talked about their early days in films. They had one thing in common: Their loyalty to director Griffith, who died at 73 in 1948.

"Birth of a Nation" changed the lives of all three of the performers, who went on to stardom.

One other "Birth of a Nation" actor is still prominent in films. That is Raoul Walsh, who played John Wilkes Booth, the man who assassinated President Abraham Lincoln. He has since become one of Hollywood's most successful directors ("High Sierra," "Capt. Horatio Hornblower").

"None of us knew the greatness of the picture we were working on," Walsh recalls. "But we all had an enormous faith in the old man."

CASE ADJOURNED

HAMILTON (CP) — Daniel J. Campbell, 31, charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting Nov. 28 of Stanley Pudjunas, was granted a six-day adjournment Tuesday when he appeared for preliminary hearing.

FIRST LIVE KIWI SENT TO U.S.

This odd-looking creature is a kiwi, shown on arrival at Los Angles as a gift to the San Diego zoo from the government of New Zealand. The kiwi is related to the emu and cassowary and is the only bird in the world with nostrils at the tip of its bill. It is the first live kiwi ever sent to the U.S. One of two of the flightless bird outside their native country, the kiwi is so rare many New Zealanders have never seen one. (Central Press Canadian).

TWO ALARMS

OTTAWA (CP) — Two alarms sent Ottawa firemen racing through a snowstorm Tuesday, first to the historic west block on Parliament Hill and later to the modern, 17-storey Confederation building at the foot of the hill a block away. Both blazes were caused by short circuits and barely got beyond the smouldering stage. Damage was negligible.

PARLIAMENTARY VETERAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament opens Jan. 7 and a check of records shows Hon. C. G. Power (L—Quebec South) is the sole parliamentary survivor of the men who sat in the Commons with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Liberal prime minister who died in 1919. Mr. Power, 66, later was pensions and health minister in the Mackenzie King government.

STRIKE AVERTED BY PROFIT-SHARING PLAN

A happy Christmas instead of picket-line duty is anticipated by some 511 employees of a textile plant in Hespeler, Ont. Beginning January 1, employees of Dominion Woollens and Worsteds Ltd., will participate in a profit-sharing plan, with each worker drawing 10 per cent of net profit. The plan was accepted three days before a strike would have been called by the plant's union, workers' union. Spinner Dorothy Walsh from Newfoundland is one of the plant employees who will also get a two per cent raise in wages. Management and employees agree that the co-operative plan could be a solution to wage problems confronting the entire slumping Canadian textile industry. (Central Press Canadian).

Hungry Artist Discovers Sword Mightier Than Brush

By RON EVANS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Bill Thomson, a struggling Canadian artist with more ideals than commissions, finds the sword as mighty as the brush when it comes to eating regularly.

In tough times, the husky young painter from Prince Edward supports his income by taxing movie bit parts. Lately he has been acting next to the famous Errol Flynn film, "The Black Knight."

"They pay £5 10s a day for cutting on a horse and whacking some guy with a sword," Thomson grinned. "That's good money."

The 28-year-old artist has also worked in a Soho pub as a piano player.

Despite its erratic nature, Thomson is intensely earnest about his career.

"If you're going to be a painter you have to accept the fact that you're not going to make much money. If that bothers you, then you'd better do something else."

The sometimes-bearded Thomson went to the Ontario college of art in Toronto. He left there in 1947 with the governor-general's medal and a two-year scholarship in London's Royal Academy of Arts.

Later, he borrowed enough money to spend another two years at the Royal College of Art, graduating in 1952 with a drawing and painting diploma.

Although he specializes in portraits, Thomson's first major commission was a 36-foot mural in a staff canteen. Drawing on memories of some six months spent wandering in France and Spain, he created three panels on winemaking.

Another important project was his portrait of Countess Lloyd George, widow of the late Liberal prime minister.

Today, Thomson lives with his 36-year-old wife, Margaret—daughter of British novelist Henry Williamson—in if third-story studio in South Kensington. There he works, for about four hours each morning, on large, somewhat sombre canvases.

"I paint slowly and with some difficulty these days," he said. "I'm trying to work out a style which will be my own—something between Rembrandt's robust, expressed sensualism and Cezanne's suppressed emotionalism."

Thomson plans to return to Canada, but first he has his sights set on the $2,000 Canadian Foundation fellowship offered by the national research council. He would like to use the money to study frescoes in Italy.

Canada Expected to Decide Favorably on Atlantic Pact

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament early next year will be asked to ratify the Paris agreement for the entry of West Germany into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The expected favorable decision will help bolster the Atlantic alliance, that in mid-1954 was beginning to skid on thin ice with collapse of the projected European defence community. Britain has already ratified the Paris pact and 13 other nations, including Germany, still have to act on the matter.

Canada played no small part in finding a solution for German rearmament after EDC, which would have provided a one-uniform European army including German troops, ran on the rocks in the French national assembly.

PEARSON'S SUGGESTION

The immediate fear here was that bickering between France and its allies would weaken NATO and perhaps even destroy it. Officials in Ottawa, together with their opposite numbers in the other NATO countries, began casting about for a quick solution.

External Affairs Minister Pearson was one of the first to suggest that Germany be taken into NATO, provided that there were safeguards against any recurrence of German aggression.

Canada, in common with the United States and the NATO military command, had believed right along that Germany must be rearmed within the Western defence system and against the Communist threat in Europe.

The new plan for rearmament followed hard on the heels of EDC's collapse. At London in late September, Britain provided the solution by pledging that British forces would remain on the continent, something Britain had never before agreed to in peacetime. Mr. Pearson pledged that Canada would stand beside Britain, though this country did not undertake to commit forces to Europe for any definite period of time.

BRUSSELS PACT BASIS

The solution for German rearmament was worked out by expanding the Brussels pact, linking Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, to take in Germany and Italy. The new pact is known as the Western European Union.

At Paris about a month later, the NATO countries agreed to take Germany into NATO. Limitations and controls were placed on the type and amount of German arms.

After the signing of the Paris agreements, Mr. Pearson said they represented "a new and decisive advance in the development of the Atlantic community."

"They also represent a notable reinforcement of the security of free men everywhere," he said.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, one of the fathers of NATO, said the decisions reached at London and Paris were "heartening evidence of progress along the road to European unity within the wider community of the North Atlantic countries."

CANADIAN AID

When—or if—Germany becomes a full-fledged member of the Atlantic alliance, she would be entitled to the same treatment from Canada as other NATO allies. This might mean that Canada would ship arms to Germany and train German fliers.

Since April 1, 1950, Canada has given $1,100,000,000 in military aid to Belgium, Denmark, France, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Turkey and the United Kingdom.

BRITISH STEEL

Britain's output of steel ingots and castings in 1953 was 17,600,000 tons, compared with 10,300,000 in 1938.

ve Red China ts To Trade ' For Students

Links 11 U.S. Airmen Detained Scholars

By TOM HOGE

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Diplomats speculated today that Peiping's renewed protest over detention in the United States of 11 Chinese students might be a hint that Red China wants to use them as a base for bargaining on the release of 11 American airmen it holds on spy charges.

Peiping radio Monday night said the U.S. would be flouting international law if it held the 35 in reprisal for the jailing of the airmen.

Linking the two cases in the same broadcast led many United Nations delegates to wonder if Peiping was putting out feelers to see whether the U.S. would be willing to make some sort of a trade.

35 HAD SPECIAL SKILLS

Some 4,000 Chinese students were in the U.S. when Communist Reds entered the Korean war. Of those who wanted to go home, many have since been released. But the state department has not let the 35 in question leave the country because they have acquired skills that might be useful to the Communists.

UN Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold reported privately hopeful that the Chinese would accept his bid to go to Peiping to plead for the 35.

UN officials say Hammarskjold derived encouragement from the fact that Peiping radio's two blasts against the airmen in the last two days made no mention of his proposed visit or to the assembly debate denouncing their jailing by the Chinese.

EXPECTS DELAY

Persons close to Hammarskjold say he believes the Reds will take whatever time they think necessary to make a major issue as this has become.

Reports also persist that if other avenues produce nothing the secretary-general might ask Soviet Russia to use her influence with Peiping.

Some diplomats feel that Russia was more annoyed than pleased by Peiping's action in mentioning the airmen. These diplomats point out that the Russians were placed in an embarrassing position by the "defensible cause" at a time when they are trying to avoid preaching East-West coexistence and trying to win new UN friends.

Squadron Leader MacKenzie Will Be Given Checkup

OTTAWA (CP) — Sqdn. Ldr. Andy MacKenzie went into hospital today for a thorough physical checkup.

A captive of the Chinese Communists for two years until his release Dec. 5 at Hong Kong, the RCAF fighter ace was flown here Monday from his home in Montreal for interrogation by intelligence officials and Far East experts.

He saw top RCAF medical officers Monday and arrangements were made for him to enter the tri-service hospital at the RCAF Rockcliffe station. He was given a preliminary medical checkup at Hong Kong.

Officials said the examination may take most of the day. If MacKenzie is found to be in good health, he probably would be able to return to his family tonight.

Authorities also said questioning of MacKenzie concerning fellow prisoners—the Chinese still hold 11 American airmen — and the prison camp conditions is nearly complete.

Toronto Police Push Holiday Traffic Safety Campaign Into High Gear

TORONTO (CP) — Armed with extra men, anti-drinking slogans and orders to crack down hard, Toronto police today pushed a holiday traffic safety campaign into high gear.

Focus will be on the drinking driver. Police party-goer and the delivery man who persists in taking Christmas drinks.

Traffic inspector Robert Kerr said many employees have signified they will co-operate to abolish drinking while driving.

Police are also warning that the U.S. would be flouting international law if it held the 35 in reprisal for the jailing of the airmen.

CBC HAS DROPPED PLANS TO CURB 'GIVE-AWAYS'

Prize Shows Fewer, So Regulation Is Off

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC board of governors is satisfied that the number of give-away programs on private radio is dropping and has set aside plans to curb them by way of broadcast.

"But we will keep on watching the situation," says board chairman A. D. Dunton, who warned last spring that the CBC would take steps to regulate prize shows if the situation got out of hand.

Mr. Dunton said in an interview the board has studied a survey conducted this autumn and found that in general the number of give-away shows dropped "to a considerable extent" from what it was a year ago.

While there was no way of quoting a figure or percentage on the number of give-away programs, the survey showed nearly all stations had contributed to the reduction.

The report of the country-wide survey, costing the recommendation, was studied at the board's meeting in Ottawa last month.

REGULATION HINTED

Last spring, Mr. Dunton issued a statement saying the CBC would hold public hearings to study the possibility "of a regulation which would prevent give-away programs if the number of give-aways was not cut. The CBC questioned there give - away participants realized the odds against their winning anything. So do will-o-the-wisp winning.

The statement also expressed the CBC's doubt that participants knew some contests were recorded several days before they were broadcast on local radio stations.

Going to Church Elderly Couple Of Norwood Killed

NORWOOD (CP) — An elderly man and wife were struck by a truck and killed early today as they walked along the road to church.

Mrs. and Mrs. Charles Waldron, both past 70, were about to cross Highway 7 at the junction of Highway 7 here, 20 miles east of Peterborough, when they were hit, police said.

Stanley Roy Leeper, 20, of Norwood, told police he passed an incoming vehicle and saw the victims only a split-second before the accident.

Mr. Waldron was formerly employed at the Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. plant in Peterborough.

The couple moved to Norwood a year ago.

Niagara Area Slump Is Ending

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Largely because of the demand for new cars, the Niagara frontier appears ready to end a slump that gave it a serious unemployment problem last summer.

The big mills of Bethlehem Steel and Republic Steel are humming again, although there's little overtime. Ford Motor Company's stamping and assembly plants and Chevrolet's motor, axle and parts plants are working overtime from 43 to 56 hours a week. Ford says it can't supply cars to the dealers fast enough.

However, the jobless total still runs in the neighborhood of 33,000, or 6.5 per cent of the total labor force of Erie and Niagara counties. The American airmen are optimistic. At the height of the Korean War—1953—it was 2.3 per cent.

NATO Council Must Decide Who Shall Control A-Bombs

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

PARIS (CP)—Echoes of the Quebec agreement of 1943 will sound through the chaste halls of the Palais de Chaillot this week as the Atlantic alliance considers a new problem: What to do about atomic weapons.

The question basically is the one Clemenceau had in mind when he said that war is too serious a business to entrust to generals.

Now the point is whether the generals, meaning the military men, should have a free hand with nuclear weapons, or whether political considerations the 14 countries of the NATO partnership should have the last word.

The subject comes up Friday and Saturday at the monthly meetings of the NATO Council of Ministers, which will study the report of the military planners and consider what member countries can be expected to do in 1955.

How to handle nuclear fission weapons has been the big issue in world in 1943. At Quebec, Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt agreed not to use the future atomic bomb without prior consultation.

Now, 11 years later, a large protective alliance must decide whether to revamp its defences, and what political sanctions will be necessary. There will be much discussion about such things as atomic artillery and the kind of bomb that can be carried in fighter-bombers.

To military men, it seems obvious that the superiority of the potential aggressor can be overcome in the event of attack only by all-out atomic warfare. To them nuclear weapons now are little more than conventional tools of war.

But some smaller NATO countries—Holland and Belgium are named specifically—fear the safeguard of political consultations, preferring the dangers of delay to the threat of triggering a major onslaught of which they might be the first victims.

A preliminary to the council meeting will be the presentation by Canadian Defence Minister Thomson to NATO Secretary-General Lord Ismay of a declaration of Atlantic unity, recommending various ways of strengthening the alliance by formation of parliamentary committees and assemblies in member countries. The declaration has been signed by 168 persons representing eight countries.

Canada's ministerial delegates at the council meetings will be External Affairs Minister Pearson and Trade Minister Howe.

Mayor Saunders Requests Probe Into Use of Hotel Suite

TORONTO (CP)—Mayor Leslie Saunders of Toronto today asked Attorney-General Porter of Ontario to launch a full-scale judicial inquiry into city officials' use of suite 1715 in the downtown Royal York Hotel.

Opponents of the mayor claimed the suite was the scene of election campaign activities by city politicians entertained at civic expense.

"Even though I was not responsible for these accounts, I became the victim of the controversy," said Mayor Saunders, defeated in the campaign in his bid for re-election. "I am interested now in clearing my name."

The mayor, who left twin expires Dec. 31, said he is not in the least interested in the result of an informal poll of city council members Monday. Most of those polled said they felt a judicial inquiry unnecessary.

City hall records for 1951 opened to newspaper men Monday show the city spent at least as much during the mayoralty term of Hiram McCallum as while Mayor Allan Lamport was mayor.

However, because the accounts during Mr. McCallum's term did not show separate listings of items spent for general civic receptions and for entertainment of "mayor's visitors," it was difficult to make an accurate comparison.

The books, shown to newspaper men Monday disclosed that Mr. McCallum spent $17,200 for entertainment during his last year in

An earlier review of the books revealed that Mr. Lamport spent $11,500 for a 1 e i s i r e l y t i m e mayor's visitors in 30 months. This was over and above the allowance for civic receptions.

The controversy over entertainment accounts arose during the recent election campaign. Candidate Arthur J. Brown said a suite in the Royal York Hotel was operated for the "personal benefit and use of city hall officials who ran Toronto.

Mr. Brown was backed in his statement by Nathan Phillips who was the elected mayor before Mayor Leslie Saunders. Mr. Saunders was appointed mayor six months ago when Mr. Phillips resigned to become a commissioner of the Toronto Transit Commission.

During the controversy, Mr. McCallum and former mayor Robert Saunders, now chairman of the Ontario hydro-electric power commission, said they were willing to submit to investigation of their accounts.

Mayor Leslie Saunders denied knowledge of the hotel suite and investigation showed no connection between Mr. Saunders and the suite.

Monday's examination of the books showed Mr. McCallum and his entertaining in the Royal York and the King Edward Hotels while Mr. Lamport confined his almost exclusively to the Royal York.

Priests Lead Athens Parade Over Cyprus

ATHENS (Reuters) — Students, led by priests and chanting "s h a m e to the Americans," clashed in the streets with police today after holding a mass meeting demanding union of British-owned Cyprus with Greece (Enosis).

The demonstrators disbanded after three hours of street fighting, and after police had thwarted their attempts to lay flowers at the American and British embassies here.

Police said about 27 persons, including policemen, were injured.

The "enosis" rioters were demonstrating against United States and British policy in the United Nations on the Cyprus issue. They attacked police blocking their way to the embassies, using chairs and to sticks as clubs and shouting, "you are traitors."

BOYCOTT DESEGRE

Outside the University Hall, where the enosis meeting took place, students hurled chamber pots and glasses at police.

The UN political committee was due today to begin debate on a Greek resolution asking that the predominantly Greek-speaking population of Cyprus should have the right to determine its own political future.

Britain said it would boycott the debate, and the U. S. announced it would vote against the Greek resolution.

Borrow Eight Social Workers From States

TORONTO (CP)—An official of the Ontario Hurricane Relief Fund said Monday the fund has had to borrow eight social workers from the United States because there aren't enough of them in Canada.

Col. Walter Reynolds, field director of the fund, said at a press conference that 16 social workers are needed to go south and assist in rehabilitation of 400 flood-displaced families in the next two months.

"There is a very serious shortage of qualified workers in this country," Col. Reynolds said. "And those we have are working from 7 a.m. to midnight.

"We even had to call a Dutch exchange worker off the boat taking her home and ask her to stay in Canada to help."

LAST RESORT

Col. Reynolds said that as a last resort he asked the U.S. Red Cross to help and eight workers were sent.

The U.S. workers, who arrived Monday, will get the same pay as Canadian social workers—$3,000 a year—and will forgo their Christmas at home to work at Holland marsh and Toronto. Some are married.

Officials said the fund, set up after disastrous Oct. 15 floods killed 80 persons, has paid out more than $1,000,000 of the $3,836,000 it had on hand for needy families.

REPORT POPE HAS WEAKENED IN LAST 2 DAYS

Physicians Are Afraid Anaemia Threatens

VATICAN CITY (AP)—A source close to Pope Pius reported today that the gravely ailing head of the Roman Catholic Church was weakened perceptibly in the last 48 hours, and his physicians fear he is threatened by anaemia.

Two medical consultations were scheduled today on the condition of the 78-year-old pontiff, but when he suffered a serious collapse 12 days ago with a gastric ailment.

The source said the Pope, who had showed a marked improvement after rallying from the collapse, has been able to take only small spoonfuls of food by mouth during the last two days.

More nutrition has been given to him by tube, but this is said to have proved somewhat difficult.

The Pope also was said to have spent a somewhat less restful night.

TWO EXAMINATIONS

This morning he was to be examined by his private physician, Dr. Ricardo Galeazzi-Lisi, and Prof. Antonio Gasbarrini of Bologna, an expert in stomach diseases.

This afternoon Galeazzi-Lisi and Gasbarrini were to examine him in second consultation by Prof. Rafaelele Psalmoci di Valmazzagno, an Italian surgeon who participated in past examinations.

Decisions are to be made of the pontiff's gastric juices.

First indication of the Pope's increasing weakness was given Monday. It followed Sunday's consecration in St. Peter's basilica of Msgr. Giovanni Battista Montini as archbishop of Milan.

Gas Poisoning Kills Elderly Toronto Couple

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seven persons met violent deaths in Ontario Monday. Three of the mishaps occurred in Toronto.

An elderly couple died of gas fumes from the flame went out in their stove. The deaths of Herman Tyrrell, 78, and his wife Ada, 72, were first believed a murder and suicide but police later said they were accidental.

Toronto's other death was that of Mrs. Mary Jane Mead, 31, in Jacques Cloutier of Montreal was killed when his car rammed a street car.

SLEEP FATAL

In Carbetton, about 40 miles north of Toronto, Lorne Mead, 21-year-old Toronto salesman, died from carbon monoxide poisoning after he packed his parked truck to take a roadside nap. When police found the truck the engine was running.

Earl Curley, 27, of Garnett, Ont. was fatally injured near Hagersville when his car collided with a transport tramped driven by Rodney McKinley, 22, of Cookstown was drowned in a water-filled ditch near Barrie when the truck in which he was riding skidded into the ditch.

Alex Robinson, 80, was fatally injured Monday night when struck by a station wagon as he walked along the highway through Antrim, a village about 35 miles west of Ottawa. Police said driver Douglas Fraser of Arnprior told them he was unable to see the man until too late to avoid hitting him.

Restrictive Trade Practices Charged To Northern Ontario Coal Dealers

OTTAWA (CP)—Retail coal dealers in the Timmins-Schumacher area, of northern Ontario today were accused of having operated a price-fixing combine since 1949.

The restrictive trade practices commission, in a report made public today by Justice Minister Garson, said that at certain points the dealers received assistance from two suppliers:

W. J. Taylor and Son, Belleville, Ont., and the Empire Hanna division of M. A. Hanna Co., a big United States coal outfit operating in Canada.

Discussing usual practice, Mr. Garson said he will decide later what action will be taken in this case.

The commission's 56-page report said 13 dealers were investigated, 11 in Timmins and two in Schumacher and that these controlled between 90 and 95 per cent of the retail coal sales in the area.

Ford Co. And Union Refuse To Budge, Daley Ends Talks

Found 'Immovable Forces' On Method of Bargaining

WINDSOR (CP' — The question of province-wide bargaining by locals at three striking Ford of Canada automotive plants in Ontario has wrecked the latest efforts to reunion the 7,500 strikers to their jobs.

Ontario Labor Minister Daley broke off talks between the company and the United Automobile Workers (CIO-CCL) Monday when the two parties failed to agree on who would be seated at the conference table as union delegates.

The minister heartened that representatives from the three striking locals join the talks. The company said it would negotiate only with one local at a time, starting with Local 200, which represents the Windsor plant.

WITHOUT MEETINGS

The talks ended Monday without the two negotiating teams once coming together for talks.

Both sides blamed the other for the collapse of the meetings, which had raised hopes here that a settlement was in sight.

A company statement released in Detroit by Ernest R. Breech, vice-president of industrial relations, said the union had walked out and the blame rested solely on the union because of its insistence on province-wide bargaining.

"The union alone has blocked efforts which would have led to a settlement," it said.

It added that the company negotiating committee was ready to meet the striking locals on 48 hours' notice.

UNION STATEMENT

Emil Mazey, secretary-treasurer of the UAW International, who joined Monday's session at the invitation of Mr. Daley, said it a practical basis for settlement is to be set up, all parties involved in the dispute must take part.

No other firm has battled against one contract to cover all its plants as bitterly as Ford, he declared. He told reporters after Mr. Daley's announcement:

Mr. Mazey said there is a "possibility of attempting to confer with the American Ford Company" about the Canadian situation.

Earlier, he was reported he had been authorized by Walter Reuther, president of the CIO, to approach the American company to use its influence with the Canadian organization to reach a settlement.

Mr. Daley said his department would not make any more efforts to settle the deadlocked strikes until either the company or the union indicates to him it is ready to change its position.

"I have found two immovable forces," he said. "At the present moment there doesn't seem to be any compromise in either."

The strikes have started 10 weeks ago, when 3,700 production workers left their jobs.

They were joined five days later by 800 workers at the assembly plant in Oakville, midway between Toronto and Hamilton, and four weeks ago by 150 employees in a parts depot in Etobicoke, a Toronto suburb.

The workers are demanding wage increases ranging from four to 15 cents an hour, and fringe benefits.

LONDON (Reuters)—The Queen Mother is suffering from a cold, it was announced Monday night. The announcement said that a tea at the Canadian Women's Club which the Queen Mother was to have attended today has been postponed for a week.

Swollen Waters Of River Shannon Edging Higher

DUBLIN (Reuters)—The swollen waters of the River Shannon edged dangerously higher under continuous heavy rain today, threatening to sweep into the isolated little village of Athlone in central Ireland.

Troops and rescuers watched anxiously as the river, already brimming over 50 square miles of surrounding farmlands, i p e d within two inches of the top of its containing wall inside the town itself.

Officers went out for immediate evacuation from the most threatened areas, an unprecedented step in the history of the town of about 8,000.

ROADS BLOCKED

In England, meanwhile, flood waters blocked some 70 main roads in the south and east and rivers overflowed in residential and industrial areas in the centre of the country.

In Wales, reports of little rain, rivers swollen by the heavy December rains were dropping rapidly ceding and the situation was improving.

The Thames, which had spread to a width of a mile and a half at some points in its upper reaches, was beginning to seep away from the badly affected Reading and Maidenhead districts.

Streets were still under water today in many towns and villages of low-lying eastern England while further north in Leicestershire and Rutlandshire areas, firemen were pumping out sunken houses, factories and schools.

DOG SPREADS DISASTER

ISTANBUL (Reuters) — A dog with rabies bit 38 children here Monday and later was killed after a chase by a squad of 25 Turkish health officials, police said. The authorities fear that 12 of the children may die.

Ford Co. And Union Refuse To Budge, Daley Ends Talks

Found 'Immovable Forces' On Method of Bargaining

WINDSOR (CP' — The question of province-wide bargaining by locals at three striking Ford of Canada automotive plants in Ontario has wrecked the latest efforts to reunion the 7,500 strikers to their jobs.

Ontario Labor Minister Daley broke off talks between the company and the United Automobile Workers (CIO-CCL) Monday when the two parties failed to agree on who would be seated at the conference table as union delegates.

The minister heartened that representatives from the three striking locals join the talks. The company said it would negotiate only with one local at a time, starting with Local 200, which represents the Windsor plant.

WITHOUT MEETINGS

The talks ended Monday without the two negotiating teams once coming together for talks.

Both sides blamed the other for the collapse of the meetings, which had raised hopes here that a settlement was in sight.

A company statement released in Detroit by Ernest R. Breech, vice-president of industrial relations, said the union had walked out and the blame rested solely on the union because of its insistence on province-wide bargaining.

"The union alone has blocked efforts which would have led to a settlement," it said.

It added that the company negotiating committee was ready to meet the striking locals on 48 hours' notice.

UNION STATEMENT

Emil Mazey, secretary-treasurer of the UAW International, who joined Monday's session at the invitation of Mr. Daley, said it a practical basis for settlement is to be set up, all parties involved in the dispute must take part.

No other firm has battled against one contract to cover all its plants as bitterly as Ford, he declared. He told reporters after Mr. Daley's announcement:

Mr. Mazey said there is a "possibility of attempting to confer with the American Ford Company" about the Canadian situation.

Earlier, he was reported he had been authorized by Walter Reuther, president of the CIO, to approach the American company to use its influence with the Canadian organization to reach a settlement.

Mr. Daley said his department would not make any more efforts to settle the deadlocked strikes until either the company or the union indicates to him it is ready to change its position.

"I have found two immovable forces," he said. "At the present moment there doesn't seem to be any compromise in either."

The strikes have started 10 weeks ago, when 3,700 production workers left their jobs.

They were joined five days later by 800 workers at the assembly plant in Oakville, midway between Toronto and Hamilton, and four weeks ago by 150 employees in a parts depot in Etobicoke, a Toronto suburb.

The workers are demanding wage increases ranging from four to 15 cents an hour, and fringe benefits.

HAS COLD

LONDON (Reuters)—The Queen Mother is suffering from a cold, it was announced Monday night. The announcement said that a tea at the Canadian Women's Club which the Queen Mother was to have attended today has been postponed for a week.

City and District News

CHRISTMAS TREES MAIN OFFERING ON CITY MARKET

Christmas trees predominated on the city farmers' market this morning as about ten vendors offered evergreens ranging from 75 cents up to $3 each.

Distance is no obstacle for the vendors of Christmas trees. One farmer residing at Canaby's Hill, ten miles north of Belleville, also to the south north of Belleville, had a load of trees on the market.

EUCHRE AND DANCE MUCH ENJOYED

Approximately 300 persons from Belleville and district attended a euchre and dance, sponsored by Local 96, Distillery Rectifying Wine Workers Union, at the Club Commodore on Friday evening. The dance and euchre were held for employees of H. Corby Distillers and their friends.

NO DAMAGE REPORTED

An overheated stove brought city firemen to an apartment at 280½ Front Street, shortly after 10 a.m. this morning. However, they found it unnecessary to use any equipment and no damage was reported.

Yesterday, firemen were called to 23 Yeomans Street to guard against possible eruption of a smoky furnace.

Safe Driving Need Is Stressed At Kinsmen Club

The importance of safe driving and how it affects the death toll and alarming number of accidents on Ontario highways was stressed to members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club at their regular bi-monthly meeting on Monday evening.

Speaker for the evening was Norman Garbutt, representative of the Brewers' Warehousing Company, who told how the safe driving program had resulted in sharply reducing the number of accidents in which the company's drivers were involved. Every effort is made by his firm to cause employees to be accident conscious, the result being that drivers each year are achieving higher accident free records.

Newspapers, through publishing of accident pictures and dramatization of highway scenes also carrying on a valuable safety program which according to the speaker, they should always try to be safety conscious.

Police were doing their part in accident prevention through enforcement of traffic regulations, but unfortunately the police cannot always be with us," noted Mr. Garbutt.

President Don Thomas presided over the meeting with Harold Farrow acting as song leader and Bill Fraser as sergeant-at-arms.

The after-luncheon singsong was led by, Brig. A. Dixon, S.A., and the meeting closed by the president, Fred Adsett.

Two Western Canada Men Held as Vagrants

Two Western Canada men, George Kerekanich, 22, McLennan, Alta., and James Ukrainetz, 24, of Spreesville, Sask., are being held on vagrancy charges following their arrest in Deseronto Monday in connection with an allegedly stolen auto found abandoned on No. 2 Highway.

The two men had stayed at the Deseronto hotel Sunday night and were arrested by Provincial Police officers Cpl. Harry Barker and Constable Kenneth Williamson on vagrancy warrants issued by Magistrate McTaggart, Deseronto police chief.

Sunday night Constable Williamson found a car bearing an Alberta license plate abandoned along the highway near Deseronto. On checking the vehicle he found evidence that it may have been stolen and further investigation led to the two men at the Deseronto hotel. Police said the licence plates on the auto had been stolen from another car.

Cars Parked On Streets Overnight Being Tagged

City police are cracking down hard on motorists who persist in leaving their cars parked overnight on the streets and any who disregard the city by-law are finding tags on their cars in the morning.

Police point out that the streets must be kept free for the public works snowplows to operate and ruling out over-night parking for the only way to have clear streets.

Thus lack of a driveway in which to park their car is causing a bit of inconvenience to some motorists. One motorist has paid over-night parking fines three mornings in a row and is beginning to realize he must find some other parking place for his car than on the street outside his rooming house.

Sending of Christmas Cards To Reach Peak This Week-End; 120 Extra Helpers Needed

The hardest working two cents in the world is the stamp on a Christmas card.

In Belleville, the two - cent Christmas card has mobilized a special staff of 40 regulars and 120 extras on round-the-clock duty to cope with the annual flood of seasonal greetings and parcels, expected to reach a peak this week-end.

Extra help started meeting the rising tide of mail and parcels on Saturday. More and more extra help will be integrated into the post office's operating services during this week until, a total of 160 persons are on duty during the peak three days of December 17th, 18th and 19th.

The swollen labor force will gradually diminish as the volume of work declines during the week immediately prior to Christmas. By Boxing Day the post office will have been cleared of mail and parcels and the regular staff of 160 persons on its year-round operating schedule.

ALL FEEL IMPACT

Every division of the post office feels the impact of Christmas mail. There are more persons handling letter-size mail, parcel and registered letter stamps, and the all-important two-cent stamps. There are more letter sorters, more letter carriers, more parcel sorters. More parcel cases are in service, more money is collected, there is more hard labor and more congestion in the post office at Christmas than at any other time in the year.

The Belleville post office handles distribution of mail and parcels not only for the city but for the whole of Hastings County. At the moment there are 24 mail routes fan out into Peterborough and northern counties. Rural route service from the city carries mail to the outskirts of Trenton, to Roslin in Prince Edward, east, and covers Mountain View and Ameliasburg in Prince Edward county.

DIVIDED INTO TWO CLASSES

Mail arriving by train from the east and west and by bus and letter collectors from the north and south, is matched by the flood of outgoing mail headed to all parts of Canada and the United States, in particular, and to the rest of the world in general.

Mail arriving on the sorting table, is divided into city and outgoing mail, registered and air-mail letters. Unsealed Christmas cards, which can be sent anywhere in the world for two cents, are separated from first class letters with five-cent postage.

Outgoing mail is divided into east and west of Belleville bundles for further sorting on the trains. All mail, regardless of size or stamps, is airlifted in Canada where such service speeds up delivery.

Outgoing mail is sorted into cases according to street names arranged alphabetically. Carrier routes are numbered on the street boxes. Street mail is then sorted by number and order of delivery by the carrier. One whose section is the mezzanine floor is devoted exclusively to sorting cases for Belleville Christmas cards.

Regular postage and five-cent Christmas mail is sorted in the regular sorting cases.

Belleville parcels are handled in the post office basement. Parcels are sorted into bins according to streets and then the contents of each bin is further divided and put in bags for route delivery.

Customs parcels are sorted separately. Customs inspectors start at 6.00 a.m., clear parcels for the county and district carriers first, and then city parcels. Those item passing customs approval are moved into the main parcel stream and handled like domestic mail.

Mail volume is not easily determined but certain figures are available. In December, 1952, the canceling machine licked off 867,300 items posted in this city. The figure showed a 4.3 per cent gain in 1953 to 904,791 items.

Stamp sales at the postage meter setting produced $31,317.22 revenue in 1952 and $33,477.22 in 1953. For comparison purposes stamp sales and postage meter sales in July of 1953, considered a representative month, were $14,352.14.

Postmaster J. C. Waddell points out, however, that these are only a partial indication of December's increased mail volume, December mail is made up mostly of Christmas cards at two cents each while July mail is practically all first class postage at four and five cents per letter.

BIGGEST HEADACHE

Biggest post office headache during the December rush, according to Mr. Waddell, is improperly addressed mail. Mail addressed simply, John Doe, Belleville, or even John Doe, Front St., Belleville, presents a problem in identification. This throws a monkey-wrench into the high speed operations or mail distribution that the Christmas mail demands. Much of this improperly addressed mail winds up in the dead letter office eventually.

Improperly packed or wrapped parcels is another power for post office workers. Tissue paper, string and brown paper does cause the most trouble. They tear easily and often, as mountains of mail pile up, the address is torn loose and lost. Boxes of stout construction and tough, stiff wrapping paper are best.

Of course, another aid to the harassed minions of the mail, is to mail early and avoid the rush.

RESTRICTIVE

The commission said retail dealers are handling substantially all of the coal trade in the area have been parties to a price-fixing agreement, "suppressing" competition and "depriving" the public of the protection of selling prices based on free trade.

CLAIMS CUT OFF

It said further that when certain dealers tried to break the price fixing and sell at a lower price, the suppliers were prevailed upon by the other dealers to cut off supplies to the deviating dealers.

Extra help started meeting the price fixing arrangements, said the commission, by setting a profit margin by which all sellers had to abide.

"The evidence disclosed that on one occasion when a particular dealer was selling a popular coal at a reduced price and the other dealers cohld not persuade him to increase his prices, they appealed for assistance to the district agent.

"The agent, W. Y. Taylor and Son of Belleville, promptly advised the dealer that if he continued to sell at lower prices than other dealers, the agent would have no alternative but to abide by the wishes of the dealers and discontinue supplies.

SUPPLIES RATIONED

"Subsequently, supplies were discontinued and he was not reinstated until he had undertaken to abide by the prices agreed upon by the group and the group had given approval to the supplier to resume shipments."

The Hanna Co. came into operations when two dealers successfully got the company to restrict supplies of a popular brand of stoker coal to three area dealers, cutting off one retailer who was selling competitively.

This, said the commission, had substantial effect in lessening competition in the Timmins-Schumacher area and was not in the public interest.

The report concluded that coal-selling competition in the northern area would be restored if such price-fixing agreements as alleged in the report were prevented and if individuals were not deprived of supplies because they engaged in competitive selling.

Projects Planned For New Year Are Discussed

The December meeting of the Belleville Arts and Crafts club was held in the Bayview Grocery school with Mrs. Dolly Cain presiding.

The main business of the meeting consisted of projects planned for the New Year, i.e., a travelling art exhibit for this Eastern Central Ontario area, of which the Belleville club is host, and an Arts and Crafts exhibit for Belleville.

Two excellent films were shown entitling "Indian Arts and Crafts" and "Sculpturing" both produced by the Canadian Film Board, in conjunction with the Canadian Eskimo and the Sculptor's Guild.

Refreshments were served, and the club adjourned until the new year.

Kinette Club Sponsors Visit Of Santa Claus

TWEED — Santa Claus visited Tweed on Saturday and he chose for his headquarters a vacant corner in front of Bob Wood's garage, which was nicely decorated with evergreens and colored lights.

From early in the morning until well on in the evening he was visited by hundreds of children and many parents with little children. Candies, popcorn, favors and oranges were distributed.

There were two free shows at Victoria Theatre; one at nine o'clock in the morning for the village youngsters, and at 2.15 in the afternoon for out-of-town children. A special feature picture for children was shown, "Challenge to Lassie."

Santa's visit was sponsored by the Tweed Kinette Club, the members of which are to be commended in keeping this annual event alive for the enjoyment of the children. Had it not been for the Kinettes, Santa would have by-passed Tweed this year.

Ottawa Will Contribute One-Third Cost

TORONTO (CP)—The city of Ottawa will contribute one third to the cost of the 18-mile $15,000,000 throughway to cut from east to west through the heart of the capital city, it was reported Monday night.

The report said the federal government will contribute about $7,500,000 and the Ontario government $2,500,000.

Agreement of the two governments to join with Ottawa in the project was reached last night during a meeting of federal and provincial officials with Mayor Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa.

The federal government's 50 includes $5,000,000 spent earlier acquiring the Canadian Nati on Railways right-of-way throughout town and district for the throughway.

Ontario is contributing the throughway in lieu of cost to the a by-pass. The federal government is participating because Armstrong will form a link of the highway Canada highway. The three trans which will take four throughway, build, will have 22 ½ years to bypasses and overpass interchanges.

Sees Big Market Eventually In South America

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian Rio de Janeiro recently returned from a Canadian ministerial conference here, he is impressed with Argentina's market potential of Latin America once current problems are overcome.

Former Minister of the external affairs department is an interview Monday in Ottawa of the Latin American economic problems.

"I am sure these problems will be overcome and when they are, it appears evident that tremendous markets will be opened in that area," the 32-year-old London, Ont., economist said.

Sheppard Sticks To His Story

By RELMAN MORIN

CLEVELAND (AP)—Dr. Samuel Sheppard quietly stuck Monday to his story of innocence against a thundering state's attorney, John J. Mahon, who made him relate scenes of the most intimate details of his life.

He admitted flirtations and marital infidelity—but denied that they ever spread the shadow of divorce over his marriage.

He admitted he cannot explain some points in his story of the night when his wife was murdered, but he said he has always pened that way, nonetheless.

FOURTH DAY

Sheppard returned today to the witness stand for the fourth consecutive day in his trial on a charge of first-degree murder.

The state contends he killed Marilyn Sheppard, who was his pregnant wife, at the time, and says his relations with other women drove him to the crime. He denies both the act and the alleged motive.

Sheppard says a prowler battered his wife while he was asleep in a downstairs room, and knocked him unconscious when he rushed up to help her.

He has told his story, and now he is defending it under cross-questioning.

AN INTERESTING SUGGESTION

An editorial in the Windsor Star urges a change in Canada's family allowance regulations. It appears to have considerable merit.

The Star says: "An Ontario Conservative is urging that family allowances be discontinued before payment of family allowances to immigrant families beginning with their arrival in Canada, 'when they need it most'."

We should like to give credit where credit is due for this suggestion, but the Star editorial does not give the name of the Conservative in question and we missed the report on which the Windsor paper's editorial is based.

However, we rather expect the Conservative responsible for the proposal would be more interested in seeing the suggestion adopted than in winning personal credit for bringing about such a change in the present regulations.

When the Act governing family allowances first became law, three years' residence was required. This has since been reduced to one year.

The residence requirement was established, according to the Star, "to escape the charge that shiftless families would come just to collect the allowances."

Surely there is never any real danger of an influx of new Canadians of this type? Most of us have had concrete proof that the great majority of immigrants are hardworking people. As the Ontario Conservative who made the suggestion says, most of the family allowance most during their first year of residence in the country. Not only is this the period when the family income is likely to be lowest, but it is also the time when children are likely to be in the most urgent need of warm clothing and an adequate supply of nourishing foods. In many cases these immigrants come from warmer climes; in many cases they came to Canada after years of prosperity. Surely the Canadian taxpayer is not so niggardly that he would require them to reside for a year in this land before granting them the same right to the same assistance from the state as given to all other children?

As the Star points out, the present regulations could force a high-salaried immigrant "to pay unnecessarily high taxes during his year of residence." That is a telling argument for the abolition of the one-year waiting period. Exemptions for children under the present income tax law are wholly inadequate to themselves. They can be justified if one regards the family allowance as an additional type of exemption. In effect, therefore, what we are doing is to force immigrants to pay higher taxes than those paid by Canadians.

We might mention a final point. The children of some United States servicemen stationed in Canada have been receiving these allowances after residence for a year. U.S. authorities have now ordered these servicemen not to apply for allowances. Surely, though, if the children of the employee of a foreign nation are eligible for the allowances after a year's residence, the children of a new Canadian should receive this assistance as soon as they become Canadian residents.

A CASE OF BAD EYESIGHT

J. J. Coffey, a Chicago business engineer, says that one out of every ten clerks could be fired from office staffs without impairing efficiency.

"How Mr. Coffey figured out how these dispensable clerks should be fed?—because there is a prejudice against letting people starve in this country," comments Thomas Richard Henry in his column in the Toronto Telegram.

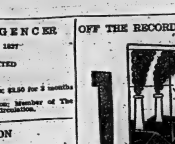
Mr. Henry apparently thinks that there is just so much work needing to be done in Canada and that if you manage to improve efficiency so that nine people do tomorrow what ten people are doing today the tenth person will be unemployed.

This is not an entirely new viewpoint, but we did not expect this would be "How Thomas Richard Henry Sees It." Mr. Henry's judgment in this case appears to be slumbering with the "feather-bedders" of some of the older craft unions, where anachronisms are acclaimed.

In a country where the most pressing problem is generally recognized, concern over the problem of feeding a large group of dispensable clerks is particularly puzzling. It is true, of course, that the immigrants who come into this country bring with them mouths to feed and when established in the Canadian way of life rapidly develop a whole set of new needs and wants in the style of the Canadian way of living. Fortunately, though, we need workers as much for their ability to produce as for their willingness to consume. Those unemployed clerks would be capable of producing, too, and could join with their fellow workers in the production line in the mammoth task of continuing to exploit an ever greater proportion of our natural resources.

AN EYE TO PROGRESS

A news report from Moscow states that the most popular form of fiction in the Russian capital is the spy story with the villain either an American or a Briton working for those warmongers, the "foreign intelligence services."



This meets growing demands of the people to get something in the way of adventure stories in their reading fare, says the news report. Maybe the Russians are intensely interested in finding out how much progress "foreign intelligence services" are making.

MASTER CRAFTSMAN

He gave to toil a skilful hand,
That it could pass the final test
A mind that tried to understand,
He wanted to be his best.
He gave it patience, day by day,
He learned, and kept his secret bid,
When imperfections came his way
To please himself with what he did.
Although he might have called them slight,
This is the master craftsman's way:
He cared enough to set them right.
To do his best from day to day;
To seek perfection for its own.
Since to his work his name was tied,
And never be content with less,
He gave to it a sense of pride.
Striving always to be allowed
Of what he fashions to be proud.

30 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 14, 1924.

"The merchants want snow—lots of it—to make Christmas business hum. A prominent merchant said yesterday: 'It's a matter how close Christmas Day is on what they do—but what they believe and how they behave in dollars and cents'. Regarding the character, the psychologists have not attempted to pronounce any definite test their findings are variously shocking, sobering and comforting. Being generally a contented Australian is not ambitious. One question submitted by the psychologists was: "If you had your choice, would you prefer a steady or a better paid job?" Eighty-five per cent preferred the steady job. Contentment with the common lot in life makes Australians intolerant of extreme ideologies. They fear Communism, Communists, Socialists or atheists as immigrants. Fifty percent of Australians favor the Labor Party (Socialist) disapproved of Socialism and believed that those who were in the Liberal Party disliked rightwing conservatism.

In matters of religion, too, Australians are an easy-going community. Church of Christianity but indifferent church-goers. Nineteen per cent of those interviewed believed in God but only 63 percent in a life after death. Only 32 percent are regular or more or less frequent churchgoers. A third of the population goes to church but rarely and a fourth not at all, but the great majority describe themselves believers and dislike atheism. Roman Catholics are more likely to be church-goers, 62 percent attending regularly. Eighty-nine percent of the Baptists; 19 percent of the Methodists; 11 percent of the Presbyterians and only six per cent of the Anglicans go to church every Sunday.

This casual attitude toward organized religion fits right into the pattern of national character. Australians are very loyal to political institutions and to their family circles but they are "individualists". They are indifferent to clubs, lodges and religious sodalities and only four percent pay dues to a political party. About the writing of the constitution, voting being compulsory—believe it does not matter much which party is in office, which every party they vote for.

Two-thirds of all male breadwinners are members of trade unions because they have to be. In Australia is perhaps still a closed shop. But fewer than a third of the trade unionists take an active part in the affairs of their unions, though a very large majority support the right to strike.

Australians are probably the most leisured nation in the world. Manual workers in principle work 44 hours, with overtime, and office workers 35 to 40 hours. They get four weeks' holiday with pay, make a practice of using up their annual holidays in full even if they are not ill, compress the working week mainly into five days and leave quarters of them get two or more weeks' annual holiday. Only 12 per cent declared 36 percent of them say they get too little leisure, 47 per cent half the population prefers to spend its evenings at home—which explains why Australian women are such keen gardeners.

Australians are not intolerant of extreme ideologies. They fear Communism, Communists, Socialists or atheists as immigrants. Fifty percent of Australians favor the Labor Party (Socialist) disapproved of Socialism and believed that those who were in the Liberal Party disliked rightwing conservatism.

Those Aussies!

(By R. L. Cuthbert in the Windsor Star)

What sort of being is there this mythical creature, the average Australian? A group of psychologists in the University of Melbourne has tried to supply authoritative answers to curiosity about themselves with an objective survey designed to show what they think of life and how they behave in the daily routine of their characters; the psychologists have not attempted to pronounce any definite test their findings are variously shocking, sobering and comforting. The study was made in Kelbourne and the people chosen by interviewer were a reasonably representative cross section of the Australian urban community as a whole.

Here general conclusion reached

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

DEAR READERS, I HAVE A PROBLEM.

Dr. Brady

We keep telling people that letters should pertain to Health and Hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis, treatment, etc., whatever some people call this column. Of Doc Brady himself thinks it is a health column, and accordingly submits everything he writes to a good index of such matters before releasing it for publication. The judge is a guy named Hippocrates, who applied his following, in effect: Do good if you can but do no harm.

Now I have a problem. A reader says she has read my column several times and she finds it interesting. She is twenty-one, married, about two months along in family way. She has enjoyed doing exercises, especially standing on her head a few minutes every day. It seemed to keep her feeling good and give her more energy. Now she is wondering whether it is harmful to do exercises in her condition. Other exercises she did were touching toes and backward somersaults. She stated she had also bought I confess with misgivings, that the baby means what I mean, and contended for many years somersault means, naturally, a turn that leaves one in a heap, and not, as N. Webster and others say, a leap in which a person turns heels over head, forward or backward, without touching the ground with any portion of the body.

At this critical juncture comes a letter from the son of my editor and chief ghost writer advising that his father has passed away and I do every morning are, his physical education. Instructor Hillcoe tells him, forward rolls; somersaults are more difficult and now I find that the 18th definition of the verb roll in Webster is to cause a circle or a circle by rotating the body about its lateral axis, whatever that may be.

Now I'm getting confused. Botating the body about its lateral axis is to my mind like rolling over in bed or rolling up the carpet or rug to clear space for dancing. Too silly to consider, except as a passive exercise in which the doctor or attendant when a patient is too feeble to turn off his back.

As a few readers may know, when I find I have been stumped I turn up to it and try to make amends. It will not be easy to find a term to connect with use instead "forward roll" or "backward roll." How go I to straighten out all the people who, under my tutelage, have acquired the habit of executing half a dozen rolls on rising every morning?

In the pamphlet which tells how and why one should do so, I make it clear that "a roll is not a leap," and, lest the reader get the wrong idea, I include a picture of an individual somecoh, all right, rolling.

All these years I have been trying to teach you poor souls what a half dozen rolls before breakfast every morning will do for you, to wit:

1. Put stragnent or slacker blood in the great splanchnic pogl in the abdomen and halt fatty infiltration.
2. Improve, "poor circulation" especially when it is associated with cold feet and sallow complexion.
3. Prevent or correct intestinal stasis due to ptosis (sagging of abdominal or internal organs).
4. Clear cobwebs out of the attic of the brain, dizziness and distress due to "gas".
5. Prevent "biliousness".
6. Overcome menstrual difficulties of young women.
7. Relieve pain, discomfort or hot flashes in middle-aged women.
8. Overcome the habit or insomnia.
10. Correct mental depression and "the blues" in many instances.

If the expectant mother does backward somersaults without a mattress content with ground or floor, O.K., keep on rolling them and remember that your head right up to the great day, I say, that is, as long as you feel like it.

Rocket-Age Reactionary

(Hamilton Spectator)

The announcement that rocket-propelled air liners capable of speeds up to 13,000 miles an hour can be built within the next ten years is startling but not at all unfamiliar. Call it lack of courage if you will, but the world's overburdened, pace, dedicate speed" is infinitely preferable to the 18 minutes at a globe in some Rube Goldbergish projection.

Time is what one makes it. If these speed devotees ever should succeed in what they would call it with it! Time was meant to be spent. Would it "husband" it better if we could rocket from San Francisco to Sydney, N.S.W., in 90 minutes at a Austin of 11,750 miles per hour speed by Hong Kong or London in 20 minutes? Or at the comparatively modest speed of 8,300 miles per hour, which most planes are gained?

Much of the inherent sense apart from a proportion of of caution, too, we also feel that a speed of 13,000 miles per hour would be unsafe. Even if engineers, savored a sample of the air or an exquisite speed of modern air liners it could compare with the boarding the thrill of er and experientially out the sedating sensation of the actual out where gulls f cheek? TODAY'S TALK

PETS

Every child, at some time in its life, should have one or more pets. Having one or more helps develop character. The king of all pets is a dog, but many other pets are also quite some wild animal pet. As a youth I had for years full of young birds, small animals, and a small pony.

I tamed a wild pigeon so that it would eat from my hand. I turned it loose, but day after day it came to the kitchen window to take food from my hands. I had a whole community of domesticated pigeons. I have since had so many domestic pigeons that the novelty soon explained and I had to part with them.

At my Summer island retreat for years I have tamed the little red squirrels so that they trust me and leap to me, for begging for peanuts. I could write a small book on many of their comical antics and on the life story of their wonderful athletes and highly intelligent, little beings in August to supply food for Winter. Make friends with any animal, feed him, and he kind to him, and you will have a pet you will love.

I love birds but could not bear to house them in a small cage, no matter how contented they might appear. On my way to work, nearly every day I pass a store where large numbers of birds are housed. Some of them seem to say: "Please send me back to my open fields of tropic warmth and sunlight."

The child with a pet learns to be gentle and kind, not only innocent, but toward their companion he What a world of knowledge you learn from a pet! Children who have never look into eyes more n my and true. I recently read in newspaper of a dog who refused leave his dead master, nor tunto he found food. "Faithful death" is not exaggerated.

New Reason For Divorces

(Sydsvenska Dagbladet Sweden)

A Danish actress, known for her good looks and many marriages, was recently presented to the royal palace in Copenhagen to receive a decoration.

After informing her that he was a strong admirer of her dramatic talent, the King added, insistent for as to whether she married. "I am told," he said, "that there is one thing I don't understand: How does it happen that you divorced so many husbands."

"Your Majesty," the actress replied, "I love to be a bride."

Unrubble Humor

SO WHY WORRY?

A friend of mine said to his children, after her middle nineties, "Mother, are you happy?" "Why of course I am happy." she replied. And I remember anything long enough to worry about it."

We should not like to lose our memories, as some old people do, but what a blessing it would be if, like this very old lady, we could forget the things which trouble us before they start eating holes in our minds. The things we worry about usually never occur. Even though the things which do occur may be worse than the things about which we worried, we usually find ourselves capable of handling each situation as it arises. We think we could never face loss, but when it comes, we do face it. We think we could never survive pain, but we do survive it, and people marvel at our courage. We turn our faces away from pain, and yet when death comes, most people accept it with composure and very often greet it with a smile.

Why He Bought

(From Tit Bits)

A man looked over a car in an auto salesroom and then was given a demonstration, but did not make a decision. The following day he turned up again and stated that he had decided to buy the car.

"That's fine," said the salesman, pleased at having gained a customer. "Now tell me, what was the dominating thing that made you buy this car?"

The man grinned: "My wife."

Blizzards No Excuse!

(Fort William Times-Journal)

A weighty problem has been posed for the railways of Canada by the decision of a Quebec judge that a driver is not to be ruled level crossing signs must be legible even in snowy weather. He said the railway "has a duty to give due precaution in regard to those who drive on a road crossed by its lines and in exercising these precautions it should take account of climatic conditions in a country as it operates."

This presents a rare challenge to inventors. Anyone who could trot out an idea that would make snow-blowing visible in a blizzard would be a wizard.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A young lady of our circle of friends came in the other day evidentially for some elderly advice in the matter of love. Now, we are not, by the talk of the family, of course, for several months. I thought I was all retired.

"Pop," she said, "I don't know whether I'm in love or not. Really I don't know."

"It's easy to tell," I assured her in my best fatherly manner. "I always tell a man by his nose."

"Well, all way he blows his nose," said my young friend, hesitantly. "I don't know. He blows like a trombone. Or a bugle. He make that awful, trumpeting sound."

"Mmm-hmm, like a whoopy make and another thing," she said, "the way he scratches his neck. You've noticed it? He is always pulling at his collar and scratching his neck. I could scream!"

"How long have you been noticing these things?" I checked.

"Oh, I don't know," she said, "I'm admitted, "I thought maybe I would get used to them . . ."

"Well, that's all I adjudicated," you're not in love. Love, when all is said and done, is a mystic mysteria, a sort of lunacy, that nature afflicts people with at the onset of puberty and the marvelous attraction blinds its victims to the defects and faults of the object of affection. You see nothing but good in each other. If this were not so marriages would rarely get married. It is only after marriage that the young friend starts at me shocked and incredulous.

"Pop," she would call the whole thing off" she whispered.

"Certainly," I said. "And tell him nothing."

About midnight my phone ran. I got out of bed.

"Oh, Pop, swept my young friend. "I told him what you said and the meanest things about me. The way I bite my lips. The way I twiddle the hair at the back of my neck . . ."

"Mmm . . . eh!" I condoled.

"We're being married in February," she exulted.

Propose Plante Be Reinstated In Police Post

MONTREAL (CP) — A pair of lawyers who battled Montreal vice conditions for some six years, Monday were reunited in principle in key civic posts when the city's executive committee proposed the reinstatement as assistant police director of Pacifique (Pax) Plante.

Mayor Jean Drapeau, who won a landslide victory on a "clean-up" platform in the October municipal elections, moved for the reinstatement of Plante, fired as assistant police director in 1948.

The man who fired Plante for "insubordination," police director J. Albert Langlois, is now on leave of absence following the vice probe. Judgment handed down by Mr. Justice Francois Caron.

IS APPEALING

Justice Caron ordered that Langlois be dismissed, disqualified from municipal office for a year and fined $500. Langlois is appealing the judgment.

The official appointment of Plante as assistant police director will be delayed until acting director of the department Thomas O. Legrett submits his report to the executive committee. According to the city charter, the police director must appoint his own assistants.

Plante said he would accept his old job, worth $8,500 a year, when it was formally offered to him.

After Plante was fired in 1948, he wrote a total of 60 articles on local vice conditions, published by the newspaper Le Devoir and later in book form.

Drapeau and Plante were co-prosecutors in the 3½-year inquiry.

The president of the Prince Edward-Belleville club, Mrs. I. Wannamaker, graciously welcomed the members and guests to the Christmas meeting held recently in the YMCA.

After the usual opening, a memorial was held for one of the members, Mrs. Allan Calnan, whose sudden passing since last meeting was keenly felt by all. In loving tribute, Mrs. Wannamaker read the 23rd Psalm and "Abide With Me," was sung.

Mrs. A. McCoy brought messages from shut-ins and read thank-you notes for cards sent and for flowers. A letter was read by Mrs. Baird from the superintendent of the new Institute for the Blind, at Kingston, thanking the club for its donations, and extending appreciation for the furnishings of a room, called the "Prince Edward-Belleville room," and also an invitation to visit the Institute at any time.

Convening the program was Mrs. Fred Burley's group with her co-convener presiding. Mrs. Baird read a poem "December Magic," and Miss C. Anderson led in several Christmas carols.

GUEST SPEAKER

The guest speaker, Senior Captain Fisher, was introduced by Mrs. Baird. His address gave a vivid portrayal of the Holy Birth and all it has brought to the world in joy, brightness and peace. He told of Christmas in other lands, the real joy of giving and sharing; the meaning of the star and the redemptive power of Christ's life and death.

After his closing prayer, the president thanked him and presented, for Christmas cheer, a cheque for $25, with the club's individual gift to be sent to the Citadel on Pinnacle street.

Mrs. Steers gave an outline of the origin of the hymn, "Holy Night," now inspiration came to the writer, the Rev. Joseph Mohr, sitting in his study in Austria, and the memorial erected to which pilgrims go, and visit the beautiful valley of the Danube to honor the composer of the music—later used in "Silent Night."

A new member, Mrs. Harry Burley, of Wellington, now in Belleville, was welcomed.

Mrs. Burley's group served refreshments, and a happy social time was spent.

A letter was read from the Catholic Council of Parent-Teacher Associations with regard to the problem of comic books. Members were urged to write to their member of parliament expressing disapproval of crime and horror comics being sold and distributed in Canada. Joint action on the part of parents will almost certainly bring successful results to this problem.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LOYALTY TO HER PRESENT MARRIAGE SHOULD COME FIRST

The first thing that occurs to a great many wives, when their marriages begin to go wrong, is that to walk out on their problems, get a divorce and marry somebody else is just what they need to find happiness.

Some already have a particular man in mind. Others are merely daydreaming.

But few such wives seem inclined to stop and consider if there is any way they might remedy whatever is wrong with their marriage, and so, perhaps, find happiness right where they are.

Here, for example, is a letter which illustrates the point I am trying to make.

"I am a young woman of 29, married to a man 10 years older than myself. I now know that I did not love this man when I married him, because I was only 18 at the time and not old enough to understand what love was. I thought I loved him, and so persuaded my parents to permit my marriage, which I have always regretted. I might add that we have four children, and both of us are there very much.

"The way I really learned that I did not know what love was when I married, was that I fell in love with another man. He is also married, and wants to divorce his wife and marry me, but I can't quite bring myself to divorce my husband because it somehow seems unfair to the children. It isn't it unfair to me, too, to have to go on living with a man I don't love, when there is one I do love and who loves me, and with whom I could be happy?

Let me first call this woman's attention to what seems to me a rather significant omission to her letter. This is, that nowhere does she give any suggestion that her husband has not been good to her during their marriage. All she says is that, because she thinks she has now fallen in love with another man, she has come to believe that she never loved the one she married. If she's going to talk about unfairness, what about unfairness to him?

Now it is, of course, entirely possible that she never really loved the man she married, although as she herself, a girl of 16 can hardly understand what love and marriage actually mean. Be that as it may, however, if her husband has been good and kind to her through the years she has been married to him, it seems to me she owes it to him to make an honest effort, before deciding on anything so final as divorce, to add up the good things there must be in her present marriage and see if there are not enough of them to make a solid foundation on which to build home, if she really tries. Apparently, she is now filled with self-pity because she married so young. But if she would put a little of the emotional energy now being wasted on useless regrets about the past into plans and hopes for the future, she might well discover that it is wholly within her power to be happy right where she is.

Then, of course, there are the children. If they are happy in their home, has she a right to break it up for no better reason than to to satisfy her own selfish, and probably ill-considered, desires? In answer to her question about whether or not it would be fair to her children to divorce her husband, I would say it was very unfair indeed, if she has not yet tried with all her heart and mind to build on the good in her marriage.

Finally, she asks if it is not unfair to herself that she should be deprived of the possibility of happiness with the second man. To this, I answer, that the greatest unfairness to herself would be to permit herself to hurry her back on her present responsibilities and let everybody else take their chances while she pursues happiness elsewhere. How could this possibly bring her happiness?

Isn't it fairer, not only to herself but to those others, to take what she has and make the most, and the best, of it she can?

TAKE A LESSON FROM THE CAT

Teachers of physical education give stretching exercises a high rating since they increase the breathing capacity and promote grace of movement. In other words, why not follow the example of the sleek and graceful house cat who never fails to stretch when awakening and whose figure remains lithe and limber all her life?

It is one way of retaining the neat waistline. Whenever you think of it and have a moment to spare, try to pull yourself up and in at the waistline. You can do that many times a day in spare moments. Do it when reaching for an object on a high shelf.

Better still, of course, is to have a regular daily workout, at least five minutes. Make a special time for it, so you won't skip it. Such a routine is good for both the fat and the thin because it is normalizing. It is an excellent means of hanging onto youthful lines.

Stand facing the wall. Lift your hands as high as you can, pulling hard on the arm muscles. Up on your toes. Higher and higher, touching the wall with your finger tips. Then, down on your heels slowly; lower your hands, relax, take a deep breath, exhale, then go with your hands again, up on your toes and repeat.

If fatted calves are your special beauty problem, lie on your back on the floor, hands under your buttocks for support. Bring the legs up slowly, pulling hard on the muscles, lower them slowly, relax, take several deep breaths and repeat.

To slenderize hips and thighs: On the floor again on your back. Lift the left leg, stretching it full length, swing it to the right. Roll over on your hip, touch the floor with your toes at the farthest possible point. The pressure on the hips will crush fat cells, the stretching leg will pull on the thighs. Six times with the left leg, six with the right and continue.

Stretch before going to sleep to force stale air out of your lungs and to send fatige bugs idling. Stretch when you awaken to start the day right.

Stuffing the Beautiful Bird

By Mary Moore

After reading the following letter I wondered if I counted my blessings often enough. It is with the utmost pleasure I sit down at my typewriter on a sunny December afternoon and give you the stuffing recipe for your Christmas turkey. It sort of makes me feel I'm sharing the good will and courage that emanate from Hilda's household.

The second letter is from Grayce. Do you remember the girl who wanted to help getting her own wedding reception ready before last year? This careful little planner intends to have everything just right for Christmas dinner too.

"Dear Mary Moore: I'm writing early . . . so I can "Inwardly digest" the information you send . . . this will be our first holiday away from home . . . my husband, our 2 youngsters and myself . . . our problem is five minutes. Make a special time for it, so you won't skip it. Such a routine is good for both the fat and the thin because it is normalizing. It is an excellent means of hanging onto youthful lines.

Stand facing the wall. Lift your hands as high as you can, pulling hard on the arm muscles. Up on your toes. Higher and higher, touching the wall with your finger tips. Then, down on your heels slowly; lower your hands, relax, take a deep breath, exhale, then go with your hands again, up on your toes and repeat.

If fatted calves are your special beauty problem, lie on your back on the floor, hands under your buttocks for support. Bring the legs up slowly, pulling hard on the muscles, lower them slowly, relax, take several deep breaths and repeat.

To slenderize hips and thighs: On the floor again on your back. Lift the left leg, stretching it full length, swing it to the right. Roll over on your hip, touch the floor with your toes at the farthest possible point. The pressure on the hips will crush fat cells, the stretching leg will pull on the thighs. Six times with the left leg, six with the right and continue.

Stretch before going to sleep to force stale air out of your lungs and to send fatige bugs idling. Stretch when you awaken to start the day right.

I have read that rubbing soft butter on the turkey and covering it with a cloth dipped in melted butter is a good idea. Is butter the best thing? Best wishes, Grayce."

To Hilda I would say an 8-lb. hen turkey would be adequate. She will have turkey leftover. To Grayce I would say do not brush bird with butter; brush it with unsalted fat like lard. If you care to spread over larded bird double cheesecloth dipped in melted lard and wrung out—but last step is not necessary. Roast 8 and 15-lb. birds at 325 deg. Fahr., uncovered, unbasted, no water in pan, 3 hours. (8lbs.), 4 hours (15-lbs.).

STUFFING:

The rule is to allow 1 cup stale crumbs (not bone dry) for each pound of eviscerated bird. Ideal age of bread is two days. Some folks prefer whole wheat bread. For Hilda's 8-lb. bird this stuffing is just right: Chop very fine 1 cup celery stalks and leaves and add 1 finely chopped medium onion, 1-4 cup finely chopped parsley and saute over low heat in 2 or 4 tablespoons butter for 3 minutes or until they soak up butter. Add 1 or 2 teaspoons poultry seasoning or 1 teaspoon each sage and powdered thyme, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper. Pour this over 2 cups fine 2-day-old breadcrumbs and mix in with fork. Use to stuff neck and body cavity of turkey. Neck skin is left long so it may be drawn over dressing and fastened securely to back with skewer, leaving a smooth-chested bird. Skewer body cavity shut.

Grayce should double above quantities for 15-lb. bird. If she uses bread stale enough to roll I think it will be unpleasantly dry.

WHAT NAME TO GIVE TO CHRISTMAS-TIME PARTY?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Your advice, please, concerning invitations to some informal entertaining, we're planning for a late-afternoon at Christmas-time. Actually, I like the words "Open House," but since we've been in this new house of ours barely a year, I fear that "Open House" might be construed to mean a housewarming — with presents. There just must be no hint of this in the invitations as we want to do the giving. Do you think that "Eggnogs" centered on informals (with the place, the date and the hours in the lower corners) would be enough to give the idea of warmth and informality? — D.

I agree with you that, under the circumstances, there might well be some justification for your thinking that some guests might interpret "Open House" as a housewarming party, and so might feel that they should come bearing gifts-for-the-house. How would you like to call your party "At Home"? Or if your party is to be given on the afternoon of New Year's Day, you might call it "New Year's Day Party." I like the simple straightforwardness of this. Today too there is a pleasant inclination to invite to a "Party": for example, "Do come to a Party at our house on" etc." Or, if you wish to feature eggnogs, write "Eggnogs" in the center of an inside page of informals (your name in the centre of the first page, your address in the lower right corner), with the day and date, and the hours, in the lower corners. Or this year you will find in the stores very good-looking and simple cards with Eggnog Party printed on the cover.

Holy Trinity Church Women's Guild Sponsors Fine Bazaar

SHANNONVILLE — The spacious home of Mrs. John Dowdell was opened for the Women's Guild to hold a bazaar and tea Thursday afternoon. Evergreen and red berry sprays adorned the home, while a brilliant array of Christmas lights was in the windows.

RECEIVING GUESTS

Receiving at the door was Mrs. A. Page, while Mrs. S. Fitzgerald and Mrs. J. Dowdell made each guest welcome. Mrs. T. Whittle was cashier. The tea room was busy with those serving delicious refreshments. The little guest tables, with their Christmas cloths and glistening metallic bells were arranged in pleasing proximity.

The tea room hostesses were: Mrs. R. Vesterfelt and Mrs. Roy Fonger. Those who replenished the plates and teapots were: Mrs. Crawford, Mrs. H. Houston and Mrs. A. Kilburn, with their helpers, Mrs. G. Johnston and Mrs. Marion and Miss McFarlane and Mrs. Cox.

Mrs. J. Stewart was in charge of selling bags of popcorn and tickets on a Christmas cake. Holding the lucky ticket was Mrs. E. Stratton. The draw was made by Sandra Reid.

FANCY WORK

Fancy work and apron table was decorated with evergreen and red berry sprays. In charge was Mrs. F. Goodfellow.

Among the displays were potholders, clothespin bags, children's socks, knitted hats, fancy aprons, half aprons and all-over style, linen tablecloths, pyjama bags, girls' pyjamas, lovely pillow cases, chesterfield sets — all were so pretty it was difficult to make a choice.

Home cooking table, candy and vegetables, in charge of Mrs. H. Topping, assisted by Mrs. W. Wilson, had for sale delectable lemon pies, apple, raisin, berry, pumpkin, chocolate cake, tarts, cookies, fruit bars, date and nut loaves, pecan rolls, shortbread, homemake bread and buns, angel cake, cherry topped fruit cake and yum-yums.

ASSORTED CANDIES

At the candy table there was an assortment of creams, fudges,—attractively displayed in pretty little holders.

At the end of the home-cooking table there was butter, eggs, potatoes, carrots, jams, homemade pickles, berries and tomatoes.

Master Paul Goodfellow held the lucky door ticket, a basket of groceries. This draw was made by little Miss Joy Whittle.

A most successful bazaar and tea.

Appreciative thanks are extended to the conveners, and to all who assisted in making it a success.

Youth Is Held On Charge Of Attempted Murder

TORONTO (CP)—A 19-year-old youth was held on a charge of attempted murder Monday night after a storekeeper ran into a street—a knife sticking in his back shouting "That man is a killer."

Police held Thomas Uwe Mica on a charge of attempting to murder Sol Podwinski, 36.

Podwinski told police he was in his clothing store when a youth came in. He said the youth sat down to try on some shoes and a dagger fell from his pocket. He said as he turned around, the youth picked up the dagger, stabbed him in the back and ran from the store. Podwinski chased after him but collapsed on the sidewalk.

Michael Moriarity grabbed the fleeing youth and held him for police. Podwinski was taken to hospital with the knife still in his back and was given a blood transfusion shortly after arrival. His condition was described as critical.

SPURNED, JUMPS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Police reported a young Florida marine, recently returned from Korea, committed suicide by dropping from the 11th-floor window of the Marines Memorial Club here. Homicide inspector Al Nelder identified the victim as Sgt. Albert Crumbly, 20, of Davenport, Fla. A newspaper clipping found in his pocket told of the marriage of a girl with whom he had been corresponding.

Reporter Valiant Warrior for Truth That Makes Men Free Says President

NEW YORK (AP)—The reporter is a "valiant warrior for the truth that makes men free," President Eisenhower said Monday night.

The president said this tribute to reporters during a 30-minute television show climaxing the dedication by the Overseas Press Club of its new building to men who died abroad searching for news.

"We are here tonight to salute the eyes and ears of our free nation—the men and women of our free press," Eisenhower said in a recorded speech for the NBC-TV show "Dateline."

UNVEIL PLAQUES

During day-long ceremonies, former presidents of the organization of foreign-correspondents unveiled four plaques bearing the names of the 52 members who have died in line of duty.

The names begin with Webb Miller of the United Press, who died in London in 1940. They end this year.

"These colleagues died serving with Robert Capa, Life photographer who was killed in Indochina a few years for a free world," reads the legend above the plaques in the third-floor library of the club.

Carl Sandburg, poet and biographer of Abraham Lincoln, delivered the dedication on the television show.

SOUGHT THE UNKNOWN

"In all weathers and on all continents and seas," Sandburg said, "the overseas correspondents sought the controlling factors, ascended and hunted the dark unknown.

"From winding and torturous paths where the known faded into the far unknown they did their best at sending home to press and radio the story of what was happening from day to day.

"The toll of those who took death, wounds, disease, suffering in rain, in cold and heat, in foul prisons—their names have a definite sombre majesty. What some of them did is far past any flowers of tributs or wreaths of verbal salutation. The dust of these vanished men we memorialize tonight can be termed sacred."

KEY TO FREEDOM

The president said in his statement:

"We are here to dedicate a living memorial to those members of the Fourth Estate who have given their lives, in war and in peace, in pursuit of truth—the key to freedom.

"Through many years, I have had good reason to count the press corps as a vital arm of the forces of freedom; in war, I saw its members strive tirelessly, endure hardship, dare battlefield peril that our people might be fully and quickly informed; on every front, they were worthy comrades of our fighting men. Now, as president, I find that each emphasizes anew for me the fairness, the discernment, the dedication of the American reporter; in peace, he is still a valiant warrior for the truth that makes men free. . . ."

Salary Hikes For Teachers Are Approved

TORONTO (CP) — Salary increases which would make Toronto's elementary and secondary school teachers among the best paid in Canada were approved Monday by the board of education's finance committee.

The increases, proposed following a meeting with a committee of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, must be accepted by the teachers and approved by the board of education.

The increases include: a $400 annual increase for all elementary and secondary school teachers; $100 to $700 for principals, vice-principals, inspectors, special subject directors and supervisors.

If the increases are approved the maximum and minimum salaries would be $6,600 and $2,800 respectively.

The finance committee said the increases were necessary because of the shortage of high school teachers, the loss of many teachers to other areas and the difficulty in finding replacements.

Toronto Argonauts Ditch All American Imports Playing On '54 Team

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

THE CHANGING TIMES!

Johnny Mowatt, "blythe spirit" of the Bates senior baseball club, coach extraordinary of a provincial midget baseball club, and idol of the Wellington sports moppets, wore a glum look when he entered this department on Monday morning.

He threw up his hands like Liberace winding up a triumphal march, and moaned, "It's no use, we're out."

It took five minutes of conversational coaching to discover that Johnny was not talking about his favorite perversion, defeated municipal candidate, cricket eleven, or if the city hall staff had been evicted, but the fact that his beloved Wellington Trent Valley Hockey League entry would not operate this season.

The colorful Dukes will be missing from the Valley ice-lanes due mainly to the fact that the cost of hired help is too high. Another reason is that some of the players who were Wellington uniforms the last few years have partied for greener financial pastures at the last minute.

The news that the Dukes would not enter followed a special meeting held Sunday in the village where it was decided to hang up the sponges, despite desperate last-minute efforts by Mowatt and Jack Ogilvy to salvage the sinking ship.

It seems a shame that the sports-conscious village will not ice a team this winter, but in a sense they have themselves to blame. Hockey is big business any more and the sturdy burghers of "Smoke" Reynolds' old hunting grounds learned the lesson the hard way. It takes a lot of effort to dig up nine hundred simoleons during the off season months with which to finance a hockey club. That in a village of 1,000 souls.

And the sooner some of the rest of the clubs realize this, the better it will be for hockey—and the survival of the Trent Valley League.

Wellington's stout villagers for the past two seasons worked unceasingly for twelve months of the year staging various fund-raising events with which to finance the hockey club. This year, with price tags on players upped, the village hockey brass decided to cut the most of the high-priced help loose and depend on local lads. This was found to be more or less impossible, since other teams in the league were as strong, if not stronger than last season. So as Johnny says, "We're out."

It's a far cry from those good old days of some 25 years ago when the village hockey crew wore nondescript uniforms, and paid for their own gear and transportation, to the modern era when alleged players demand and get the cash on the line before they go out to battle for "dear old Wellington."

Yep "Shadow" Reid, "Gaspipet Noble, "Chemical-arm" Parliament, "Flathead" Gibson, "Dutch" Ainsworth, "Beef" MacDonald, "Jakey" Steen, "Greaseball" Harris, Danny Greenfield, and the rest of those puck-scarred warriors will recall these days of practice on wind-swept Lake Ontario or West Lake. They had no heavily-padded gloves in those days; no shoulder or chest upholstery, or knee pads. They wore the catalogues of a well-known department store for shin-pads, and quarter-length shorts for pants.

When the snow lay deep on the highways and Picton or other county teams were clamoring for Wellington blood they hired horses and sleighs, packed in the gals and took off on a victory-seeking safari to Ab Hare's igloo in Picton. (Wonder if the starboard side of the roof still leaks. The boys used to pot pigeons with .22's for summer pastime, and the venerable roof proved a fine sprinkling system during winter thaws.)

On one occasion the faithful Debbins went on a sit-down strike near Lockyer's greenhouse after the sleighs-tongue broke—and the passengers toted their hockey gear into Picton on Shank's mares. There were no complaints. It was the spirit of the times. And all because a hockey-loving gang of village huskies wanted to play their favorite game, with no thought of financial remuneration.

"Them were the days."

And down Picton, and "the county way," the Coles and the Churches, the Myrtles and the Hudgins, the MacDonalds and the Scotts, the Thompsons and the Welshs, the Irvins and the Dalnards will also recall those halcyon days.

And what if an amorous-bent crew of Picton "gallants" did stone hall the village streetlights to pieces when they were cold-shouldered by the village belles? All was forgiven —after the bill was paid.

And a few years later a village "Legion" team won a Belleville "Owl League" championship. They played their home games on an open-air rink—and on one occasion while playing a Belleville team, the game was stopped three times to allow the boys to shovel the snow from the ice surface. If the memory is correct, some 17 pucks were lost that night, when sharpshooters soared them over the fence.

Director Harry Sonshine Says Club Bows to Demands of Fans; Name Players Will Be Secured

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts have such grandiose plans and so many big-name players in mind for the next Big Four Football Union season they have ditched all Americans who were on the 1954 team.

In an unprecedented mass dismissal, Argonauts swept every import from their roster because they think so highly of National Football League men they have on the hook.

Team director Harry Sonshine announced the move at a press conference Monday night. He said the club, mindful of falling gate receipts, had bowed to demands by the fans for a better club and that "none of our present imports will be back next year."

"DRASTIC MOVE"

He added:

"This may seem like a drastic move, but for some years fans have to believe that the Argo imports of last season don't compare to what we intend to have here next season."

It was the latest step in Argonauts' plans to win the Big Four title and the Grey Cup again and regain the confidence of Toronto fans. Argos last won the cup classic in 1950. They failed to make the league playoffs the last two seasons.

Out are such players as quarterback Nobby Wirkowski, formerly of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, who joined Argonauts four years ago, end Al Pfeifer, pass-catching ace from New York Giants and halfback Gene Wilson, the only Argonaut to make the first team in the eastern all-star selections this year.

EYE-RAISER

The firing of Pfeifer was an eye-raiser. He led the Big Four in pass receiving, making 68 catches for 1,142 yards. Six were for touchdowns.

Sonshine said there was no point in asking imports on last season's team to come back for a tryout.

"We'll have a better man in every position next year," he commented. "It stands to reason that if we obtain players who are Canadian International, there is no room for players who are not in their class."

Argonauts stuck close to college talent last season. But not this time. It has been predicted that they will hit a record high in player salaries to get the best.

AFTER NFL STARS

No players had been signed on Monday, but many top stars in the NFL have been approached.

The dropping of the 21-year-old Wirkowski, who led the league in percentage of pass completions with .588, was not unexpected. It had been rumored for weeks.

"In his (Wirkowski's) case, it's a concession to public opinion," Sonshine said. "We felt the club had run too much criticism for not going out and getting better players. It isn't only that Nobby didn't have crowd appeal—we actually felt that we would be hurting the club if we didn't make a move to get a name quarterback for 1955."

NOBBY SURPRISED

Nobby was surprised. He said he hadn't heard of the development until a reporter telephoned him for his reaction.

"They never tell us anything."

Kent Douglas Suspended For Rest of Season

TORONTO (CP)—Kent Douglas, defenceman with Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, was suspended Monday night for the remainder of the season for striking Barrie player Ed McQueen with his stick in a game at Barrie Dec. 3.

An OHA sub-committee reached the decision after hearing evidence from Douglas, referee Andy Bellemer and Canuck coach Jack Stewart.

The committee said it was Douglas's second appearance on the carpet for offences in a game and enforced the suspension "for his own sake as well as other players."

TWO OTHERS

The sub-committee dealt out two other suspensions during the four-hour meeting. They involved a Fort Erie player and an Owen Sound coach.

Bruce McCracken, veteran with Fort Erie of the Niagara District Senior League, was handed a five-game sentence of which he has already sat out three games.

McCracken received a match penalty in a game at Thorold Dec. 3 for hitting Bruce Woodcock of Thorold with his stick.

J. D. McArthur, coach of an Owen Sound Junior B team, was suspended for the next three games for using abusive language and shoving a referee in a game at Owen Sound Dec. 3.

RATTERMAN SIGNS

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns, hinting that quarterback Otto Graham may retire, announced Monday that George Ratterman has signed a 1955 contract. To sign up for another year as a Cleveland quarterback, Ratterman, one-time Montreal Alouette, "passed up an opportunity to become head football coach at Xavier University in his native Cincinnati," the announcement said.

Red Wings Take All Three Games Played Last Week To Move Into Tie for Second

MONTREAL (CP)—Detroit Red Wings, tired of being bridesmaids to Montreal's bride, have started a determined walk up the National Hockey League table while the Canadiens seem intent on divorcing themselves from the top spot.

The Red Wings took all three of their games last week—the only team to pull off the trick—and put two of their men into the top 10 in the scoring parade for the first time in five weeks.

Rightwinger Gordie Howe, who always looked a little out of place far down the list of scorers, collected five points on a goal and four assists to jump to seventh from 14th place in the individual standings, with nine goals, 12 assists and 21 points.

THREE TIMES

Alex Delvecchio, Detroit's leading point-getter for a month now, covered three times that amount once to move from ninth into a two-way tie for fifth place with New York's Don Raleigh. Each have 22 points, Raleigh's being made up of four goals and a pacesetting 18 assists, and Delvecchio's five seven markers and 15 assists.

Canadiens, meanwhile, could only salvage a win and a draw out of four games. The four Montrealers who have been setting the individual pace all year, Bernie Geoffrion, Maurice Richard, Jean Beliveau and Dickie Moore, garnered only four points between them in the week's action.

Detroit's success moved them into a two-way tie for second place with Toronto Maple Leafs, who matched Canadiens' record for the week. They now are four points behind the Montrealers and nine points ahead of Boston.

TWIN WINS

The Bruins and the last-place Chicago Black Hawks each managed one win and one tie and had a draw in their three games while the Hawks had two losses in four meetings.

New York Rangers lost three and tied one to drop in fifth place, four points behind Boston and seven ahead of Chicago.

Montreal's sharpshooters clung to their domination of the individual standings despite the week's poor showing. Geoffrion, with a league-leading 20 goals and 13 assists, was six points up on Richard and Beliveau. The Rocket—still two goals short of 400 in his NHL career—has 14 goals and 13 assists and Beliveau 11 goals and 16 assists. Mosdell claims a 14-10—24 record.

SINGLE ASSISTS

Geoffrion was the only one of the four to score, the others managing single assists each.

Toronto's Harry Lumley stayed out in front of the goal-tending department. He had a goals-against average of only 1.61 a game and Toronto's total—counting the single game tended by Gil Mayer—was 1.50.

Terry Sawchuk of Detroit was next with an average of 1.89 goals a game, but led the field in shutouts with six.

The Red Wings' Ted Lindsay holds the dubious honor of having spent the most time in the penalty box. Montreal is the wickedest team collectively with 381 minutes spent on penalties.

Ottawa Team Likely to Move Into Tampa Area

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—A Kansas City baseball club official talked with baseball-minded civic leaders in the Tampa bay area Monday and said he would have a definite proposition to make today on transferring the Ottawa International League franchise.

Ray Kennedy, personnel director for Kansas City Athletics, said he will talk by telephone with Arnold Johnson, owner of the Athletics, and Parke Carroll, business manager, and tell them the results of Monday's meetings. They will arrive at a proposition to present to the Tampa bay area.

Kennedy talked Monday with Phil O'Hara, Tampa auctioneer who has been working for a year to bring triple-A baseball to this area, with city officials of Clearwater and with a joint St. Petersburg-Tampa baseball committee.

In Tampa, O'Hara said he has formed a "small syndicate" and "we are definitely ready to make Kennedy a cash offer to buy the franchise and operate it in St. Petersburg and Tampa."

NBA Withdraws Recognition Of Sandy Saddler as Champ

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Boxing Association withdrew recognition of Sandy Saddler as world featherweight champion today but the boxer's manager defiantly said he'll defend "when he's ready and that will be February."

Bob Christenberry, chairman of the New York state athletic commission, sat in the middle and said:

"I'll watch this with a great deal of interest. I certainly will take no action before our commission meet- (Friday). I have found the NBA hasn't always been a solid front. I also recall something about titles being won and lost in the ring."

There was no if, whereas or maybe about the NBA's position, announced at its Cleveland convention Sept. 14, and re-stated by Henry Lamar, its executive secretary.

UNANIMOUS VOTE

The brief text said:

"At the National Boxing Association convention in Cleveland, Sept. 14 it was unanimously voted that title recognition from boxer Sandy Saddler."

Lamar also commented:

"We gave Saddler every chance to make a bout. He was discharged from the army and has made no move to defend his title although he has had seven bouts since leaving the army."

GET-TOUGH POLICY

In Providence, R.I., Tony Petronella, NBA president, said this was the beginning of a new get-tough policy with all champions.

"We don't have the power to strip Saddler of his title but we are withdrawing recognition. The NBA is going to be very firm with champions on defending every six months.

"We have nothing personal against Saddler. He's a good fighter. But he's had enough time. We've been lax in recent years."

Petronella said the NBA had planned to declare the winner of a Davis-Basselt fight as the champion but the elimination bout was held "ahead of time." Davis outpointed Basselt at New York Nov. 26.

"Now there is a technicality," said Petronella. "I am taking a poll of the executive committee to see if we can recognize Davis at a special meeting Jan. 14 in New York."

Winter Meeting Of Big Four Set for Jan. 15

MONTREAL (CP)—Roy Robertson, president of the Big Four Football Union, Monday confirmed Jan. 15 as the date for the league's annual winter meeting. The Big Four constitution specifies the third Saturday in January for the meeting.

Among subjects which probably will be discussed is that of a salaried commissioner for the league. The idea is reported to have been under discussion by Big Four executives for several months because of the expansion of the business and financial structure.

Team representatives will also choose two directors during the 1955 executive to represent the union at the annual meeting of the Canadian Rugby Union in March.

Griffith Began Film Project In 1914 That Built New Industry

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In July, 1914, David Wark Griffith began a project that was to help build a new industry.

After six weeks of rehearsal, Griffith began the filming of a movie that was to become famous as "The Birth of a Nation." His film was to mark the independence of the movie industry from the stage and all other forms of entertainment.

The story was dear to Griffith's heart. He had been born into a poor Kentucky family in 1880. His father had instilled in David the pride of the south, as well as some of its prejudices.

When he began writing and directing movies in 1907, Griffith soon became the spark of the Biograph Company, grinding out dozens of films a year. He kept refining his methods until he turned out classics like "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Enoch Arden."

He yearned for something greater. A writer told him about the Thomas Dixon novel, "The Clansman." Another company had started making a film from it, but had given it up.

Griffith enthused over the story, and bought the rights, along with another Dixon book, "The Leopard's Spots." He added to these story his own remembrances of life in the post-war South.

The picture was far bigger than any other film then made, and money was a constant problem.

Griffith hocked everything he owned. But it still wasn't enough. He was forced to sell rights to the film to theatre men in certain states.

The movie was finally finished after nine weeks of shooting. The cost: $110,000. That was five times what any previous film had cost, but it would scarcely pay for the cheapest quickie today.

The final product was two hours and 45 minutes, which was assailed as "frightful waste and audacious monstrosity," which shows how far Griffith was ahead of his time.

It was the first movie to sell reserved seats, to charge $2 a head, to have scheduled performances, to offer programs, to feature an orchestral overture and its own musical score.

The film was still called "The Clansman" when it opened Feb. 8, 1915, in Los Angeles. Donald Crisp who acted in the film declares that a visiting Englishwoman remarked that the film depicted "the birth of a nation." At any rate, it opened in New York March 3, 1915, as "The Birth of a Nation."

Stoneham Predicts N.Y. Giants Will Repeat in National League

By ED CORRIGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Horace Stoneham, president of the New York Giants and looking every inch like the head man of the world baseball champions, calmly predicted today that his club would win the National League pennant again.

And, to the horror of all Brooklyn, he couldn't see the Dodgers as a major threat.

"Barring bad breaks through injuries, I think we can make it in a row," said Stoneham. "The rest of the league has to catch us. We are the champions."

NO DEALS

So confident is he that the Giants can win it again that he has no deals in mind.

"We are not going to do any trading. Everything for a deal has for the sake of a deal." He said. "We're not shutting the door on anybody who care to suggest a trade, of course."

He came like bombshell on the Dodgers.

"I look for the strongest opposition from Milwaukee. I figure the Braves to finish ahead of Brooklyn. They has been a lot of talk about the Dodgers making a deal, but nothing has happened so far. Unless they come up with a big deal, I can't see them as a big threat."

Handlers of Langlois Worried About Home Town Officiating

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Handlers of middleweight challenger Pierre Langlois of France said today they are still worried about home town officiating in the title fight with champion Carl (Bobo) Olson Wednesday night.

George Kanter, the Frenchman's representative in America, said he hopes the California athletic commission will name at least one official—a judge or the referee—from the Los Angeles area to work the nationally televised scrap.

Balding Bobo, the 26-year-old champ from San Francisco, remained pretty much in seclusion as fight time drew near. Langlois, 29, took a comparatively brisk final workout Monday. He boxed two fast rounds with a sparring mate then sharped his timing in a drill.

Looking on from ringside was the last man who tried unsuccessfully to lift the title from Olson, lanky Castellani of Cleveland. Castellani thinks the 15-round engagement will be close, with Olson the winner. He described Langlois, whom he outpointed in one fight and lost to, in another last year, as rough, "cute" at close and usually busy.

"But Olson hits harder—in the body, in the head. He's a real good fighter," Castellani said.

Orono Orphans Win Protest Over Port Hope

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association has upheld a protest by Orono Orphans of the Lakeshore Intermediate A hockey League that Port Hope Redmen were using two ineligible players when Redmen defeated them 6-5 Dec. 4.

The OHA's sub-committee decided Monday night that Bill Peters and Bob Holden, members of the now-defunct Senior B Oshawa Truckmen last season, violated the residence rule. Their playing certificates were cancelled.

Further action was reserved until the association's full executive meets here Friday.

Orphans were awarded the game.

Champion Wins Split Decision Over Brian Kelly

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian lightweight champion Richard (Kid) Howard Monday night won a split decision over Brian Kelly of Niagara Falls, Ont., in a savage 10-round battle.

No title was at stake in the event, feature contest of the five-bout card. Both fighters weighed in at 139½.

45TH WIN

It was the champion's 45th victory. He has won seven of his fights on knockouts. The third round was Howard deliver a series of short rights that sent Kelly reeling about the ring. He went down for the eight count and was groggy for the rest of the round.

Howard and Leo Rorred Kelly in the seventh round, but there was no count. The Ontario scrapper came back in the eighth and ninth but it was not enough to earn him the judges' favor.

Two minutes' silence was observed before the main event in memory of Johnny Greco, popular Montreal fighter and former Canadian welterweight champion who died Sunday in a car crash.

In the supporting bouts, Dexter Connors (134), of Halifax won by a unanimous decision over Benny Uhl (136½) of St. Catharines, Ont., in an eight-rounder.

"Saadia" Unusual and Dramatic Adventure-Romance in Technicolor

One of the year's most unusual and dramatic stories is unfolded on the Belle Theatre screen in "Saadia," MGM's stirring Technicolor picture filmed on location in French Morocco, with Cornel Wilde, Mel Ferrer and Rita Gam in starring roles.

With its settings the palaces and courtyards, the market places and the bazaars, the intrigue and the pageantry which make Morocco one of the most fascinating and mysterious places on earth, "Saadia" tells an absorbing story of civilization in which the modern and medieval are curiously juxtaposed and superb strength rules rulers struggle to free their people from ancient beliefs in sorcery and superstition.

Although "Saadia" is first and foremost a moving love story held against an exotic background, it is also a drama of adventure and action. Spectacle is one of the consenseful scenes as that in which Saadia (Miss Gam) gives a fateful and incisive performance in the role of the doctor who puts up a valiant fight against native ignorance and superstition, and Cornel Wilde gives warmth and sympathy to the part of the modern young potentate who wields the power of life or death over his subjects, but who uses his power wisely.

TOM AND JERRY CARTOON

A Tom and Jerry color cartoon, one of the finest ever created "Black Fury", presenting 35 minutes of Technicolor thrills, and the newsreel, precede the feature attraction.

Milt Schmidt Likely to Play Against Detroit

BOSTON (AP) — The injury-riddled Boston Bruins may lose a coach and regain a badly-needed centre for their National Hockey League game with Detroit Red Wings Thursday.

Veteran Milt Schmidt, who suffered a knee injury Nov. 28 against Detroit, skated through a light practice session Monday and reported the knee feels "about 65 per cent right."

While sidelined with the injury, Schmidt coached the Bruins for seven games, during which time Boston crept by New York Rangers into fourth place in the NHL standing.

Return to action of the 36-year-old Schmidt would bring manager-coach Lynn Patrick back to the bench and help fill out the Bruins' centre squad, depleted by injuries to Gus Bodnar and Fleming Mackell.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — A tricky day—with some friendly aspects and others that warn against combinations of unfairness in handling finances, investing, buying, selling. Be patient, thoughtful.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — Your Venus, mildly friendly, encourages personal attainment if you manage the day's affairs wisely and with an eye to future results. Sound, wholesome, useful activities and interests favored.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — On smart management and astute co-operation with the right forces will depend your accomplishments today. Not entirely favorable for all matters, but substantial, essential affairs are honored.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Delicate and artistic matters, professions requiring finesse and skill are boosted by Venus rays. Home, daily duties, difficult work, industrial travel honored by Saturn.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Be conscientious, thorough and patient if you wish to achieve a full program today. The influences are neither wholly favorable nor too restricting. Show your skill for management.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Everything may not turn out as you'd like or as you plan, but you can, nevertheless, progress in familiar duties, work or other activities for which you have skill, training.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Heed advice to Taurus today. The more deftly and patiently you handle your affairs, the better and quicker your achievement. Have faith, cheer.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Mars' position now stresses self-control, kindly consideration of others, including those you don't particularly have to help or like. Broadest your perspective if doing more than required.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Your Jupiter and other planets today stress a need for even temper, clear judgment and your smartest manners if you would win friendly co-operation from all. We often need each other's help.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — You are among the privileged few this day with very benefic influences from your natal planet, Saturn. You may have to assist others in less favorable situations. Good for you!

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Be warn against restlessness, urge you to concentrate on essentials and keep in tune with what's expected of you. Not an easy day but it can be a progressive one.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Do not be careless in matters pertaining to the sea, shipping, handling liquids, oil, chemicals. You are usually sensible and follow sane rules. Today will be okay if you do.

YOU BORN TODAY are outspoken, straightforward, innately aboveboard. You may be regarded as too serious or lacking in humor by those who are not so frank, maybe not as sincere as you are. But not matter what others think, do your conscientious best. There is always time for a word of appreciation, a "thank you." Show your true appreciative self. You have a world of talent, capability and a big capacity for achievement. Use well these God-given gifts and you will be fully happy and have lasting success.

Little Benny's Notebook

Ma was making out her list of people she expects to get Christmas cards from, and she said to pop, William, whatever you decide to get me for Christmas I want it to be something on the sensible side instead of in the luxury bracket.

Yes my dear, pop said, and ma said, I've been thinking it over seriously, and I think I'll up my mind I want something useful, I mean something to brighten the daily drudgery and make the hum drum of weekly existents more pleasant, if you know what I mean

I get the general drift of it, pop said, and ma said, Not that I have anything special in mind.

That gives me a good chance to exercise my imagination, pop said. Well now, I have a cupple of ideas. For example, I understand the new washing machines are a bewilful as juke boxes. I might even find one with an automatic musical accompaniment of some appropriate tune, like By the Bewtiful Sea, or Bobbing Up and Down, he said.

That's a nice thought, William, but after all our own machine is still quite serviceable when it's in good order, ma said. Did you say you had another idea? she said, and pop said, Well, I've noticed how embarrassing it is for you to ask me to leave you the car so often. So I thought a sensible present might be a little old second hand car, such as a last year's model, for your marketing and other unavoidable little trips like bridge games, he said.

Why William, what a perfect suggestion, I think you're wonderful, ma said.

Which he is.

Call for National Farm Unity On Prairies Sounded

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP)—A call for national farm unity in Canada was sounded across the Prairies during the last few weeks.

The question is, was it heard loud and clear or did it fall on deaf ears?

Leading the trumpet section was Albert Cormack, president of the Ontario Farmers' Union, which sounded the same note at farm union meetings in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

He called on J. L. Phelps and Jake Gauthier, retiring presidents of the Saskatchewan and Manitoba Farmers' Unions respectively, to form a team in the organization of a national farm union.

ANOTHER POSSIBLE

The name of Henry Young, president of the Farmers Union of Alberta has also been suggested as a third partner.

"We have a definite connection between east and west. Problems are similar. Growth we know nothing until we had a farmers' union," Mr. Cormack said.

Mr. Cormack said requests for a union in Nova Scotia have been received and with the proposed formation of a union in British Columbia next year, there would be five provinces from which to draw support of a national body.

However, W. J. Tripp, E. Mr. Schulz said formation of such an organization "is a little remote at present."

THREE YEARS AGO

The seed of a national organization was sown three years ago with the formation of the Interprovincial Farm Union Council, now headed by Mr. Phelps. It embraces B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The MFU recently joined with the SFU in strengthening the council's expansion plans by agreeing that each union contribute its share in proportion to membership, not to exceed $5,000 per membership unit. The FUA voted a straight $5,000.

A REFUSAL

However, the 28,000 - member FUA refused to endorse an SFU-spawned plan to march on Ottawa on a no-crop guaranteed parity prices for agricultural produce.

The MFU convention agreed to join in the march, much against the wishes of convention chairman Neil Simpson who said such a drive would only turn the country against the farmers.

In refusing to march Alberta convention delegates said they felt they could rely on the strength of their own membership to bargain in the ordinary fashion.

ROAD IS FAMILY JINX

ABERDEEN, Ohio (AP)—U. S. Highway 52, which winds through many Ohio river towns, has been known through the years as the site of an Aberdeen police chief, his father, and his father's father. The police chief, Oscar Hafer, 41, died Friday after he was hit by a truck on the same area where his father and grandfather were killed in accidents on the same road.

How to KEEP FIT after 50
In the old days Mary resented the signal to slow down—then Mary got a terrific "early decline" scare—and got more real. It's still good advice. But these days you can face fifty with many interesting and active years ahead—active, that is, if you can keep backache, and the "tired-out" feeling, due to kidney and bladder disorders, that often develops around that age. For more than 60 years Dodd's Kidney Pills have been helping many sad victims of dull backache, leg pains, and bladder irregularities. Why not try Dodd's Kidney Pills? They help you, too. You can depend on Dodd's. 54

Thinks Prisoner Invented Story About Murder

QUEBEC (CP) — A spokesman for the Quebec attorney-general's department says he believes an Ontario prisoner "invented" a story that he knew something about a Quebec murder, unsolved since 1950.

A report of statements made by the prisoner to two Quebec police officers who interviewed him in Sudbury, still is being studied by the department.

Clifford Gallichan, 28, of Quebec, told Ontario provincial police last month he knew something about the fatal shooting four years ago of Quebec taxi driver Roland Faucher, 33.

SERVING SENTENCE

He is serving an 18-month sentence at Burwash prison farm south of Sudbury on a morals charge.

A Quebec newspaper Nov. 30 quoted the Quebec police who questioned Gallichan as saying his statements were "false and without foundation."

The spokesman for the attorney-general's department said he believes the man's statements were invented. One theory on that he wanted to be transferred to Quebec jail.

Faucher was shot in the back of the head and robbed of $37 Oct. 12, 1950, after he drove a passenger to nearby island of Orleans. He died in hospital two days later.

Convict Newsman Of Sedition At Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—A 40-year-old newspaper man, convicted of sedition, was sentenced was held without bond today while his counsel prepared a motion for a new trial.

A criminal court jury returned its verdict against Carl Braden Monday night and fixed his punishment at 15 years imprisonment and a fine of $5,000.

The Bradens and three other persons were indicted separately on charges of attempting to create ill-feeling between Negroes and whites because of racial discrimination. There has been no indication which of the other defendants will be called next on the sedition charge.

Braden also was discharged as a copreader by the Louisville Courier-Journal, where he had been on leave with pay since his indictment.

TO FILE THURSDAY

Braden's counsel said the motion for a new trial and another for arrest of judgment will be filed Thursday with Judge L. R. Curtis. He must rule on them before bond can be fixed for Braden.

If all appeals fail and Braden is unable to pay all or part of the $5,000 fine, he must serve it out at the rate of $2 a day. His 15-year term would not begin until the full amount of the fine is satisfied.

Britain Achieves Highest Level Of Prosperity Since War's End

Written for The Canadian Press
By GEORGE ABRAHAMSON

LONDON (CP) — Britain in 1954 achieved its highest level of prosperity since the Second World War.

Primary aims were fulfilled. Production expanded and the end of government controls was hastened. Exports were stimulated and capital investment encouraged.

The basis for a further expansion of the economy was laid by the six-per-cent increase in industrial production, following the increase of five per cent in 1953.

BUYING SELECTIVE

Strikes caused more annoyance than lasting harm. Larger retail sales reflected growing prosperity, especially in durable goods, but at the same time consumer spending grew more selective. Accordingly, the surplus available for saving was more satisfactory than in previous years.

Decontrol continued. Food rationing ended in July with meat becoming an unrestricted commodity. Licensing of residential building ended in November, while a number of commodities — sulphur, tungsten and vegetable oils among them—were restored to private trade.

Exchanges reopened included the Liverpool cotton, London grain futures and London gold—on a restricted basis. The ministries of food and materials disappeared as separate units.

Financially, improvement was officially acknowledged when the government cut the bank rate by one-half per cent to its present rate of three per cent. Savings by small income earners increased for the first time in years and industrial firms placed more new capital issues on the market. The chief source of risk capital remained reinvested profits.

BANKER CREDIT

Bank loans increased, while restrictions on consumer credit eased. Minor concessions in the foreign currency field provided larger amounts for travellers and students abroad.

But the government's attitude to convertibility of the pound sterling remained profoundly cautious.

The foreign payments position developed satisfactorily. In the first half of the year, Britain had earned a current account surplus of £154,000,000, more than for the whole of 1953. By October, the gold and dollar reserves had increased by £149,000,000 to £1,048,000,000.

In the first nine months of the year exports were up by 4.4 per cent to a value of £2,309,000,000, imports were down by two per cent to £2,739,000,000.

STOCK MARKET STRONG

The stock market boomed on news of increased production, hopes of tax relief in an election year budget, optimistic dispatches from the U.S. and company profit and dividend records.

By the end of November, government fixed-interest securities showed gains of six per cent, while ordinary industrial shares, on the average, were up nearly 40 per cent.

Wages rose slightly in line with the cost of living.

Outlook for 1955: confidence tempered with fears of labor shortages in the most active industries, while the main concern still is directed toward paying the country's way abroad.

MADOC

District Teachers Hold Meeting, Discuss Methods

MADOC. — On Thursday evening Madoc District teachers of grades 7-8-9-10, held a meeting in the Madoc High School, G. W. Nelson, inspector of Elementary Schools, and A. L. Lackie, inspector of Secondary Schools, were present.

Dr. G. R. Anderson, principal of Madoc Public school, was chairman and Ross W. Fleming, of Madoc High School, acted as secretary. Dr. Anderson welcomed the new teachers and a special welcome to Mr. Nelson and Mr. Lackie.

After all teachers introduced themselves and gave the name of the school where they were teaching, Dr. Anderson gave a general outline of the meeting. He outlined the work of the planning committee and the work and plans they had made for the meeting. He also outlined the three topics for discussion for the evening.

Mr. Lackie addressed the group before they broke up for discussion groups. He stated the teaching profession should act as a profession in that it should have control over itself and the work it does. It should not be content to just carry out orders laid down by the department as this would put the members in the positions of clerks. With this in mind, teachers, as members of this profession, should set goals and not forget these main goals in dealing with details. They can promise children two things in life, that they will be living in a new and different world and that they will be under more stress and strain than ever before. How then are they going to arrange the curriculum to make pupils, thinkers, and to meet these new situations?

The members were then divided into three groups under Miss Lamoine West, Mr. C. A. Howes, and Mrs. Elaine Leaper. At 10 o'clock the groups re-convened and gave reports. Mrs. O'Riordan gave group one report on "Basic Factors" in determining the goals of education, which contribute in the realization of fundamental needs of human life.

Mrs. Hilda Gray gave the report or group two on "Practices in Connection with the Curriculum" (particular attention to grades 9 to 10 inclusive).

Ross Fleming reported for group three, on "The Philosophy of the Intermediate School Curriculum".

Plans were made for another meeting to be held early in the new year, and it was suggested that the committee secure a speaker for the meeting.

Dr. Anderson adjourned the meeting and a social hour was spent with refreshments being served, being provided by the rural teachers.

ST. JOHN'S S.S. PARTY

On Wednesday evening St. John's Anglican Church choir was host to the church Sunday school scholars and teachers in the parish hall. A bounteous supper was served to over 50 scholars. The tables were gaily decorated for the festive season and Christmas favors were in order.

Having done justice to the supper the scholars were entertained with games and carol singing and before leaving for their homes each was presented with a gift and fruit.

Pearson, Campney Arrive In Paris For NATO Meeting

Dulles Due in Paris Today for Talks on German Arms

By JOSEPH E. DYNAN

PARIS (AP) — State Secretary Dulles of the United States was due in Paris today for talks on speeding German rearmament and a NATO council debate on a controversial plan to use atomic weapons in European defence.

External Affairs Minister Pearson and Defence Minister Campney, representing Canada, also arrived to attend the North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting.

Accompanied by other high American officials, Dulles left Washington by air Tuesday. In a statement emphasizing the defensive character of the NATO alliance, he said the free world would "neither be intimidated nor lulled into a false sense of security" by the Communists.

Dulles was due to confer with French Premier Pierre Mendes-France shortly after landing, with the two leaders expected to discuss ways of speeding ratification of the Paris agreements freeing and rearming West Germany, and of getting that rearmament into high gear once ratification is achieved.

TWO-DAY MEET

They will be joined by British Foreign Secretary Eden for further talks Thursday, on the eve of Friday's opening of the NATO council's annual review session. Foreign, finance and defence ministers of the NATO countries also participate in the two-day council meeting.

The atomic issue came to the fore as a result of a feeling in Europe that the United States and circles that atomic weapons of any sort should not be used without the prior approval of all NATO members' governments.

The "new look" plan, approved in principle by the NATO ministers last year, provided for the use of atomic weapons to counterbalance the Communist world's heavy predominance in manpower. Under the plan, new and spectacular weapons were to replace vast numbers of infantry.

IN AGREEMENT

A plan submitted by Western chiefs of staff, sitting as NATO's military committee, is believed to recommend that the new atomic weapons in case of an attack from the East be left to the supreme allied commander in Europe. That post now is filled by Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther of the U.S.

Official French sources said Tuesday, however, that the general peace generalities are in general agreement that the use of atomic weapons, even small tactical ones, should not be left to the discretion of the military. They contend that the government policy decision, since it involves the possible risks of retaliation, must be left to the civilians.

The military argument is that a sudden Communist aggression would have to be countered quickly and fully if it were to be effective. A commander could not wait for 14 governments to meet, debate and decide.

If atomic weapons are vetoed, the military men say, the West will have to increase greatly the strength of its forces.

WILL HONOR NIXON

BRANTFORD (CP) — Harry C. Nixon, dean of the Ontario legislature will be honored at a testimonial dinner here Jan. 26.

The Brant Liberal Association today announced plans for the dinner, in recognition of the former Liberal premier's 35 years' service as member of the legislature for Brant.

WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: An intense storm centred early this morning off the New England coast is continuing northeastward. Associated light snow has developed in the wake of this storm over most of Ontario until this evening. Northerly winds following the storm are bringing cold air behind it. Cold weather is expected to be cold and windy in southern Ontario. Temperatures will fall 15 to 20 degrees in the south, but in the north where winds are expected to become strong light tonight the thermometer will drop to near zero.

Adenauer Opens Debate at Bonn on Paris Pacts

Is Facing Tough Fight To Win Ratification

By GEORGE MOULTWOOD

BONN (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer opened debate today in his parliament's Lower House on ratification of the Paris treaties to rearm West Germany. Launching the toughest fight of his political life, the 78-year-old West German leader told the Bundestag that rearmament would mean the fateful negotiations for German unification possible.

To Socialist accusations that his government is lagging in promoting German reunification, the chancellor said the agreements would "open" after the whole of Germany the opportunity to win by peaceful means an honorable peace in the free world community.

The Bundestag's vote after the two-day debate will be only the first of three the Lower House must give to clear the pacts. But the initial poll is awaited as a telling test of strength for Adenauer and his policy to arm 500,000 West Germans within the north Atlantic alliance.

MORE TESTS AHEAD

The decisive second and third readings of the treaties will be held in late January. Then the Bundesrat, the Upper House, must also approve the agreements.

Despite outspoken opposition from the Socialists and from many supporters of his own four-party government coalition, Adenauer has expressed complete confidence that West German ratification will be completed in January and that the 14 NATO powers will give their final assent by the end of February.

Adenauer pleaded for quick ratification of the four Paris accords, which he said could lead to a new epoch in European history in which Germany and her neighbors would be united in lasting union.

Completion of the Paris treaties would give West Germany a "secure basis from which to conduct the policy of reunification with confidence."

No Banquet Permits For Office Parties

TORONTO (CP) — The liquor control board of Ontario will not issue banquet permits for office Christmas parties, a board spokesman said today.

C. E. Woodrow, solicitor for the LCBO and the liquor licence board, said the Christmas holiday season policy, also put in effect last year, was designed to curb the decline of functions of such nature.

Mr. Woodrow said the LCBO and Toronto police have joined forces to stop drinking at downtown offices.

New Heart Surgery Puts Sarnia Girl of Eight Back on Health Road

SARNIA, Ont. (CP)—A Detroit heart specialist credited early years of medical science to discover a remedy for the heart ailment that afflicted pretty Pearl Lockington.

Now, for the first time, Marie, 8, has a heart that functions right.

Until about a month ago the blue-eyed daughter of Dr. L. W. Lockington, a family veterinarian was destined for an early death because of a rare malformation that has called infandibular stenosis. Her heart had to beat four times faster than usual to give normal circulation to the lungs.

Blockage at the right side of the heart meant an additional burden was placed on the other and would in time result in serious damage to the left side.

Dr. Lockington knew the heart condition and had been a patient of Dr. F. D. Dodrill since she was three years old. At each annual visit he told her parents that medical science had not yet perfected surgery to cure the ailment.

But, about six months ago Dr. Dodrill told them there was a new technique known as an "appotheramia" which could effect a cure or greatly relieve her of the fatal chances of recovery were 50-50.

When Dr. Dodrill detected a big increase in the vital organ, Marie's parents decided to approve the operation before irreparable damage was done.

After six hours in the operating room at Detroit's Harper Hospital Dr. Dodrill emerged and told Dr. Lockington a daughter the operation on their daughter was a success.

Marie now is a normal, healthy child and she's been promised she can return to school after the new year.

"The operation is not in the miracle category," says Dr. Dodrill. "We are performing a great many of them although Marie's is the first in Sarnia."

Canada's National Production Down Half Billion This Year

OTTAWA (CP) — The value of Canada's national production will drop this year by about $500,000,000 from last year's record $21,350,000,000, the bureau of statistics estimated today.

It said the two-per-cent decline will be due entirely to lower crop output. It will be the first drop in nine years for gross national product, yardstick for measuring growth of the economy.

The bureau based its estimate on economic developments in the first nine months of 1954, including the Prairie crop failure.

In the third quarter it found Canada's gross national production was running at a rate of $23,800,000,000 annually, unchanged from the rate in the previous two quarters.

Manufacturing output also dropped in the first nine months of 1954, though over-all non-farm production appeared to be maintained after being hit by a small recession in the fall and winter of 1953.

The gross national product has been rising to new heights all through the post-war years. The last decline was in 1945 when it dropped by about $100,000,000.

Nehru Sends Note to Chou About 11 American Airmen

NEW DELHI (AP)—An Indian government spokesman confirmed today that Prime Minister Nehru has sent a message to Red China's Premier Chou En-lai concerning the 11 American fliers held by the Communist ping regime has imprisoned on spy charges.

The spokesman declined to give any details of the message or its handling except to say it was sent "several days ago" through the Indian embassy in the Chinese capital.

The statement was issued when the spokesman was asked about reports in that Nehru had suggested Chou might find it useful to agree to United Nations secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold's called request for a meeting in Peiping

Pope Pius Again on Upgrade Despite Internal Bleeding

By WEBB McKINLEY

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican press office today said Pope Pius is again on the upgrade. Though internal bleeding is reported to have complicated his gastric ailment, his condition was described as improving.

Quoting a dispatch set up for publication late today by the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano, the press office stated:

"The Holy Father has overcome his stationary situation and his condition now has started to improve."

Technicians hurriedly assembled new equipment in the pontiff's Vatican apartment in preparation for an examination of his stomach Thursday.

A source close to the Pope said the internal bleeding, believed caused by an ulcer, had brought on the Pope's increased weakness during the last three days. Theory."

pontiff also is reported suffering from anaemia as a result of the loss of blood.

(Reuters news agency, however, quoted other sources as saying that the Pope was suffering from an internal haemorrhage, and saying the pontiff "has resumed his gradual recovery." Reuters quoted a report that "a few drops of blood" were discovered in analysis of gastric juices from the pontiff's stomach. Such an ulcer, it is a perfectly normal thing in an operation of this kind.")

American Share of St. Lawrence Power For Sale

Aluminum Co. Will Buy Third of Power Output

OGDENSBURG, N.Y. (CP)—The American share of the St. Lawrence river's vast hydro-electric potential was placed on sale today to all bidders by the New York state power authority.

Robert Moses, chairman of the state board, indicated in a speech here that he expects much of the United States share of the output of the world's second largest power potential to remain in the developing northern part of the country. The Ontario hydro-electric power commission will take a third of Canadian power output in the international project which accompanies the St. Lawrence seaway development.

Moses was to make the address at a luncheon of the St. Lawrence Valley Association of Chambers of Commerce, but bad weather prevented him flying from New York City, instead, a recording of the speech he made some days ago was played at the luncheon. In it he announced:

1. A $230,000,000 flood line is being dissolved "impediately" to help finance the U.S. side of the joint American-Canadian project.

WELCOME BIDS

2. A tentative agreement has been reached under which the Aluminum Company of America will receive about one-third "or all the energy we generate on our side of the river during the early years of operation."

3. Conferences are proceeding with "all responsible interested agencies" for the sale of remaining power. "To put it simply," Moses said, "this authority now welcomes proposals from all those who wish to buy its product."

4. Public construction is proceeding on schedule, with first delivery of power due in four years.

5. Agreement has been reached with the Ontario hydro commission to build two power dams at a new location and delay building a road on it until Ogdensburg interchange bridge authority bonds are largely retired.

Moses said that as a matter of policy the authority is "particularly interested in getting power new industries to the St. Lawrence valley.

"A great part" of the power "in the end no doubt will remain here," he said, but "we can't wait until the valley gets built up. We must sell our power as it is needed to pay out our indebtedness."

Chased By Man Armed With Rope And Two Sticks

'You Won't Run Far' He Says, But Then He Slips, Falls

TORONTO (CP) — A terrified 20-year-old mother says she got a look Tuesday night at a man police say may be Toronto's strangler.

Mrs. Hilda Bastelak told police she was chased home by a dark, swarthy man armed with two sticks and a piece of rope.

Mrs. Bastelak, mother of four children, had just alighted from a streetcar in the west-central section of the city while on her way home from her job as a restaurant waitress.

The woman, a Ukrainian immigrant, told police the man tried to throw the rope around her neck.

She said that, as he started to chase her, he shouted:

"You won't run very far from me."

SLIPPED AND FELL

She told police the man steadily gained ground on her as she ran down the middle of the roadway but he slipped and fell before he got within striking distance. She darted through the front door of her home and called police.

"I kept remembering that rope," she said later. "It was horrible."

Detectives said the weapon, formed by tying a stick to each end of a piece of rope, was similar to one used by a 1944 strangler assassin group known as the Dosolis.

Mrs. Bastelak described the man as about 40 years of age, five feet seven inches tall, with black thinning on top. She said he was of stocky build, swarthy complexion and dirty, shabby appearance. Police said he is believed of European extraction.

The woman said he wore dark clothes, no hat or top coat, and had a shirt open at the neck.

AREA CORDONED OFF

Police cordoned off a large area around the section where Mrs. Bastelak said she was followed. Every man found at large in the district was asked to account for his movements.

Mrs. Bastelak and her husband, who now works as an electrician, came to Canada from the Ukraine five years ago.

For nearly two months police have been searching for the person blamed for the strangling of two women on west-end streets. A total of $7,000 in reward money has been offered for information leading to the conviction of the killer.

Recently other women have reported attacks by a man in dark or darkened streets in the west end.

Last night's incident was reported to the Bruton road and College street police.

Police said that, as a result of the recent attacks, "very few" women are on west-central streets at night.

One corner grocer told a detective his business is down a lot this week from normal because women are afraid to come to the store doors from their homes for supplies.

Auto Insurance Rates Expected To Remain Stable

TORONTO (CP) — A survey of automobile insurance companies shows 1955 passenger car rates will be almost unchanged from those of the last two years.

Small reductions in some areas will be offset by increases in other sections of the province, the survey showed.

Most substantial increases will be in northern Ontario where a relatively high accident record will cause rates to go up.

Decreases of between three and five per cent will be given in both rural and urban areas of the southern part of the province.

Commercial rates will drop about 10 per cent.

A survey of insurance companies in Quebec Tuesday showed an average decrease of 11 per cent in rates for passenger cars. Biggest reduction will be in rural areas where a 25-per-cent decrease is expected.

Toronto Island Residents Angry

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Island residents Tuesday night flocked to a protest meeting and vowed they are mad about the Toronto transit commission's decision to drop winter ferry rates.

The meeting called for continuation of the present 10-cent ferry rate and decided to present its case to board of control today.

$200 Damage By Fire To Hillcrest Home

An over-heated stove is believed responsible for a blaze which caused approximately $200 damage to the home of Mrs. Dorcas Hearns, at Hillcrest, Tuesday evening.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance stated the over-heated stove set fire to the end of the building and the flames ate through the ceiling into the attic of the one-storey house.

Tuesday afternoon firemen were called to the rear of the Dominion store on Victoria avenue, for what turned out to be a false alarm. A passerby noticed flames coming from the cocoa at the lock company plant and turned in the alarm.

No Serious Motor Mishaps Despite Condition of Roads

Although city police reported a rash of minor accidents, there were no serious motor mishaps in Belleville or district as the result of last night's freezing rain, which left streets and the highways coated with a slippery coating of ice.

Most serious mishap occurred at the Church Street railway crossing where a local cleaners truck, driven by Walter Taylor, Emily Street, was struck by a C.P.R. locomotive. The driver escaped with a shaking up.

Minor fender dents were reported from various parts of the city but damage in most instances was $20 or less.

Provincial police reported a comparatively quiet night despite the slippery highway conditions. A Direct Wireless Transport skidded off the pavement on the Old Belleville road, east of Marysville and went into the ditch. The driver was not hurt.

City sanding equipment was out early with the night crews starting sanding operations about seven o'clock. They worked throughout the night and then the day gang took to do the work all over again as two inches of snow fell this morning and covered up the ice. Sanding was also necessary during the night was 29 degrees above.

First casualty reported today as a result of the treacherous footing in the city was Mrs. Nora Rompen, 33, Grove Street.

Mrs. Rompen sustained a compound fracture of the right ankle when she slipped on the greasy surface of the verandah outside her home around midnight. She was taken to Belleville General Hospital by ambulance and sent into the emergency ward where it was learned she is suffering from a fractured ankle.

Wm. Bailey Gets Third Term As Canadian Legion President

William Bailey was returned to office as president of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Legion for the third consecutive term.

Mr. Bailey was returned to office at the annual meeting of Branch 99 of the Canadian Legion, at the Legion Hall, Coleman Street.

The 1955 executive is composed of P. Blair, W. Slater, F. Daniels, P. Burling, C. Marriott and L. Furney.

The installation of the new officers and the executive will take place at the first meeting of the year, in January of next year. The executive also will elect its secretary at the meeting. Present secretary is Lionel Nicholson. Scrutineers were Bill Hazzard and Jim Coleman.

A new member was admitted to the branch last night, Mrs. Ethel Sills, initiation was performed by Lloyd Monteith, who also was chairman for the meeting.

It was reported to the meeting that the membership of Branch 99 for 1954 now stands at 136.

Napanee Man Third Arrested On Theft Charge

A third man, Maurice Markle, 24, of Napanee, is being held by police in connection with a stolen car from Alberta, which was recovered Monday night abandoned on the highway near Deseronto.

Earlier two Western Canada men, George Kerabatsch, 22, of McLennan, Alberta, and James Ukrainetz, 24, with Kerabatsch, Markle, were arrested on vagrancy charges in connection with the stolen vehicle.

Markle was arrested by Provincial Police Corporal Harry Barker and Constable Kenneth Williamson, on a warrant issued by Chief of Police Stan McTaggart of Deseronto. He will appear in magistrate's court with Kerabatsch and Ukrainetz at Deseronto on Friday afternoon.

It is understood by local police that Edmonton police are on their way to Belleville to return the men to stand trial at Edmonton.

Christmas Party Enjoyed By Coca-Cola Staff

A jolly, round Santa Claus, carrying much more avoirdupois than usual, literally "crashed" the colorful Christmas party tendered the staff and families of the Coca-Cola plant by the management on Saturday afternoon.

Happy faces of children reflected the glow of a brilliantly illuminated Christmas tree as they stood admiringly at a prettily wrapped gift.

Suddenly with a booming "Ho-Ho" old St. Nick himself crashed through the paper brick chimney to a cheering welcome. Resident young and old alike and the party was on.

It was the third annual Christmas entertainment held in the plant and each year the guest plan and upwards of 80 staff members and families agreed it was the best yet.

Plant manager Aubrey Coe extended the official welcome to the staff and children. Then the party enjoyed nothing picture films called the "big moment" arrived.

The kiddies thronged around St. Nick as he began to dish out the gifts to the children and their parents. Later the kiddies were presented with cokes, candies, fruit and other Yuletide delicacies.

And Santa Claus came to Manager and Mrs. Coe through the medium of the staff.

Members of the staff will eat lunch for Christmas, Mr. Coe announced that each member will receive a traditional Christmas gift of the Coca-Cola Company.

Locomotive Hits Truck, Driver Only Shaken Up

Walter Taylor, 63 Emily St., driver of a Clean-Rite Cleaners truck, escaped with a shaking injury early Tuesday evening when his vehicle was struck by a Canadian Pacific Railways locomotive at the south Church Street intersection. Damage to the truck $300 resulted to the panel delivery truck when the locomotive struck the left side behind the door.

Taylor was driving south on Church Street and apparently failed to see the train approaching from the east. The vehicle had nearly cleared the tracks when the locomotive struck the side of the truck near the rear, spun it around and left it facing the other way at the side of the adjoining track.

Railway officials said the freight was travelling at only about seven or eight miles per hour at the time of accident. Engineer on the train was Jack Carpenter and the conductor was Roy Richardson, both of Smith's Falls.

Police Constable Thomas Schreiber investigated.

DIES AT CEREMONY

Resolve to Drive With Courtesy During Holiday

"Christmas is a time of rejoicing and happiness, but it can also be a time of heartbreak and tragedy. For more people are killed in traffic accidents during the Christmas season than at any other time of the year," says Chief of Police Walter Probert of Belleville.

"The fact comes as no surprise to police officers because we also see a time of heavy traffic and likely to be icy, and it takes from three to 11 times as far to stop a car on snow or ice as on dry pavement. In December, dawn comes late and dusk comes early. The shortest days of the year are those just before Christmas. City business and shopping streets are most crowded during the week before Christmas, with the greatest throngs of all coming at dusk and after dark. When it is pouring rain, or raining, the danger is greatly increased. Pedestrians, their arms full of packages, their minds on the activities of the season, take grave chances as they dash across streets.

"Cars and courtesy on the part of both drivers and pedestrians will decrease the hazard of the season. Here are a few suggestions: Drive carefully and courteously, avoiding accidents at this time," says Chief Probert.

"First, for the driver:

"Get the feel of the road by trying your brakes early during your out, to test the slipperiness of the road surface.

"Reduce your speed to road and weather conditions so that you can stop in an emergency.

"You cannot avoid what you cannot see, so keep the windscreen clear.

"Use chains on snow or ice. They are a definite necessity on such as 40 per cent to 50 per cent.

"Apply brakes gently to stop. Sudden jamming can cause dangerous skids.

"Pedestrians too have a greater responsibility during the Christmas season, not only for themselves but to motor traffic. Here are a few hints for those on foot.

"Cross only at intersections, and don't forget to look both ways!

"Be extra careful when you leave are parked cars which obstruct your vision or the motorists'.

"Don't always depend on the motorist to see you at night! It's safer to wait a minute than take a chance.

"Last year too many children were killed or injured in automobile accidents during the Christmas season.

"Don't let death rob you of your holiday. Remember: these precautions will help. Protect yourself and others. Resolve to drive with courtesy, walk with care."

Police Blotter

Both city and provincial police reported a quiet night today with only a few minor occurrences noted. Provincial police reported that a pick-up truck had been stolen from Bloomfield and that in the city Carman McMillan, R.R. 1, Stirling, complained of his station wagon coat being stolen Tuesday afternoon while he was at the Library, Rexall and Air Force club rooms on Front street.

In city magistrate's court Tuesday, Murdock Taylor, Dundas street, was given suspended sentence when he appeared on a charge of wife beating.

Kiwanis Speaker Proposes Overall Planning Committee

Co-operation of all Bay-of-Quinte municipalities on an "overall" planning organization to plot expansion of the area, yesterday was advocated by Col. Roscoe Vandervaeter, secretary-treasurer of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

In a speech to the weekly luncheon meeting of the Belleville-Kiwanis Club Col. Vandervaeter said: "We have passed the horse and buggy days" in transportation.

"I think it is high time we were past the horse and buggy days in our way of thinking."

He urged the breaking of "our municipal boundaries and work on one body in the bay of Quinte area" if that area is to progress.

He noted reports that Canada has been passing through a recession, but said "what we are suffering from at present is a period of readjustment" and advised we should "hold our heads high."

"No one will ever estimate the force of resistance developed throughout a nation by this one decision who took that path of duty," he said.

The speaker was introduced by Bill Phillips and the thanks of the club were expressed by Farquhar O'Neill.

Upwards of 120 members of the club and their guests attended and friends attended the dinner and dance. The Y gymnasium was decorated in Christmas motifs with red, white and green streamers, colored bells and glass balls, stars and a large Christmas tree. Tables were colorfully decorated with miniature Christmas trees and colored servielettes.

During the program Paul Cleary proposed the toast to the ladies. Mrs. Farquhar O'Neill replied.

Others taking part were solo-ist Bill Gander, song leader Bill Norris and accompanist Ralph Hurley.

The Comrade Club ladies of the Tabernacle United Church catered for the turkey dinner.

Dancing was to the music of Hugo Digging' orchestra.

EXECUTIVE DIES

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Wise Loft, 63, former vice-president of Loft Candy Co., died Tuesday in hospital. Mr. Loft, born at St. Marys, Ont., joined Wood, Gundy and Co. in 1913 and served in their New York office from 1918 to 1927. He was made a director in 1930 and the following year a vice-president. He retired in 1953.

Man Product of All Women In His Life Foremen Told

"I've been impressed by women of every type, shape and size since I began to notice them," said Stuart Richardson, assistant to the vice-president of industrial and public relations of the Northern Electric company, in his address to foremen's "Never Underestimate the Power of a Woman" delivered to the annual Ladies' Night dinner of the Quinte District Foremen's Club, held Tuesday in the Y.M.C.A.

"I am no expert on the subject of women," the speaker continued. "So far as I know, they cannot be described, however, as a patient and constant observer."

"I am convinced that man is the product of all the women in his life—his mother, Sunday school teacher, girl friend, wife and girl friend (regular, wife, daughters and granddaughters. A reasonably happy and successful man is the product of the influence of women," he said.

Mr. Richardson, who, at 17, left his home in Nottingham, England, to join the newly welcomed Roman, Norse, Viking and Norman leaders, said: "Women may be described, however, as a patient and constant observer."

"I am convinced that man is the product of all the women in his life—his mother, Sunday school teacher, girl friend, wife and girl friend (regular, wife, daughters and granddaughters. A reasonably happy and successful man is the product of the influence of women," he said.

DEBT TO TEACHER

"Miss Long had made a deep and lasting impression a couple of times," he said. "As I recalled her she had taught me to write and realized that I was earning my living by writing and I thought of how much she had done for me. I sought some way to thank her," he said.

On his return to Canada this teacher sent him a card on which was written a poem. Quite a wonderland of clouds and trees and birds, and nothing half so wonderful as words."

"She was still teaching me," said Mr. Richardson. "Never underestimate the power of a woman."

The speaker recalled that his bachelor uncle, Jake, when questioned by his nephew, declared a bachelor, replied, "Marriage is too expensive. Always remember wherever you go in this world, if you have a woman with you, a penny bun costs tuppence.

Uncle Jake's advice went for nought, however, when he square dance in Montreal, "which I had resolved beforehand I would not enjoy." when Mr. Richardson met the girl he later married.

"I enjoyed that dance," said the speaker, "proving again that one should never underestimate the power of a woman."

Mr. Richardson spoke briefly of the cause of the Queen Mother during the last war when she stayed with the King during the bombing of London.

Gate Collapses, Sub Washed From Drydock

CHATHAM, England (AP)—The British submarine Talent was launched sideways into the river Medway here today as a massive floodgate collapsed at the naval dockyard.

A number of men were aboard the 1,090 ton submarine as she was lifted from her blocks and swept into the river.

The admiralty said there "is a good chance" the crew escaped without casualty.

An admiralty spokesman said the caisson, or floodgate holding back thousands of tons of water outside the Talent's drydock, suddenly gave way, sending the drydock and floating the submarine away.

The Talent, a general service patrol submarine which normally carries a crew of 59, ran aground on the mud at the west side of the river.

Damage to the ship was not immediately determined.

Say St. Laurent Will Submit New Tax Plan Soon

MONTREAL (CP)—The Gazette says present information indicates Prime Minister St. Laurent will submit tax proposals to Quebec "before the end of the year—probably before Christmas."

The Ottawa-datelined newspage story says: "Information here is that Prime Minister St. Laurent will make a hard-and-fast proposal for settlement of the problem to Premier Duplessis" before the year is out.

Mr. St. Laurent and Finance Minister Harris were said to be giving careful study to the latest private plan, and the federal cabinet was expected to discuss the matter this week.

One of the plans—and perhaps more than one—would ultimately be selected for despatch to the Quebec government for consideration.

The formal submission of proposals follows a tentative agreement reached in a meeting here between Mr. St. Laurent and Mr. Duplessis this fall.

Negro Hunted For Attack On Housewife

HALIFAX (CP) — Detectives hunted this seaport today for a six-foot, 200-pound Negro who attacked a pregnant housewife in her apartment and fled after she stabbed him in the stomach.

Mrs. Robert Munroe told police the man forced his way into her midtown apartment about noon Tuesday. She said they struggled until she was able to break away.

The woman said she grabbed a kitchen knife and stabbed her attacker as he made another lunge for her. The blade entered his stomach and he turned and staggered out of the apartment.

Mr. Munroe had left for work shortly before his wife's assailant appeared.

Board Raises Salary Schedules Of City High School Teachers

Increased maximums for high school teachers and increased increments for teachers with more than five years' teaching experience in the city, were granted by members of the Bay of Quinte High School District Board at their final meeting of the year on Tuesday evening.

Salary maximums for regular staff teachers will be increased from the present $5,200 to $6,000 per year and maximums for teachers with special degrees were upped to $6,200 and for department heads to $6,400.

At the same time high school teachers with more than five years teaching experience in the city will have increments increased from the present $200 to $300 per year until they reach their maximums.

NO COST TO BOARD

Board members pointed out that the increased maximums will cost the board nothing for another two years. The increase in increment from $200 to $300 for teachers with more than five years teaching experience with the board will cost about $5,500 next year. No "across-the-board" salary increases were involved.

Both the increased maximums and the increased increments had been requested by the local teachers.

Board members felt the moves were justified in view of the higher maximums being paid teachers in other centres. Keeping maximums in line was felt the only way to keep teachers at Belleville.

LIVING BONUS RAISED SLIGHTLY

Local high school teachers will receive a cost of living bonus of $240 per year for those with married status and $166 for teachers with single status. This is a slight increase over the bonus paid this year.

A special committee of J. J. Trudeau, James Barber, Roy Sills and Harold Seldon was appointed to investigate the caretaking requirements at both the Quinte Secondary School and the Collegiate and report to the board in January.

The purchasing committee for the Quinte Secondary School has now completed its job with final purchases approved last night by the board. Purchase of cafeteria equipment at $4,500; staff room furnishings at $1,100 and draperies and curtains for the entire school at $4,900 were approved.

The new Quinte school will have its official opening possibly in February, board members have decided. A special committee of the 1955 chairman and vice-chairman with Mrs. Mordeu and Miss Josephine Tickell were named a special committee to arrange for the opening ceremonies. Ontario Premier Leslie Frost will be invited to officially open the school.

Building of a suitable garage to house a tractor loaned to the Collegiate for used by the motor mechanics class was authorized. The garage will be built at the north end of the Collegiate.

Purchase of electronic kits for the electrical shop, was also authorized.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

The resignation of board member Enos David who was elected as alderman at the recent municipal elections, was accepted by the board. A letter will go out to Mr. David expressing the appreciation of the board for his four years' service on the Bay of Quinte High School board and on the local Board of Education.

At the close of the year's business Board Chairman George Wishart expressed his appreciation to members of the board for their co-operation and interest during the year.

In turn board member, Harold Seldon, expressed the thanks of the board to Mr. Wishart for the leadership given.

The inaugural meeting of the 1955 board will be held on January 11th, when the new chairman and committees will be named.

Pickets Block Office Workers At Ford Company

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Pickets lines of the striking Ford of Canada workers spread suddenly this morning to the entrances of the former Gotfredson plant where 1,200 Ford office employees were barred from their jobs.

About 40 pickets turned back the office workers, who have been occupying space in the plant since mid-October when the Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited closed its own offices shortly after Local 200 members went out on strike here.

No violence was reported at Gotfredson and no office workers attempted to break through the picket lines.

It was the first time in the nine-week-old strike that office workers have been blocked from their jobs by the strikers.

Office workers, members of Local 240, (UAW-CIO) are not out on strike with the three UAW locals representing Ford plant workers at Windsor, Oakville and Etobicoke.

The action this morning follows breakdown 48 hours ago of talks conducted by Ontario Labor Minister Charles Daley, who attempted unsuccessfully to get company and union representatives to negotiate a strike settlement.

Nootka Returns To Active Service

HALIFAX (CP)—The destroyer Nootka returned to active service today and gave the Canadian Navy its biggest peacetime east-coast striking force.

The Nootka becomes the sixth destroyer and 30th warship to take up station here.

Lt. - Comdr. M. Chadwick boarded his command shortly before noon while rain pelted the big naval ammunition depot. Then the naval ensign broke from the commissioning staff and Rear-Admiral Roger Bidwell, Atlantic coast flag officer, stepped aboard for an official visit.

The storm cancelled elaborate plans that called for a colorful naval guard of honor and a band.

BELLEVILLE BURSTING OUT ALL OVER

There will be no Dior look for Belleville the beautiful!

Not that Belleville can boast a Marilyn Monroe figure either. The truth is that Belleville is busting out all over —and spring still four months away!

Corsets and diets are both out. Belleville is rather proud of the corporation of the corporation—and plans to expand it some more.

Meanwhile, however, until somebody decides in just what direction the spread should spread, Belleville is just bulging out into the surrounding townships — a development which many of the city's admirers find most attractive.

The city has been fortunate in having neighbors who have not just strung along with her growth by permitting unsightly and expensive string developments.

Take the College Hill district for example, lying immediately to the north of the city in Thurlow township. Township Clerk Earl Dafoe says that in recent years 120 new homes have been erected annually in the township —and 75 per cent of those have been constructed in the College Hill area.

The stranger to Belleville might have difficulty finding it. Unless one keeps a watchful look for signs it is impossible to discover where Belleville ends and Thurlow begins.

College Hill has new streets, door-to-door mail delivery by rural letter carrier, a sub post office, a new separate school, a modern public school recently enlarged, sewers and sidewalks.

This is just one of Belleville's rapidly expanding suburbs. So, when you see those official figures showing Belleville's present population to be 20,723, you can take them with a grain of salt.

The way things, though, the official figure was 19,981. To accommodate the additional 742 residents who have found homes within the city limits has meant erecting new houses wherever a vacant lot was available. In the first eleven months of this year permits were issued for 165 new dwelling units, compared with 110 such units started during the whole of 1953.

This building activity, of course, has done more than merely provide homes for Belleville's expanding population. Home construction is one of the best stimulants for trade. Not only does the work of construction itself provide jobs for laborers and craftsmen and a market for materials, but rare is the owner of a new home who does not give tangible expression to the pride of possession by the purchase of some new furnishings.

TRAIN DOGS TO BE SAVAGE

"London Calling," an interesting magazine published by the British Broadcasting Corporation, contains a report of an address by Hardiman Scott.

Mr. Scott "tells how the Royal Army Veterinary Corps, at its Melton Mowbray depot in Leicestershire, trains all kinds of dogs from Alsatians to bloodhounds for duty as guards or trackers with the British Army."

These dogs are taught to attack men.

This is sad.

This is not a new use for the dog, but it is not a use of which dog lovers can approve.

It recalls stories of the manner in which the Nazis taught dogs to attack the prisoners in concentration camps.

This was a wicked use of an animal, a depraved exploitation of the dog's willingness to obey, his eagerness to please his master.

The dog which is taught to attack a man cannot be expected to differentiate between good men and evil men —into the former man and woman, child and child.

Insofar as the use of dogs trained to be savage is a necessity it is a great pity. However, if dogs are used to track down criminals or spies then the need for outlawing any species which some may feel that such use had to be made of man's greatest animal friend.

CHEAP INSURANCE

The Canadian Government will give away an additional million dollars next year.

It has decided to increase its Colombo plan aid to $26,400,000.

That extra million may seem like a lot—but it would not do more than feed an army division for a few months.

Canada's contribution to the Colombo plan and similar schemes in effort to make to eliminate one of the basic causes of revolution and war—hunger.

That additional million, all of that $26,400,000 Canada will give away next year, is cheap insurance.

The only question is—are we buying enough of it?

SO LONG TO WAIT

As a weather-wise reporter,
From the rise to set-of sun,
I would say the next quarter
Now that winter has begun.
If, as I, you're plumly staling
Time is much too slow a wing.
Ask the children who are waiting
For what Santa Claus may bring.

If you think, as every grown up,
That the days go rushing on
And regretfully you own up
That you don't know where
Have gone,
Ask a child. Unhesitating,
He will tell you, you are wrong.

When for Santa Claus you're waiting,
Every day and night are long.

Like an hour seems every minute.
Like a week seems every day.
With the Christmas spirit in it
Time goes dragging on its way.

Vain with children small debating,
Though it may seem fast to some,
Time is endless when you're waiting
For old Santa Claus to come.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 15, 1934.

The members of the Argyll Chapter of the I.O.D.E. have been busy this season with their philanthropic program in connection with which they have undertaken the care of four deserving families. A collection of clothing was made and the response was most grateful to the kind friends who contributed. Christmas baskets containing food, toys and other articles are now being prepared for the four families under their care. Donations of $23 have been made by the Victoria Order of Nurses and the Grenfell Mission.

Prices for turkeys varied at Ontario points today, but the majority of bidders were said to be 25 cents to 25 cents per pound. Here are some of the prices paid in cents; Brantford 20 cents to 23 cents; London 20 cents to 25 cents; Peterborough 20 cents; Hamilton 20 cents to 25 cents; Toronto cents to 24 cents; Owen Sound 13 cents to 17 cents; Belleville $1.75 to $2.50 each, average price 20 cents per pound.

Miss Doris Empson was home from Toronto to spend the week-end.

Want Women Engineers

(Washington Post)

The shortage of engineers may help settle the question as to how exclusively the slide rule is a man's tool. It has long been assumed that girls can't learn "math," and haven't the mechanical aptitudes to become capable engineers. However, the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor challenges that view. In its recent survey, "Employment Opportunities for Women in Professional Engineering," it advises girls to aspire to become full-fledged professional engineers, pointing out that most civilian engineering jobs require no more physical exertion that wielding the compass and slide rule.

How much success women will meet when they seek jobs on the professional level will probably depend on how badly they are needed. The chief reason why Soviet women became so active in medical, technological and mechanical fields was their country's desperate need for doctors and technicians.

Today about 1.2 percent of employed engineers (both professional and aides) are women,

New Art Form

(By S. M. BARRATT in the Edmonton Journal)

Recently, in that great republic to the south, $2,000 were awarded as first prize in the Contemporary American Painting Exhibition at Chicago. The winning subject was called "Collage" and was composed of swatches of white oil-cloth pasted sloppily together with paste cement.

Surely this unusual and exciting piece of information will encourage all of us to express our less than-great talent in this comparatively new art form, previously imported, but now apparently in full flower on this side of the Atlantic. Only three things are required—a glue brush, a large flat surface and a complete lack of artistic ability. Any objects from real life can be assembled together for the judges' approval. For example, six withered cabbage leaves, an old, disused fish net, a chicken bone, a packet of hair grips and some broken glass would make up a magnificently abstract piece entitle as "Nustaces de Cabbage."

Moreover, it is not necessary to enter this field, can be assured of rave notices in advance and large prices later on. The more sophisticated critics will perhaps describe your work as "a manifestation of unique wit" or heterogeneous ideas linked by violence together." But I believe I have already expressed it. You will then be entitled to grow hair — I regret to say — to dye it some hideous shade of purple so that others may point you out.

The intrusion of Collage, Montage, Frottage, Sprugage and Garbage into our artistic purview has already been taken ignoble painters as Leonardo da Vinci, Botticelli, Rembrandt and Turner. In the Victorian garret and the genius that produced Frankenstein's monster it means the end of the model and the payment of expensive rentals and unexpected and unsold paintings. It means a complete re-thinking of our artistic life — the pictorial art and it may even mean the end of painting as such.

Some thirty years ago the surrealists gave our apparently out-dated conceptions, and any remains of taste which we may have had, a good kick in the plants by releasing from its box the gemlit of the unconscious which for centuries man had thought it best to hide up, but, which was now to be given as it seemed, to interpret what was seen in order that the artist could paint the distorted impressions.

In this fantastic domain, a telephone, a strawberry shortcake, a bishop's mitre, a conch shell and the keyhole of a bathroom cabinet have apparently only a remote affinity that so apology on the part of the artist is thought necessary when they appear together on this canvas. Likewise in the related field of sculpture, the reputation of the notion of "similarity to the model" is all too obvious. It is more than probable that the half-reclining female figure, or Shakespearean type, must show its exaggerated limbs and curves the creator's respect for the biological history of the stone from which it is carved.

However, now that real money is being paid for artistic rubbish we foresee great security for students in reappraising art. The great masters are, of course, still to be considered at all, and the lesser masters are to be rejected for a simple portrait of a fish pasted in paste. No longer may the beginner be allowed to contemplate Van Gogh's cypress trees or his "Bridge at Arles" and sense the beauty of Provencal landscape. Gone are Tahiti and Gaugin. Gone are the Monets and the Impressionists and the Sisleys with their quiet commentaries on the Paris suburbs and the Pissarro with his grandfather's day.

Gone, too, are the bitterly realistic studies by Toulouse Lautrec of French low life. Degas is gone and the ballet girls with him. Gone, all gone; the better and deeper and more valuable records of man are replaced by the newer, the shallower and the nonsensical. And that probably records a fact in keeping with the other inverted values of the period in which we live, and possibly, very soon, it will become an offence against society to have any taste for anything but the perverted, the obvious, the mediocre and the orthodox.

Moles Live In 'Labors'

(Christian Science Monitor)

A dispatch from London tells of a naturalist who is studying the underground activities of a "society of moles" by following the movements of radioactive bracelets on their tails.

This is interesting, and we can hardly wait to read about the private lives of the furry little delinquents who so persistently refuse to join in our efforts to achieve that smooth and velvety lawn. But—forgive us, please—the superficial agency which fathered this dispatch know better than to speak of "packs of moles."

One can't be too careful about such things. The persistent media have spoken correctly of a "pack" of ptarmigan. But moles, each one of them, are other beasts and birds.

The properly initiated would know offhand that a dozen or so geese waddling along are a "gaggle"; that lions gather only in "prides"; and that smaller cats on the prowl constitute a "clowder" they sound that way, too).

Those moles over there in the pasture are in a "barren" (we've heard them irreverently mentioned as in "fucks"). The fox in his fable no doubt led a "skulk" of his brethren; rabbits are "herds" bears formed a "sloth," and Little Red Riding Hood surely encountered the biggest gathering of wolf in the "rout."

As for moles? They live in "companies" or, if one prefers the older and more descriptive term, in "labors."

Didn't the naturalist, or the correspondent, or the great newsagency know that? We have for the past half hour, and are right pleased with ourselves.

Pessimistic Investor

(The Prisied Word)

During a recent market flurry in the shares of uranium mines, one broker telephoned his customers to recommend XYZ Mines as a promising speculation. It was, he explained, a gamble, but news from the property was good and with the way mines in this district were being developed, there was a good chance for a quick profit.

The lady, a gambler of long but not too fortunate experience, politely gave him a buying order in these terms: "Well, buy me 1,000 shares at a dollar, and if ever I get back up there again, sell it."

whereas in 1910 there was only one woman engineer in 10,000, Aptitude tests given to girls registering about 25 men come through satisfactorily for seven women who do. But certainly more women who have engineering degrees could train for this field than do. Moreover, necessity develops hidden skills. Only a few years ago it was generally assumed that only a man could fix a faucet or change a fuse. Now many a wife has become the handyman about the house.

Domesticated Women Are Rare?

(Windsor. Star)

Until rather recently the common assumption was all the women were domesticated. As girls they were brought up in the domestic atmosphere which fitted them to do all the household duties. They then married and carried on the same and more important domestic duties. It was a natural development, like keeping with womanly functions.

It brings us up with something of a jolt, therefore, to read in an advertisement in an English newspaper that a Swiss bride was interested in German and French. But added to these attributes was the information that she is "not domesticated."

The wording of this advertisement implied that "domestication" now it a rare virtues; that a girl who has been given a liberal education will be eagerly sought. And perhaps there is some truth in it.

Gone are the days when a girl stepped biliously from the classroom to the atonement of her father's home into that of her husband's home. In most industries particularly on this continent, there now is an interval when the girl is free to earn her own living for a few years preliminary to marriage.

She probably was never as "domesticated" in her girlhood as girls now were, and the interval time at school than most girls once did. Thus, when she does take up the must become "domesticated" or, by hard experience, take something of a refresher course be'ore she is completely domesticated. And how many.

Take a little trip out in the country some day, between the first of September and the last of November. You many find a farmer who not only grows wheat but will even sell you a peck or a bushel or a bag of it without betraying astonishment at your intention to eat the stuff.

In the pamphlet Wheat to Eat, among numerous tried and satisfactory recipes for preparing plain wheat in various dishes or treats for the table, there is the report of a New Jersey retired farmer who said his family usually ate their own wheat for breakfast, sometimes for supper, toasted a bit before grinding, to give it a nutty flavor. In his farming days he recalled, it was a custom to trade his wheat, but as a retired person residing in the city he finds a bushel, if shrettled up and fumbergated in the latest fashion, is quite about $40.

For the benefit of anyone who has the gumption to procure a few pints of plain wheat and use it in the everyday family diet, I point out once again that wheat as it comes from the thresher is not only more appetizing than any refined wheat product but it is the best food source of the vitamin of the B-complex in which the ordinary American diet is so often deficient.

And may I remind you further that in my opinion an optimal daily intake of vitamin B complex is the best heart tonic child or adult with weak heart can take.

Culinary use of wheat, entire, cracked, coarsely ground or fresh-ground to flour every day or at least twice a week, in place of refined wheat products, many breakfast foods, so-called, and in place of refined white flour in a prepared-by-the-recipe convention or cure of Yankee stomach, peptic ulcer, chronic constipation and the cure or the rangement known to many victims as mucous "colitis".

NINE DOLLARS A BUSHEL

I have managed to procure a grinding mill but I find that the few stores that have plain wheat for retail sale in this area have a price tag on it of 15c per pound. That is equivalent to $9 a bushel. Y if wheat is such a rare, precious commodity, how can a poor man afford to return to the staff of life? (re W.W.)

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Among the happiest of Christmas gifts are photographs. If you are much loved, or good looking, or very pretty, nothing you can give can match a good warm artistic photo portrait of yourself, or your family, the prettiest member, with her two babies, has thought of the suggestion. But we have been going through the difficult business of sorting out the good from the bad, the best ones for final processing.

This is where newspaper photographers come in handy. Even newspaper offices each day arrive anybody from the public with more pictures than the paper can use that day. They come from press agencies, syndicates and services. They come from the staff photographers employed by the papers the newspapers employ for coverage of local events.

From this plethora of pictures, the editors have to choose the few they believe the readers will most appreciate. It is tough enough to have to sort over the pile that comes from the press and agencies. But it is tougher when the staff cameraman comes home to you in from his darkroom, maybe an hour' before press time, with twenty pictures he has taken of some local and bot news story. He wants to know, of all, it is the best trick for sorting proofs of your own photographs.

Well, we have the whole batch on the table, they immediately pick out and throw aside the ones they want least. Resolutely, an editor fights back the impulse to try and help the best one right off. One by one, he chucks out the ones he considers the worst of the lot, though he may see the one he knows is the best right in front of him. And by rejecting until he has narrowed the choice down to three or four, that is, of course, the best one sticks out like a sore thumb. If he wants only one picture, he can reject what was a layout, of three or four, he has got it made.

In the realm of choice, there is an almost ungovernable instinct in human nature to go first for the best. By far the easiest way to choose a picture from a photograph or a curtain fabric or a hat, up to a man, is to start at the end of the row and reject what you don't want. Thus you arrive at the best with ease and precision.

SUNNY INTERLUDES

There is one thing that has us all by the throat, and that is the weather! All we can do is take it as it comes, or like it without complaint. There are always sunny interludes. Let us do the most and enjoy the most when these interludes arrive. It is amazing how quickly the memory of a rainy day leaves us, even the yesterdays.

If we are overcome with gloom when the weather seems all against us, the sunny interlude will seem like a gift from Heaven, as it actually is! Even the cheerful poet Longfellow wrote so much of his poems, "Some days must be dark and dreary." Marvelous progress has been made by advertising in the study of moving air currents, and we can expect further progress to be made in the years to come.

Returning from my summer island retreat in Nova Scotia this September, we were caught in the terms of "Hazel," and had to seek the best retreat for the night, which was done, but the next morning those angry clouds and clawing winds had disappeared and a sunny interlude took their place.

It doesn't pay to look too unhappily on life at any time, for the sunny interludes will more than compensation enough for all our disappointments and fears. We must learn to appreciate life from its elementary stages, neglecting not the blessings and cures to us whether the day be happy or unhappy.

How good it makes us feel that we have been granted a will to master any emergency in life that appears. No one, after the most famous or acclaimed, can boast of happiness all the time. There are rainy days, discouraging ones, when we feel that we have been robbed of sunshine, but the sunny interlude appears, and all's right with the world again!

BEST WISHES FOR A REAL LIFE

A certain parent who has to be away from home a great deal received a letter lately from his little six-year-old. One of these letters that he prizes most highly reads: "Dear Daddy—I love you. I hope you live all your life."

That is the gentle way of wishing his daddy a long and happy life. But without knowing it, he is saying to his daddy that he hopes he will not die on his little boy's account. Of all the dead people walking around the streets there are no tragedies, only sad ones. Some people die intellectually atter leaving school or college. They give up reading altogether and live a life of thrilling fiction or mystery or a controversial article in a magazine. They are not living really. Every time they confront a crisis they collapse, and so they are dead, thinking only of themselves. There is a vast crowd which takes no thought, and 50,000 in this country today try to get satisfaction out of dope. An endless round of pleasure holds others in bondage.

These people think they are living their lives. They are not. These people are dead on their feet.

"Dear Daddy," wrote the youngster, "I love you. I hope you live all your life."

Peiping Radio Sharply Assails British Minister

LONDON (AP)—Peiping radio today broadcast an accident attack on State Minister Anthony Nutting for saying a Chinese Communist invasion of Formosa would involve Britain.

It was the second denunciation of the 34-year-old British diplomat by Peiping in the last two days. Presumably these broadcasts mark an important propaganda shift by the Chinese Communists, who for some time have refrained from criticizing British policy in an apparent effort to drive a wedge between Britain and the United States.

The attacks referred to a remark Nutting made during a television broadcast in New York Sunday. Today's blast from Peiping said the Nutting statement "can only be interpreted as a reflection of the present shameful foreign policy of the British government" and added:

"People like Nutting energetically encourage the United States in preparing for a new war."

CAUSES STIR

Nutting's remark caused a stir in Britain. What se did, according to some diplomatic observers, was to make clear a facet of British foreign policy that the foreign office itself would have preferred to have kept obscure.

Nutting, head of the British delegation to the United Nations, was in answer to a question on the television broadcast.

"A Chinese Communist attack on Formosa is an attack upon a member of the United Nations and would no doubt call for collective action by the United Nations in which we would, of course, be involved as a member of the UN."

The foreign office mildly spanked Nutting for his statement, implying that he had overstepped established British policy.

Sixteen rank-and-file Labor members in the House of Commons now have signed a motion dissenting from Nutting's remark. Foreign Secretary Eden will make a statement in Parliament Monday in which he is expected to back up his subordinate.

Thrill-Slayers Escape Chair, Get Life Terms

NEW YORK (AP)—Two Brooklyn youths have been convicted of first-degree murder in the "thrill" slaying of a 34-year-old factory hand, but beat the electric chair.

An all-male jury late Tuesday recommended that Jack Koslow, 18, and Melvin Mittman, 21, spend the rest of their lives in jail.

They were found guilty of torturing Willard Mentzer in Brooklyn park last Aug. 17, then drowning him in the East river.

Originally four youths had been indicted in the death of Mentzer. One of them, Robert Trachtenberg, 15, previously was granted a separate trial and testified for the prosecution.

JUST A PRANK

A first-degree murder charge against Jerome Lieberman, 17, was dismissed by the court last week. He still faces a manslaughter charge.

Koslow was depicted by the prosecution as leader of the gang which roamed Brooklyn parks at night, beating and torturing innocent victims "for thrill."

Counsel for Koslow and Mittman argued that Mentzer's death was not murder, but resulted from a mischevous prank."

Both defence counsel said they will appeal the verdict.

Costly 'Smoke'

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Loss was estimated at $50,000 Tuesday night when flames destroyed a barn used to store tobacco on a farm near Springfield in South Dorchester township.

Paul Germuska, Jr., owner of the property, said he had 83,000 pounds of tobacco, his entire 1954 crop valued at more than $60,000, in the barn.

Malahide and Springfield firemen were unable to save the building.

STIRLING

Many Attend Fine Santa Claus Parade

STIRLING — The village of Stirling was the scene Friday for large crowd of parents and children from Rawdon and Sidney township and from the surrounding district, for the Santa Claus parade which took place on Saturday afternoon.

The parade formed at the public school and the floats were arranged on the public parking lot opposite the United Church. Led by a provincial police car and the Stirling-Municipal Band, the large parade travelled down Front Street and across the centre bridge, where those in charge assisted Santa Claus in distributing over 1000 bags of candy to the children. Later, the parade reformed and marched to the Stirling theatre, where capacity audience of children enjoyed a series of free movies, while the parents did a bit of shopping.

SPECIAL FLOATS

The parade had three special floats that were put in competition for a prize. These were "Red Riding Hood," complete with big bad wolf, and "Puss in the Well," arranged by the retail section of the Chamber of Commerce, and a commercial float from Belleville.

Santa appeared in an old-fashioned cutter, replete with all the trappings.

FLOAT AWARDS

Five public schools in the district entered floats in the Retailers' competition and they were awarded as follows:

First prize, $25 — Williams' Public School, S.S. 17, Rawdon; teacher, Mrs. Marjorie Caudle. A real merry-go-round arranged on a trailer. All it needed to make it most real was a set of dolls to ride along.

Second prize, $15.00 — Snarr public school, S.S. 17, Rawdon; teacher, Miss Enid Coombes, depicting "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

The other three schools will share equally in the prize money:

River Valley School, Sidney township; Mrs. Allen Coombs' teacher. "Humpty Dumpty."

Glen Ross—Union public school; teacher, Mrs. Joan Bush. "Fire Brigade."

STREETS LINED

The streets were lined with spectators from Merrick's Meat Market to Johnson's Bakery, and every one felt that the Chamber of Commerce group had done all out to make the day a success. The weather was ideal for the occasion and young and old took advantage of the chance to view the Santa parade close at home. Streamers were placed across the streets and the large Christmas tree in the centre of the village was lighted with cheery bulbs.

The men of the retail section were pleased to have five schools entering their floats and they appreciated the opportunity to provide a bit of scenery along the path of the parade. No doubt that 1955 will be bigger and better than ever.

ERINDALE (CP) — Thomas Towbridge, 64, was killed Tuesday night when a truck in which he was riding smashed into a loaded tractor-trailer and plunged 75 feet into a gully.

Gene Heins, 34, another passenger, suffered a broken shoulder and undetermined injuries when he was thrown clear. Carl Maier, 35, driver of the trailer, was unhurt.

Police said the accident happened at an intersection of No. 5 highway and the Streetsville road, 15 mileswest of Toronto.

Fail to Locate Student Pilot Who Parachuted

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man. (CP)—Four RCAF search planes and a ground party Tuesday night failed to locate a student pilot believed to have parachuted from his T-33 Silver Star jet plane minutes before it crashed in the hills and scrub of southern Manitoba.

The plane crashed about 50 miles south of here after the pilot, whose name has been withheld, reported by the control tower at Portage that he was in trouble. There was no sign of the pilot at the crash scene.

Whip-Lash Gales Bring Freezing Rain to Ontario

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wintry weather brought whip-lash gales to the Atlantic provinces today and freezing rain to other parts of eastern Canada.

Storms drove small ships to shelter along the Atlantic seaboard and gave rise to power failures in some eastern Ontario communities including the St. Lawrence river industrial city of Cornwall.

Heavy snow fell in the Ottawa valley and Montreal regions. At Cornwall, freezing rain and snow clung to power lines and caused many of them to sag and snap.

The heavy snowfall in eastern Ontario and Quebec was expected to cease this afternoon.

A sticky mixture of snow and rain fell in the Toronto area overnight. Only light snow was forecast for the area today. The forenoon temperature was slightly above freezing and the snow turned to slush.

Freezing Rain, Snow Interrupt Cornwall Power

CORNWALL (CP) — Snowfall after a night of freezing rain today caused sporadic power interruptions across a wide area of this St. Lawrence river city.

Utilities officials said the situation was the worst since the ice storm during the week of 1942.

Between four and six inches of soft, slushy snow settled over power lines sheathed in ice by the freezing rain. Many of the lines sagged and snapped. Falling tree branches broke others.

As fast as repair men could restore power in one section of the city, trouble developed in another.

INDUSTRY SLOWED

Despite the efforts of all available repair crews, the power failures slowed industry. They also extended to parts of the downtown business district at various times.

The city's daily newspaper, the Standard - Freeholder, was hampered in preparation of today's edition when power blackouts caused its mailing type metal to cool.

Morning rush-hour traffic was impeded but no major mishaps were reported.

HIRE POLICE CHIEF

PORT STANLEY (CP)—Village council Tuesday night hired H. P. Dammon, 40, as its police chief. He has been a member of the Kitchener force seven years.

Veteran Fireman Narrowly Escapes Serious Injury

TRENTON (Special) — Veteran fireman Frank Sager narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when he was knocked down by the nozzle of a high pressure hose at a fire at Ernie Bartlett's house on Marmora Street. The nozzle, attached to a line of hose, caught Mr. Sager and tipped him as the pumper sped toward the nearest hydrant to make a hookup.

Overheated pipes caused fire to eat into a partition separating rooms inside the bungalow. Smoke was pouring out of the windows and doors when firemen arrived.

Quick application of water doused the flames and damage was kept to the minimum of $100.

The owner was at work on the railroad, where his relative, Lillian Brooks of Brighton, in the house at the time, discovered the fire. Shaken by the upset Mr. Sager later was taken for a check-up by a policeman, in the cruiser.

PERMIT SUSPENDED

Roy Desbane of Trenton ran afoul of the law for driving a car while his operator's permit was under suspension. Magistrate T. Y. Wills ordered him to pay a $10 fine and $3.50 costs for this violation and a similar amount for having a vehicle registered in his name, while he was prohibited to drive a car.

Douglas Boutilier drew a sentence of three months in common jail for theft. He was convicted of stealing gloves and a pair of pliers from a local chain store. A penalty of 10 days for intoxication will run concurrent with the longer term.

CREATES PROBLEM

Icy streets and sidewalks created a problem for drivers and pedestrians here last night. No accidents reported at the police station indicated residents who had to venture out last night took extreme caution during the slippery period. By midnight town workmen had most of the heavy travelled hills and roads sanded.

Overpower Watchman

HAMILTON (CP) — Two men overpowered a one-armed night watchman in the S. P. Bowser Company factory here, took a safe key from a desk and escaped with an undisclosed amount of money Tuesday night.

Thomas Cino, 54, the watchman, said he was surprised by two and possibly four men as he made his rounds. He was taken to the office and tied with wire while the men attacked the safe. After they left, he freed his arm and called police.

Board of Control Wants Judge To Probe Costs

TORONTO (CP) — The board of control today recommended that a county judge be appointed to probe civic entertainment spending in connection with mile 1735 of the Royal York Hotel.

A special city council meeting will be called Monday to consider the recommendation.

Mayor Leslie Saunders pressed for the probe after his own request for one was turned down Tuesday by Attorney-General Porter of Ontario.

Mayor Saunders asked the board of control to order the investigation because, he said, money was spent at the suite while former mayor Allan Lamport was out of the city.

"I was acting mayor during those absences and I feel responsible," Mayor Saunders told the board. He said Mr. Lamport was away a total of 10 weeks.

Mr. Saunders said he is not interested in money spent by former mayors but only in clearing "inferences and innendos" made during the recent election campaign.

JAP SUICIDES CLIMB

Cannifton W.A. Elects New 1955 Officers

The regular monthly dinner meeting of the Cannifton W.A. was in charge of Mrs. Roy Pound, assisted by Mrs. Gordon McPherson and Mrs. J. Williams.

The long white tables looked pretty with red and green trimmings centred with small Christmas trees and other decorations in keeping with the season.

A large number was out and a delicious menu was served. At 2.30 the president, Mrs. Ivan Brenton, opened the meeting.

Mrs. A. Holgate read the Scripture and the president a Christmas story, "The Shining Star," which was interesting and thought-provoking. The Rev. and Mrs. L. S. Throop were present. Mrs. Throop spoke on the "Meaning of Christmas," and said it was a pleasure to have Mr. and Mrs. Throop with us. This was enjoyed by all.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and the W.A. had had a most successful year.

Donations were made to the M. and M. fund, the Sunday school and Quin-Mo-Lac camp, and towards repairs on the manse.

Mrs. A. Holgate and Mrs. F. Furmidge were appointed to look after the boxes for the needy.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Supt. of OSD Tells of Work At Institution

On Thursday last, a meeting of St. Joseph's Parent-Teacher Association was held in the school auditorium. Mr. W. Meagher presided.

The minutes were read by Miss K. Morrell.

Mr. C. Ford gave the treasurer's report.

The attendance prize was given to the class of the Rev. Sister Mary Noreen.

Mr. F. Maund introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Joseph Demeza, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf. The subject of Mr. Demeza's talk was "The Deaf Child Can be Educated." Mr. Demeza called attention to the fact that deaf children are not dumb or mute. Their mental ability and capacity are equal to any children their age. They are hindered however, by their lack of hearing. All their knowledge must come through the other senses and so a slower and different method of education is required. This method as used at the Ontario School for the Deaf was outlined by Mr. Demeza. A demonstration of the difficulties of lip reading brought home to the members the great job the school undertakes.

A question and answer period followed Mr. Demeza's address.

Mr. Staff McKenzif expressed the sincere thanks of the members to the speaker.

Refreshments were then served by the mothers of Room 1 under the direction of Mrs. G. Williams.

The president, Laura McLauchlin, brought the season's greetings from Sister Associations, and read the letters and cards from other branches and so a slower and different method of education is required. A question and answer period followed Mr. Demeza's address.

Progressive Dinner Party Held by U.W.C.

The December meeting of the University Women's Club of Belleville and district was in the form of a progressive sherry-dinner party.

The first gathering of the evening was at the home of Mrs. MacKinnon, the president, where the executive entertained the club with a sherry party.

A festive dinner followed at the New Queens Hotel, with some 70 members attending. Mrs. MacKinnon expressed regret that Mrs. Baldwin, the secretary, is leaving town. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read, Miss Mary Doyle introduced Mrs. MacKinnon, the former Dorothy Batchelor, who is well known on radio and television through her connections with the Consumers Branch of the Department of Agriculture. Mrs. MacKinnon is just back from another tour of the western provinces where she was giving lectures and demonstrations in this phase of her work.

CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS

She spoke briefly to the club about the art of making Christmas decorations which were adorning the banquet tables. She explained how she covered rose bowls with parowax and sprinkled beads and brilliants on them to give a radiant effect. Other creations were graduating discs of star shaped slices of wax simulating little trees sparkling with green brilliants. Paper angels were another feature of these clever and effective ornaments.

Miss Merry graciously thanked Mrs. MacKinnon for initiating the club to these timely artistic innovations.

Directly afterwards, the group went to the home of Miss Mary Doyle where the last phase of the evening's entertainment was enjoyed.

Mrs. Floyd and Miss Mary Doyle were the conveners of this highly successful Christmas party.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WAIT AWHILE BEFORE YOU MAKE AN IMPORTANT DECISION

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Eight months ago my husband left me for another woman. I am quite certain we will never become reconciled, and so I am planning a divorce him.

Since we broke up, I have met a very nice fellow who has told me he loves me and wants to marry me after my divorce. He wants me to give him an answer right away but, although he is a kind, considerate fellow, and I am sure would be good to me and my two children, I am not sure yet that I really want to marry him.

Do you think I should become engaged to him now, or wait until me to do, or not? If I keep refusing, I'm afraid I may lose him. — Mrs. K.W.

Dear Mrs. S.W.:

I think you would make a serious mistake if you did anything quite so definite as to become engaged to another man while you are still married to your first husband. That sort of thing could be quite hazarious if legal procedures are coming up.

If you were sure that you really wanted to marry this man, there would certainly be nothing out of the way in having a confidential understanding between you about a future marriage. But you would hardly be wise to do anything that might become a matter of knowledge before the suitable moment arrived.

It's only natural that you should be confused at this point, and I strongly advise you not to attempt to make any decisions for awhile. If you made one now, you might later find out it was the wrong one and regret it deeply.

I remember that you ask this man to give you time to let your confusing clear up, and certainly to wait until after you divorce. If he really does care enough about you to want to marry you, he will certainly be willing to do this.

YOU HAVE NO PROBLEM, TERRY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend is 19, and he wants me to marry him. I am only 18, and I do not know if I want to marry him.

My family is moving away from here shortly, but he says he will still wait for me.

I don't want to keep him tied down, and I also do not want to see him too much. Of course, will you please give me some advice?

— Terry

Dear Terry:

I don't think you need any advice. You say you do not want to see this chap much more, so, in the first place, you know very well that you don't want to marry him. In the second place, you know just as well that, at 18, you are not ready to marry anybody at all, even though the law in the state where you live is foolish enough to permit girls of your age marry if their parents consent.

As I see it, you have no problem whatever. The fact that you are moving away gives you every opportunity in the world to break off this friendship about which you care so little anyway. I think that, under the circumstances, it will do a natural death of its own accord, so I advise you to give the whole thing no further thought.

ASK YOUR BROTHER TO HELP YOU WITH THIS PROBLEM

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a brother who is 23 and married. I am 15.

My brother and his wife want to take me to a dance 25 miles from where I live. I want to go very badly, but my mother won't let me because she feels it is too far to go just for a dance and that I am too young.

My brother is a very safe driver and does not drink, so I would be in very good hands. Also, the dance is on a Saturday night. I would be with another girl friend besides my brother and sister-in-law.

How can I make my mother understand that there is nothing wrong in my going to this dance.

Dear B.J.:

I can't imagine why your mother should object to your going to this dance with your brother and sister-in-law. You certainly couldn't go anywhere in better or safer company.

I suggest that you ask your brother to take the matter up with your mother and see if he can't persuade her to let you go. Sometimes an older son has more influence with his mother than a younger daughter, and if your brother is a good champion in your behalf, he will probably be successful in convincing your mother that there is no reason why you should be deprived of this good time.

Beauty

By HELEN JAMIESON

SKIN BLEACHING

There are still some dis-hards among elderly women who disapprove of crayoned eye brows and tinted lips. But, instead of criticizing, they should recall some of the cosmetic sins of their contemporaries. The modern girl uses make-up cleverly and is more sparkling and vivid in appearance because of it. But she would never be so silly as to do a lot of things that her great-grandmother did in the quest for beauty.

Skin peeling and bleaching were fashionable in those days. The slightest skin discoloration, and a woman got a chemical divorce from her complexion. Sometimes she consulted a specialist of uncertain reputation who charged a large fee for his treatments and caused her unbearable discomfort.

For several weeks she went into retirement, shedding the outer layer of skin and waiting for new cells to appear. There was no guarantee that the blemishes would not form again, and they usually did that little thing—much to her grief and disappointment.

The medical profession got rid of these charlatans who preyed upon trusting women and a good thing too! Skin peeling is still done under certain circumstances, however, but methods have improved, being safer and the treatments are given only by qualified specialists of good standing.

There were no sun worshippers in the so-called "good old days." Women often wore chiffon veils in the warmest weather to protect their complexions against the ravages of the sun. Large parasols were a part of the summer girl's insufficient wardrobe. A lady was practically no lady unless her complexion was lily-white.

But getting back to the subject of bleaches . . . mild, harmless ones can be found at cosmetic counters and should be used on liver spots and moth patches when they first appear. A simple home remedy is a mixture of equal parts of peroxide and strained lemon juice, applied daily and allowed to dry on.

CHRISTMAS CARD ENVELOPES SHOULD BE HAND-WRITTEN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me whether or not it is in good taste to typewrite the name and address on the envelope containing a Christmas greeting-card I have been told that the envelope should be addressed with pen and ink. Also, when enclosing a note with the card, could not said note be written on a typewriter without committing a faux pas?

— C.J.

By their very nature Christmas cards are, and should be, so delightfully personal that I think this "personal personality" should be featured by having the envelope hand-written, and by having any messages or notes hand-written. It's true, I don't you agree? . . . that there is something very heartwarming in the familiar hand-writing of a friend.

PASTOR AND WIFE TO GIVE NEW YEAR'S DAY "AT HOME"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a pastor's wife. This year my husband and I want to have an "Open House" on New Year's Day for the members of our congregation and other friends. We hope to make this an annual affair. Because of the around-the-clock work hours in our area, we would like to have it in both the afternoon and the evening. What hours would you suggest?

. . . do not each one to stress for only one hour. This gives be a chance to mingle with the guests before or after her hour-of-serving.

"OH COME, ALL YE" TO A CAROL-SING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I followed your good advice about writing, on our Christmas cards, the invitation to the carol-singing party we are giving on the afternoon before Christmas. Now two more questions, please.

(1) This is the first party of this kind we've ever given. We're inviting children and grown-ups. What should I serve at this Sing-Party tea our children are calling it?

(2) I'd like to give something very inexpensive, as a favor to each one. What could it be?

— Mother

(1) Christmas cookies, pretty and festive, are the things to serve. With milk or hot cocoa for the youngsters; tea and coffee for the grown-ups. Be sure to provide a goodly supply of the delectable cookies, some to be eaten at the party, some for "take home" fool, always welcome to all ages!

IT'S FUN to decorate gift packages, and your youngsters will have a wonderful time "spralling" with paste on stars, letters, sequins, glitter. The secret is to wrap items for them to trim in shelf paper—or any heavy paper that won't tear under small fingers.

self procedure, serving bowls of different kinds of spreads for breads and let the guests make their own. You'll probably have many gala Christmas cookies to serve, and perhaps slices of fruit cake or other Christmas cake. Tea and or coffee. And have a good supply of Ilema-fro-cibbidge (popcon, for example, or heated potato chips, or nuts, or Christmas candies, or any of the scrumptious packaged tidbits.

By all means ask some of the church-members to serve . . . they will be proud and happy of the compliment you give them. And your other suggestion is very wise. . . . do ask each one to stress

(2) For each guest you should have the small inexpensive paper pamphlet that includes the words of the carols, minus too perhaps. (The guests can sing the carols with more confidence and gusto if they have the beloved words right in front of them.; These booklets can then be given as favors.

No Plum Pudding? Try These Elegant Desserts

By Mary Moore

"What about your recipes who do not fancy plum pudding for dessert on Christmas day?"

A good question.. so I'm answering it. The same reader who asked that question wanted to know if I would repeat the recipe for Angel Pie. When she read it here she thought it shockingly extravagant (so do I). Subsequently she tasted it when dining out and found it so delicious she lamented her former mental criticism, for her hostess did not heed or hear her hints for the recipe. Now she wants it for the dessert for her Christmas dinner.

Today, for others of you who are not bound by the traditional plum pudding, I am giving elegant desserts worthy of the occasion.

HEAVENLY PIE (ANGEL)

Four eggs—yolks and whites separated, 1 1-3 cups granulated sugar, 1-4 lemon cream of tartar, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon lemon rind finely grated, 2 cups heavy cream (32 per cent). Sift 1 cup of the sugar with the cream of tartar. Beat the egg whites until stiff but not dry, then gradually sift the sugar mixture over them while beating until thoroughly blended. Butter a 9 or 10-inch glass pie plate, spread meringue over it, hollowing out the centre and not spreading too close to edges. Bake at 275 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour or until firm but not at all brown. Cool. Beat the egg yolks slightly then stir in the remaining 1-2 cup sugar, the lemon juice and rind. Cook, stirring, in top of double boiler until thick—this takes about 8 minutes. Remove from heat and cool. When the heavy cream until stiff. Combine half of it with the lemon-egg mixture, and use this to fill the meringue shell—spreading it smoothly. Cover with remaining cream. Chill 24 hours in refrigerator before serving. This is rich so is usually served in wedges about 2 inches wide at the top. This is a lovely item for a dessert party.

FRUITED ANGEL DELIGHT

You need a 10-inch angel food cake for this. Make it or buy it or make it up from a mix. Open at 6fc per box and eggs at 50c per dozen that seems an extravagance, since this dessert is costly for other items. With angel cake upside down on serving plate slice entire top from it about 1 inch down. You are going to make a trench in the lower part of the cake by cutting 1 inch from outer edge and 1 inch from middle hole. Remove the centre part and the "walls" on both sides of a trench about 1 or 1 1-2 inches deep. Filling—Soak 2 teaspoons gelatin in 1-4 cup canned pineapple juice. Dissolve it by stirring into 1-3 cup boiling hot canned pineapple juice. Add this to 3-4 cup drained crushed pineapple and 1-3 cup chopped blanched almonds and 12 sliced maraschino cherries. Chill this until it begins to congeal. Crumble the lifted out centre of angel food and fold it in with 2 cups heavy cream whipped. (Below, a big trench is cake with this, being sure it is full. Replace top slice. "Frost" top and sides and entire base of cake with remaining filling. Decorate bottom edge of cake with halves of maraschino—alternate red and green are pretty—and decorate top with "flowers" made from maraschino cut into "petals". Chill 24 hours in refrigerator. Serves 12.

NOTE:

If desired 1 cup heavy cream may be omitted and replaced with whipped skim milk powder, made by sprinkling 1-2 cup skim milk powder on 1-2 cup ice water and beating until stiff, adding 2 spoons lemon juice when half whipped.

The president voiced thanks for all the kind co-operation and help during the year. At the January meeting the new slate of officers will be installed and a full report of the year's work given. The cor. sec. read a letter of thanks, and the press sec. read an official letter.

TREASURER'S REPORT

The treasurer reported $223.85 to date and she also read part of a letter written by Mrs. Gordon Watts to the Missionary Monthly: "Prayer is the most powerful force in the universe. It takes our time and it may indeed be our gift to the Christ Child. God does not grant all that we ask simply because we do not always know what is best for us."

The mite-boxes that were opened revealed approximately $17, and the Mission Band leader reported over $108. The supply secretary outlined what was needed for the bake sale. The friendship secretary recorded the visits and the president expressed thanks for hospitality and program.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Mrs. Percy MacMullen opened the Christmas program, which she had arranged with a poem "Far Away is Bethlehem." Mrs. Robert Merrick read the Bible lesson, and the leader gave the meditation based on "The Beautiful Star, that Dawned in the Orient," and "The Legend of Child and her Father at the Bethlehem Inn." In closing she said "Let us be like the wisemen of old, press forward with our eyes fixed on the radiant star."

Mrs. Marguerite McMullen sang an African Christmas carol; Miss Doris Sine read "A Legend of the Christ Child," Mrs. John Mulberson gave a brief paper expressing "Thoughts Behind Christmas," and closed with a poem "The Babe in the Stable."

Mrs. Carleton Potts and Miss Ruth Linn contributed a Christmas vocal duet and all sang "Gentle Mary Laid Her Child."

At this Christmas meeting in place of the usual study chapter on India, the time was devoted to the work of the missionaries, who in this modern day are carrying forward the work of good will and reconciliation, which began with the coming of Jesus so many centuries ago. These ordinary people are shining lights in today's world. The M. and M. cover is a beautiful Nativity scene by an Indian artist. The reproduction which is in full color, has many tones of rich reds and browns with Mary's sari-like robe in soft pink. This with a map of India, was displayed.

Mrs. Frank Jeffs gave a few of the highlights from the book, "Missionaries Reporting". She told of Miss Emily Maxwell, educational missionary at Banswara, Miss Mary E. Martin and her work at Dhar, Miss Jean Bridgman and the Christmas concert at Indore girls' high school, where a real princess, Her Royal Highness, Princess Usha, daughter of the Maharajah, was in attendance.

Mrs. C. E. Laird gave a visual description of a five-day camp held at the Government Experimental Farm at Ujjain, with 14 leaders and 60 girls. She said, "The church is full of young people wanting to be the leadership and Indian leaders are needed for volunteer work. Each new day brings fresh opportunities to serve Christ."

IMPRESSION OF MASIH ADDRESS

Rev. W. G. Fletcher gave a few impressions of the recent addresses given by Rev. Kenneth Masih, who was in Belleville recently and who also attended General Council.

Mr. Masih stressed that no matter what happened the church of Indian the world would still carry on as no power would be able to uproot it. Despite the fact that the people of the villages are desperately poor, they still are keenly interested in Christianity.

Mrs. Herbert Smith read "A Legend from India," which closed with "He shall give His Angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways."

Mrs. W. G. Fletcher closed the section on India with a special prayer written by Rev. A. R. Ram, the book "The World At One in Prayer."

The group joined in "O Little Town of Bethlehem," after which Mrs. Roy Thrasher was in charge of "The Candle Ceremonial," arranged by Isobel McFadden. She was assisted by Mrs. Burton Sharpe, representing "India," and Mrs. Will Potts as "Canada." The ladies wore suitable costumes and carried candle-lamps as they presented their message.

Mrs. MacMullen closed the program with "The light of Bethlehem's wondrous star has shone through all the ages long, and round the world on wings of love, has rolled the angels' glorious song."

Miss Ruth Linn served a variety of home-made candy and another year of W.M.S. work was completed.

Evidence Given Seven Years Ago Used at Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — Evidence heard at a murder trial seven years ago was re-introduced Tuesday at the hearing of a manslaughter charge against Dr. Leon Azoulay.

The trial is the third in the seven-year legal battle by the Montreal doctor, accused of manslaughter in connection with the death of Blanche Lepire, 41, of Beauce, Que., during an alleged illegal operation.

The testimony repeated Tuesday was a deposition made by Dr. Azoulay at his first trial, after which he was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary. He appealed and the Supreme Court of Canada ordered a new trial.

The second trial opened on a murder charge but clarification of the Supreme Court order specified that Dr. Azoulay should be tried for manslaughter and a third trial was ordered.

Courts May Be Asked to Rule On Hog Scheme

STRATFORD (CP) — Ontario courts may be asked to rule on the legality of the present hog-marketing scheme in the province.

Theodore Parker of Ellice township told a meeting of hog producers Tuesday night that he has sent out a circular letter asking some 2,000 farmers to contribute $1 each toward financing his case against the United Livestock Sales Ltd. He already has received $200.

"I have hired a lawyer, Nelson McFarlane of Stratford, and we are going to see what we can find out about the legality of this scheme in the courts."

United Livestock Sales is the exclusive agent for marketing hogs in the province. It handles hog-marketing under authority of the Ontario Hog Producers Association.

Mr. Parker and other opponents of the scheme say farmers should be permitted to ship hogs to whichever processing plant they choose.

H.S. Teachers Turn Down Board's Offer

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of Toronto's high school teachers Tuesday turned down the board of education's offer of an across-the-board increase of $400 a year.

The Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, representing the teachers, asked for a $600 increase next year and increased raises until the maximum reaches $1,000 above the present level. The minimum salary in Toronto now is $2,200 a year. Maximum is $6,000.

The federation also asked for a $2,300 increase in principals' salaries above the present maximum. Principals now have a range of $6,500 to $8,000 a year.

The federation first proposed a $1,000 across-the-board increase for teachers. It offered the compromise after the board's finance committee said that was impossible to grant.

If the federation's proposed increases are approved, they would make Toronto teachers the highest paid in Canada.

An oil tank car on an eastbound train bound from Indianapolis to Cleveland left the rails as a second train, also eastbound, moved slowly out of the yards. Fifteen cars on the fast-moving train left the rails while five cars on the second train were derailed.

British Economy Rode World Trade Current to Highest Post-war Prosperity Mark

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The British economy rode world trade currents to its highest post-war prosperity mark during 1954. Some claimed the country hasn't been so well off in 40 years.

It was summed up by one observer as a year "relatively free of great events, but full of excellent trends."

Most of the right components of the economic machine fell into place. Up went exports, savings, incomes, some wages and dividends. Down came overseas trade deficits and unemployment. The cost of living was up, pinching fixed-income groups such as old age pensioners. But industry struck a record output, six per cent higher than 1953.

R. A. Butler, chancellor of the exchequer and ceaseless economic watchdog, could say late in the year that things were moving pretty well.

The country had taken a course between the "primrose path and the wasteland" during 1953, and the primroses were closer this year.

But Butler pointedly advised the nation to keep moving and spend little time plucking the posies.

Warning that a close eye is being kept on inflation came in the speech from the throne at the Nov. 30 opening of Parliament, delivered by the Queen. The statement underlined the situation comprised of the prevailing stock market boom, end-of-year rush on sterling and heavy new government commitments for roads, railways and education.

Pensions boosts were tacked on tax loads but an election budget is expected in the spring that probably would add to the government load.

Convertibility talk sheered away from the line that it might be just around the corner. Britain and Europe—seemed content to proceed slowly via reinforcement and such intermediate steps as Britain's easing of restrictions on old Canadian favorite foods like apples, cheese and salmon

At the end of November, the gold and dollars fund stood at $2,825,000,000, an increase of $407,000,000 for the year, but a decline for the month of $11,000,000. The drop was less than expected, and reflected the solid position of British trade regarding the dollar gap.

Britain's trade policy continued to stress strong international machinery through the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Internally, food rationing ended in July with the decontrol of meat, and other restrictions eased right and left. Consumer buying continued up, with the emphasis on durable goods.

Britain reported in October that the pound sterling's purchasing power was down to 17s 11d, compared with 20s in 1951. There were £250 a year, 10,000,000 earning from £250-£499 and some 700,000 earning £1,000 or better.

Some economists professed to see a threat in the unprecedented rate of employment. The "musicle-bound economy," one called it, arguing that in a period when world trade as a whole had expanded, Britain had scarcely held its own.

Meanwhile, London continued its comeback as a financial power in world affairs, with record sums in vestment swelling.

"We must be prepared to put more investment into the Commonwealth," said Butler. "We are already doing a great deal. We must be able to maintain that record and be prepared to surpass it."

Plans are made for a choral service by candlelight at 3.30 on December 19. There will be a film strip depicting the Christmas Story.

11 Days After Korean War Outbreak Canadian Soldiers Were Headed for That Country

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—On July 5, 1950—11 days after the outbreak of the Korean War — Canadian forces were headed for that country in the United Nations' cause.

On Sept. 14, 1954—four years, two months and nine days later—the Canadian government announced its forces in Korea would be cut by two-thirds. There is a possibility that all Canadian forces will be out of Korea sometime next year.

Between those dates, 315 of the 27,000 Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen who served in the Far East were killed, died of wounds or lost at sea. These included 300 soldiers and six sailors.

The army counted 91 deaths due to non-battle causes and 1,203 soldiers were wounded or injured in action. Thirty-two soldiers returned from Communist prisoner - of-war camps and one airmen was released two years after he was shot down and almost 3½ years after the Korean armistice July 27, 1953.

MOST ARE BACK

Nearly all the soldiers and sailors withdrawn from Korea in "Operation Reduce" are home in time for Christmas. Left in the Far East are one infantry battalion, one field ambulance, the necessary support troops and one destroyer.

No actual date has been set for withdrawal of the remaining Canadian forces in Korea—the 2nd Battalion, Queen's Own rifles, and one field ambulance and administrative forces.

"We hope that when the year's tour of duty is finished in the spring for the remaining troops we will bring them home and not replace them," said an Ottawa authority.

The one-squadron RCAF airlift which made 1,200 Pacific crossings since July, 1950, was discontinued in the late spring.

Three Canadian destroyers were the first Canadian forces to get into action in the Korean theatre. The RCAF made its first airlift flight from McCord field, Wash., July 27, 1950.

FIRST AT TURAN

In August, 1950, the government announced plans to form the special Korean brigade and in November the advance party arrived at Pusan, South Korean port. The 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, landed in December and was in action two months later.

The full brigade, under command of Brig. (now Maj. - Gen.) John Rockingham of Vancouver, arrived May 4, 1951, and about three months later the Commonwealth division was formed.

Canada's footloggers in Korea came from three famous regiments — the PPCLI, Royal 22nd Regiment (Van Doos) and the Royal Canadian Regiment. Lord Strathcona's Horse, Calgary, supplied the armor and the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery the guns.

The three outstanding battles involving Canadians were at Kapyong April 24-25, 1951, when the PPCLI won a U.S. presidential citation, west of the Imjin River; Nov. 22-28, 1951, where the Royal 22nd fought a desperate engagement; and Little Gibraltar Oct. 22-24, 1952, where the RCRs distinguished themselves.

For Canadian troops, the last heavy fighting was on May 2, 1953, when C Company, 3rd Battalion, RCR, was badly mauled.

Eight Canadian destroyers participated in the campaign and one of them, the Crusader, became the champion train-buster of the UN fleet with four trains wiped out.

No. 426 Thunderbird Squadron of Dorval, Que., flew their four-engine North Stars 4,500,000 miles carrying troops and supplies without loss or injury to any passenger, crew member, aircraft or cargo.

Twenty-one RCAF fighter pilots served with the U.S. Air Force and destroyed nine Communist MIG-15s, probably destroyed one and damaged eight.

Tiny Fortress, French Soldier And Heroic Nurse Caught Imagination of The World

By NEIL SUFRIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A tiny fortress in the heart of Indochina, a swashbuckling French soldier and a heroic nurse caught the imagination of the world in 1954.

France and the rest of the Free World mourned when the garrison at Dien Bien Phu, defended gallantly for 55 days under the leadership of Brig.-Gen. Christian de Castries, its wounded cared for by nurse, Geneviève de Galard-Terraube, fell to the Communist Vietminh May 7.

The loss of Dien Bien Phu was perhaps the most dramatic event of the year. But 1954—though it had its share of violence—was a year of diplomacy and patient negotiation.

TRIESTE DISPUTE SETTLED

Words, as opposed to the sword, brought Italy and Yugoslavia to agreement on division of the disputed Trieste territory cleared the way for Britain's agreement to withdraw her troops from the Suez canal zone, eased ended the Anglo-Iranian oil deadlock after three years.

On a broader scale, negotiations resulted in the London and Paris accords to restore West German sovereignty and bring her into the West Defence alliance as a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the enlarged Brussels Pact.

They brought into world prominence a 47-year-old Frenchman named Pierre Mendes-France who became premier with a country on the pledge to bring peace to Indochina within 30 days or resign.

He made it. Then he went ahead though truce terms signed at the Geneva conference July 21 were not Ho Chi-minh the rich Red river delta and Hanoi were far from pleasing to the West, they nevertheless were welcomed for bringing to an end eight years of fighting which took almost 300,000 lives and sapped the French economy.

PREMIERE MAKES MISSES

From Indochina on, Mendes-France was in the thick of diplomatic moves. He strengthened his position at home with a program for economic reforms, took steps to end terrorism in Tunisia by offering the North African protectorate home rule, let European Defence Community die in the French assembly, and then worked at London and Paris to get agreement on Europeanization of the Saar as part of the proposal for rearming West Germany.

The conference in London on admitting Germany to Western defence appeared at times to be breaking until times until it was rescued by Britain's pledge to keep troops on the Continental indefinitely.

Less successful than these Western negotiations were meetings between East and West. The Berlin conference of the Big Four foreign ministers ended in the summer without agreement on reunifying West Germany and giving Austria her independence.

The East-West conference later in Geneva on problems of the Indochina settlement but was unable to break the deadlock on Korea.

DISARMAMENT CONSIDERED

Disarmament discussions were carried on by United States, Britain and in London with Canada, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the United Nations taking part. Some progress appeared to have been made at the start of the year but this later was offset by grumblings from eastern delegates that any new reduction in armament had been doomed by the decision to rearm West Germany. Nevertheless, negotiations between the U.S. and Russia continued on President Eisenhower's plan for exploiting atomic energy for peaceful uses.

The late months of 1954 were marked by apparent anxiety in the Communist world about steps to strengthen Western defences. The Soviet Union did all it could to head off ratification of the Paris-London accords and called a European security conference. Only the Communist-bloc countries took part; the Western nations said they could not attend any such conference until after the German rearmament treaties had been ratified.

Among more violent incidents of the year was the overthrow of the Communist-tinged regime of Jacobo Arbenz Guzman in Guatemala by insurgent forces led by Col. Carlos Armas. However, this was one rebellion with little bloodshed.

The fight against the anti-white Mau Mau terrorists continued in Britain's Kenya colony.

ALLIED PLANES DOWNED

Soviet fighter planes shot down two American planes, one off Siberia and the other off the northern tip of Japan. Fighters from Communist China downed a British airliner off Hainan and Red China and Red China later apologized for this and agreed to pay damages for the loss of the plane and the deaths of 10 of the 18 aboard.

Fighting between the Red Chinese and Nationalists off the coast of Red China picked up in intensity during the autumn months but by the year-end the Reds had not carried out their threat to make an all-out assault on Nationalist-held islands. Signing of a mutual security treaty by the U.S. and Nationalist China appeared to assure the status quo would be continued.

Communist China announced it had sentenced 13 Americans captured in the Korean war to long prison terms as spies. This shocked the West and started a series of attempts to get them freed.

A step to strengthen the free nations in the Pacific was taken at Manila when eight nations signed the Southeast Asian treaty. While Pakistan, Thailand and the Philippines joined in this organization, such other Asian powers as India, Burma and Indonesia stayed out.

EARTHQUAKE DISASTER

Nature took its toll during the year, notably in North Africa where more than 1,000 died in an Algerian earthquake; in Japan where a typhoon and a ship, caused floods and landslides which took more than 1,500 other lives, and along the east coast of the United States and in Canada where hurricanes took a heavy toll of life and property.

McCarthy took an part in the U.S. congressional elections in November but a number of leading Republicans who had been defeated in what appeared to be a backlash against senatorial methods in both political parties. The Democrats won control of both the Senate and House of Representatives.

CHURCHILL HONORED

There was anxiety for the health of Pope Pius who twice during 1954 suffered serious illness, first in late January and again in December.

Hollywood provided its share of scandals and broken marriages, notably the breakup of Marilyn Monroe and Joe DiMaggio.

In sport, Roger Bannister of England ran the first four-minute mile in his track of 3:59.4 was later broken by John Landy of Australia in 3:58. This in turn was broken by probably the greatest competitive mile ever run when Bannister defeated Landy in 3:58.8 at the British Empire Games in Vancouver.

Safe Driving Day Marred By Minor Crashes

CHICAGO (CP) — A 24-hour safety crusade ended in United States with a goal of no traffic deaths and a minimum of accidents, but more than 300 died in hours after its start at midnight Tuesday night with a traffic fatality in Cleveland and frequent reports of non-fatal accidents.

President Eisenhower, who proclaimed "53-Day" and took the safety pledge in the White House, pleaded for an unblemished record of safety and expressed hope that the observance will help "put it a day without a single traffic accident throughout the country."

Cities across the country were told of the campaign by newspaper stories, radio and television broadcasts, parades, posters and handbills. The president's words on tee let each community make its own plans in the day's efforts to set the tone for the big weekend.

Today was chosen for the safety test because it is an ordinary week-day. A committee spokesman said it was selected to stress that "motorists and pedestrians could be careful every day of the week—not simply during holiday periods."

In Baltimore, the Maryland traffic safety commissioner said it is extending the safe driving campaign until Jan. 1 in an effort to reduce accidents during the holidays.

DIVERSIFY INDUSTRY

SHIPPEGAN, N.B. (CP) — Fishing is still the leading industry here, as it has been for a century, but the year round industry now employs hundreds of men in spring and summer. A box factory, sash and door plant and fish processing plants help keep menfolk at home.

BIG BUILDERS

STOCKHOLM (CP) — Celebrating its 30th anniversary, Sweden's largest co-operative housing society reported it had constructed about 100,000 dwelling units in the past three decades. In 1954 the society will complete about 11,000 of Sweden's total production of 57,000 houses.

Christmas Tree Supply Plentiful Survey Shows

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The annual rush for Christmas trees is scheduled to start any time now and indications are there will be plenty to go around. A Canadian Press survey shows the supply is plentiful and prices are expected to vary little from those of last year.

Last year the value of trees exported to the United States was more than $5,000,000. It is expected to be greater this year. Estimates indicate one-quarter to one-third of Christmas trees on sale south of the border are cut in Canada.

ONLY ONE

Newfoundland is the only province that isn't in on the export of evergreens this year. Tree trade there—spruce is the most plentiful—is confined to local sales. Prince Edward Island has only $2,500.

The Canadian National Railways, which handles shipments from the Maritimes, said about 9,000,000 trees will have left there by the end of December. It also will have handled quantities expected to sell about 4,500,000 trees. They valued the trade at $1,000,000. New Brunswick's quantity estimate was 3,300,000 and trade value $2,000,000. Nova Scotia's 1954 figures.

SMALL TREES POPULAR

In order of preference are balsam fir, spruce and white cedar. The small table tree from one to three feet in height is becoming more popular each year.

The New York area is the biggest market but Montreal dealers went to other parts of the United States, Canada sent 46 to Cuba. Montreal had a big export trade last year and estimates for 1954 raised the figure considerably. Two cutters—most farmers — received 25 cents a tree. City prices range from 25 cents to $2.50.

Value of this year's trade is expected to be about the same as last —$2,000,000 split evenly between the export and domestic markets. Trade, plus gradually increasing in popularity, is expected to account for 60 per cent of sales in Toronto. Dealers said the price would be left and up for good trees, while spruce and balsam prices would be 75 cents and up.

WHEAT PRICES

Prices in Manitoba are from 75 cents to $10 depending on size and quality. The average for a Manitoba tree is $2 to $3.

At Prince Albert, Sask., a sales decrease is expected because of lower incomes. Best sellers are blue or black spruce at $2 to $2.50.

The British Columbia forestry service expected the same prices as last year, 50 cents to $2. The average trees down to 15 cents for those with poor quality foliage.

MacKenzie Hopes To Sell Story Of Imprisonment

MONTREAL (CP)—Sgdn. Ldr. A. R. (Andy) MacKenzie thinks the story of his two years' imprisonment behind the Bamboo Curtain is worth telling.

A lot of people agree with him, including some Canadian and United States publishers who have offered him sums of money ranging from $5,000 upwards for the right to publish the account of his prison experiences in Communist China.

But the quiet, soft-spoken father of his suburban Strathmore home, shortly after he returned from talks with officials in Ottawa, MacKenzie said Tuesday night he can obtain permission from his superiors he will write the story.

The money might result "would help to make up for those two years," he said.

He got approval from officials, and if his account passed their censorship, MacKenzie would be free to write about the time spent after he was captured. His plane was shot down during the Korean war while he was serving as an exchange pilot with the U.S. air force.

First public account of the 34-year-old ace's experiences will probably come this Friday when he is expected to face a press conference on the subject in Ottawa.

SEE PRICES FALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eisenhower administration economists say prices are due to go down and profits to go up in the United States in 1955. Giving their appraisal of the economic outlook in Congress, they forecast a slow but fairly steady downtrend of retail prices during much if not all of the coming year.

Western Oil Should Look To East Market Says Oil Head

TORONTO (CP)—Montreal and area, with one-third of Canada's refining capacity, is a natural outlet for western Canada's oil, J. Gerald Godsoe, vice-president of British American Oil Company, the said today.

"To my mind," he said in an address to the Electric Club of Toronto, "we will see the day— and I do not believe it is many years away—when Canadian crude will be carried by pipeline to Montreal and refined there."

Such a move would involve extension to Toronto of the present line from Alberta to Sarnia, and he thought this should take place a year or two before the Montreal extension.

Mr. Godsoe's comments were contained in a statement given to the press before delivery.

Montreal refining capacity next year would be 210,000 barrels a day, and if prairie oil could get this volume of new business, it would represent an increase of more than 70 per cent over the approximate current production rate of 265,000 barrels a day for the three prairie provinces.

Additionally, displacement of present oil imports would improve Canada's foreign trade balance by more than $200,000,000 a year.

The challenge to the oil industry now was to find markets, but this could be done only if the price was competitive.

"It might well be that, in order to meet foreign competition, producers ultimately might have to decide to absorb the price asked for in the field."

Mr. Godsoe was not disturbed by introduction of new forms of energy, such as nuclear energy.

"Insofar as petroleum is concerned, oil and the atom will be partners, not competitors."

Defence Claims Dr. Sheppard Injured Self

By RELMAN MORIN

CLEVELAND (AP)—Dr. Samuel Sheppard was ordered back to the watchful today as the closing murder conspiracy trial in his wife's case was opened.

His life probably is at stake.

The state accuses him of killing Marilyn Sheppard last July 4, and says the crime was premeditated. That the prosecution is expected to demand the death penalty in final arguments.

Sheppard, steadfastly maintaining his innocence, has told a story of an intruder, a "form," that he saw bending over his wife's bed. He says he struggled with this person and was knocked unconscious.

Only a few witnesses are yet to be heard, and the lawyers say their testimony will be brief.

Prosecution and defence then begin the summation of the evidence immediately.

Sheppard now knows the state's theory of what happened—that after he committed the crime, he deliberately injured himself to back up his account of his fight with the "bushy-haired" prowler.

In the last minute of cross-examination Tuesday, assistant prosecutor John J. Mahon roared at him:

"And after you killed her, you rushed down to that lake and either fell on those stairs or jumped off the platform down there out to the beach and there sustained your injuries."

"That's absolutely untrue—and unfair," Sheppard replied.

Mahon said he had finished cross-examining, but he had an afterthought. He put another question: Did Sheppard tell the truth at the inquest July 29?

"I did tell the truth in relation to Miss Hayes," Sheppard said.

When Mahon asked him if he "deceived" her, the accused man said, "I felt Miss Hayes' reputation justified that answer."

The prosecutor then sat down.

8,000 Residents of Athlone Besieged by Flood Waters

ATHLONE, Ireland (Reuters)— The 8,000 inhabitants of Athlone were in a state of siege today with the swollen River Shannon covering the surrounding countryside and seeping relentlessly into this little town in central Ireland.

Evacuees from low-lying suburbs watched at a distance as the waters rose around their deserted homes.

With some 70 square miles of encircling farmland now covered with water, ordinary life in the town was almost at a standstill.

Troops and police were moving across swamped fields and roads in boats, taking water supplies to stubborn cottagers who refused to quit their water-logged homes.

In England, floods were subsiding today after a night with only slight rain. Maidenhead, on the upper reaches of the Thames, reported itself free from water for the first time in some days.

Hundreds of tons of debris were cleared by floodlight during the night from the main London-to-Manchester road near Stafford. A waterlogged railway embankment collapsed there Monday night, burying two trucks and damaging a third.

Outlook Brightens for Gas Pipeline Into States, Plans For Eastbound Line Delayed

MARIAN YEAR ENDS

OTTAWA (CP)—A proposal to move Peace river natural gas west to British Columbia communities and into the United States hit snags going Tuesday, but the road roughened a little for a plan to pipe the fuel eastward from southern Alberta fields.

For the westbound line, West-coast Transmission Company signed an agreement with two United States firms under which it will pipe gas from the northern Alberta-B.C. Peace river area as far as the U.S. border, hooking up with the U.S. systems there.

The 900-mile Canadian leg of the line, to cost about $100,000,000, will serve Vancouver and intermediate B.C. points. Construction is to start early next year.

NO DIFFICULTY

Westcoast already holds permits from the Alberta government and the board of transport commissioners, and an export permit from the federal government. However, these were granted on the basis of a proposition different from the present one. It was not clear whether new permits would be needed now, but federal officials indicated there will be no difficulty about a new export permit.

Meanwhile on the other side of the pipeline network that would stretch between Vancouver and Montreal, Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd., which is to build a 2,200-mile line from western Alberta to Montreal, took these steps:

It asked the board of transport commissioners here to set its deadline for completion of purchase and sales contracts on which the board would base a final permit for construction of the 2,200-mile line. April 30 from Dec. 31.

Trans-Canada also had received a similar extension along with an extension to June 30 from June 1 in which to get a construction from the Alberta gas conservation board.

HIT DELAYS

Trans-Canada did not, however, ask the transport board to extend its deadline for completion of the eastbound line, which is Dec. 31, 1957.

Trans-Canada asked the postponements because of delays in negotiating purchase contracts for gas with an Alberta company that will serve as a feeder line between wells and the main eastbound pipeline. These have been difficult, both to delay negotiations of sales contracts with customers, and that is a necessary part of the company's huge financing job.

Trans-Canada officials have said they still are optimistic that a start can be made on construction of the line early next spring, as was originally planned. Their schedule calls for the line, longest in the world, to reach Winnipeg by late 1955, Toronto by late 1956 and Montreal by 1957.

Steel Production In United States 82 PC of Capacity

NEW YORK (AP)—Steel production for the week ending today is scheduled again at 82 per cent of capacity this week, the same as last week, and down from the high point of the year, Iron Age, the national metal-working weekly, reports.

There has been an increase in steel production scheduled for every week since Labor Day and since then the rate has climbed more than 30 per cent.

The publication says most buyers it interviewed are acting on orders for more tonnage than they have in months. The trend was toward bigger order backlogs and more extended delivery, although some producers could be used on almost immediate delivery.

The market for structurals was softer, partly because of the dearth of freight-car orders, and the market for rails and railway accessories was "dead."

Meanwhile, stainless and alloy steel producers had raised the prices of nickel-bearing grades as the result of the recent price boost of 4½ cents a pound for nickel. Iron Age says, however, that the price boosts were expected and were surprisingly modest, especially for stainless steel.

REDS OFFER RADIO TRUCE

ROME (AP) — Communist Czechoslovakia offered Monday flight to stop the war of radio insults between Prague and Rome, and asked Italy to do the same. The offer came in a memorandum from the Czechoslovak delegation here after the Italian cabinet protested a week ago against a long series of anti-Italian broadcasts over the Prague radio during the last three years.

No Information Will Be Given Without Consent

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan planning board Tuesday night passed unanimously against giving any information to the press unless by and with the consent of the planning board chairman.

The motion was introduced by metro chairman Fred Gardiner.

It followed sharp criticism by Mr. Gardiner of a story appearing in the Globe and Mail by reporter Murray Jones for a newspaper item which quoted Mr. Gardiner as saying higher costs of operation, made up of higher wage rates, increased taxation and living costs, are developing a new trend in industrial location.

The story included statistics which showed that in 1952, 37 new factories located in the metropolitan area, as compared with 89 in other parts of the province.

The article was . . . quite a complete distortion of what was said in the speech," Mr. Jones said. He denied he had said that industry was being forced outside Toronto by high costs and mentioned taxation in this context.

Mr. Jones accused Mr. Gardiner said, was highly misleading, highly damaging to the metropolitan area and inconsistent with the facts.

BAD INFLUENCE

MARCH, England (CP) — An Alsatian and a terrier were caught killing 114 chickens in this Cambridgeshire district. In court, the terrier's owner pleaded that the Alsatian led his dog astray. He was fined £4. The Alsatian's owner had to pay £3.

Woman Hanged For Torch Murder Of Son's Wife

LONDON (AP) — Mrs. Styllou Christofi, first woman to be hanged for 10 years, went to her death on the gallows of Holloway jail Thursday for the torch murder of her daughter-in-law.

Mrs. Christofi, 53-year-old grandmother from Cyprus who spoke no English, was convicted two months ago of murdering her son's wife by strangling her and setting fire to her body.

The prosecution said Mrs. Christofi knocked 36-year-old Mrs. Hella Christofi unconscious as she was taking a bath, twisted a scarf around her neck and set her clothing afire. She left the corpse in the back yard of their home in Hampstead last August.

The two women had quarrelled, and Mrs. Christofi feared her son, a waiter at London's fashionable Cafe de Paris who adds an "S" to his family name, would send her back to Cyprus.

A group of members of Parliament made a last-minute attempt Tuesday night to persuade Home Secretary Gwilym Lloyd George that the woman should be reprieved on grounds of insanity.

Colored People Are Opposed To Refilming Birth of Nation

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Recently a syndicate announced it had bought rights for the refilming of "The Birth of a Nation."

The news brought a blast from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People which said it was "as unconscionable—as opposed" to the film today as it was in 1915, when "Birth" was first released.

Thus the storm which the film, about the U.S. Civil War, aroused when it came out 40 years ago still rages. Perhaps the most important movie in screen history, it is also the most controversial.

The picture was the product of Kentucky-born D. W. Griffith. Even its most ardent supporters do not claim that it lacks prejudice. The authoritative book "The Rise of the American Film" declares: "The film was a passionate and persuasive avowal of the inferiority of the Negro."

VIOLENT REACTION

Scenes depicted freed slaves as arrogant, lustful, villainous; negro congressmen drinking heavily and reclining in Congress with bare feet on desks, other Negroes making advances to white girls.

The picture drew violent reaction in many cities. There were disturbances in New York and a race riot in Boston and other cities where abolitionist (anti - slavery) feelings still were strong.

Griffith was astounded and upset by tirades against the film. He replied with a pamphlet, "The Rise and Fall of Free Speech in America." The mulatto leader was not the heavy in the film, he argued. He claimed the real villain was a character based on the post-civil war reconstruction politico Thaddeus Stevens.

The director's answer to his critics was in his next film, "Intolerance." Griffith poured a million dollars of his "Birth" profits into the film, which he said was "a protest against despotism and injustice in every form."

The final cost of the film was $1,900,000, a record that stood for many years. The public was confused by the four interwoven plots, and "Intolerance" didn't approach the success of its predecessor.

PROFITS UNCERTAIN

How much did "The Birth of a Nation" make?

The trade magazine, Variety, once cited estimates of $50,000,000, which would make it the biggest movie money-maker by far. Griffith himself once told me that figure was correct. And actor Donald Crisp, who appeared in the picture, says that author Thomas Dixon collected $15,250,000 as his ¼ share. Dixon wrote the novel, "The Clansman," on which the movie is based.

Others scoff at this claim. Historian Terry Ramsaye said the film had earned $15,000,000. No one will ever know the truth. Because he was strapped for financing, Griffith had to sell rights to the film in several states. No accounting was possible.

The picture continues to earn money. It is shown annually at the silent movie house here and is revived periodically all over the world.

Increasing competition provides many challenges for the coming year

Extracts of addresses delivered at the 88th Annual Meeting of The Canadian Bank of Commerce

"If it were possible to draw up a balance sheet of Canadian conditions it would show a substantial surplus on the favourable side," said James Stewart, C.B.E., President, addressing the 88th Annual Meeting of The Canadian Bank of Commerce.

In dealing with the general economic picture, Mr. Stewart observed, in part, that "evidence is mounting to indicate slowing down, for the time being, in the rate of our over-all economic growth. The commercial and industrial situation this past year is by no means depressed—in fact, if it were possible to draw up a balance sheet of Canadian conditions it would show a substantial surplus on the favourable side. However, careful examination of the record reveals a somewhat spotty pattern of activity with both gains and losses showing up in a number of areas and in a number of industries."

• • •

"It is generally agreed," said the President, "that government policies of the past few years designed to maintain some measure of stability in a growing economy have been successful. We now are entering a period when business must, on its own initiative, test the strengths and weaknesses in the market-place. During the past few years there has developed a feeling in some circles that business fluctuations can be smoothed out, even corrected, by various monetary and fiscal measures. On the other hand, a skepticism continues to be felt as to whether government intervention can cope with all unfavourable developments. In a large measure solutions will depend on the kind and degree of problem to be solved. On us as citizens — corporate and individual — much will depend on the position we take on domestic and international issues. For example, are we prepared to pay the price for "full employment" — assuming the price can be estimated; do we favour price-supports to maintain floors under prices that otherwise would be brought into line with demand; do we approve of special protection for special industries in the light of our position as a trading nation? These and other vexatious issues, concerning which the people as a whole are vitally interested, call for early and objective thinking in the light of the re-emergence of a buyers' market."

In a reference to national production, Mr. Stewart said: "But what possibly has not commanded the attention it deserves is that, with an expanding population and a growing labour force, it is necessary — assuming economic stability — that productivity move forward in relation to this growth. If our standards of living are to improve, the rate of increase in productivity should be somewhat greater than the rate of population growth. When, in fact, production remains constant or declines then this is a warning that changes are called for in both business and government policies."

• • •

"The agricultural situation this year has changed relative to last year. The picture has been affected in no small way by the capriciousness of the weather. An unofficial estimate of a 250 million bushel wheat crop for the prairies this year follows three consecutive years of crops over twice that size. Even the diminished yield does not tell the full story. The composition of the crop is even more revealing, as witness the estimate that a substantial percentage of this year's crop will be rated as feed. Manifestly, the difficulties of marketing a mounting grain surplus in competitive foreign markets is somewhat alleviated as a result of this year's outturn. However, any adverse effect on the income and purchasing power of the prairie farmers soon becomes evident and in turn affects, to some degree, the over-all consumption pattern for the months ahead. Production of most of our principal grain crops, with the exception of flax, is down this year. However,' Mr. Stewart concluded, 'the level of domestic food consumption remains high and should remain relatively stable."

"It is evident that we are in a period of competition, which in course of time may become more intensified, yet it would appear that the influences of a sellers' market during the past decade continue to prevail and consequently have made adjustments to competitive conditions somewhat more difficult to achieve. We are, in fact, witnessing the emergence of at least three kinds of competition: in foreign markets, where it involves some of our exports; and in the domestic field, where, first of all, there are felt the effects of imports from foreign countries, and second as between our own firms and industries.

"We hear on many sides of relatively high costs being detrimental to sales in the present competitive market. If this be the case then every effort to reduce costs must be made. Where productivity or other conditions can be improved to reduce costs it is imperative that plans be made to achieve this as soon as possible. In many cases, an increase in output could reduce the per unit cost of the product and thereby improve its competitive position. In other cases, it may be that technological improvements are necessary to restore the industry to a better relative cost relationship to competitors. In yet other cases it may require management to re-examine and where necessary revise production and marketing policies in line with the changes that now are taking place in the market.

"Since, as I have noted, competition arises in several forms, and since we cannot usefully separate our domestic from our foreign activities, except in certain specific instances, the question of protection looms increasingly large. One of the questions in the field of foreign trade that cannot be ignored centres on the extent to which we consider tariffs as a device to support the economy. I have recorded on other occasions my belief that with regard to "protection" the long run rather than the short run position is to be preferred because of the dynamic growth character of our economy. If we pursue the objective of diversification of industry, both primary and manufacturing, there is bound to be conflict with imports, particularly in manufactured goods. Nor is there much to be said for the view that we can concentrate our attention on exports while ignoring the import problem. Nations who buy, or who might be prepared to buy from us, in the final analysis expect to pay in their goods. Trade has to be viewed in the form of input as well as outflow. Or to illustrate in a more homely fashion, any industrial organization has a purchasing as well as a sales department. Except in special circumstances, protection invites retaliation and for us this form of activity would be inimical to our desire for improved standards of living."

"Canadians generally have given, I believe, serious attention to the position taken by the government in 1945 to the effect that it would be the duty of the government to maintain a climate within which business could develop and expand. It now appears that the definition of climate invites examination and clarification. There seems to be a belief that business—small or big—can, should and does operate in an atmosphere of perfect competition. Because of existing conditions of mass production, indigenous geographic characteristics, and growing elasticity of substitution and the like, we are in process of change. For example, substitutes are now available for nearly every product which once offered an opportunity for monopoly: new synthetic fibres for cotton, wool, linen, jute and silk; other fuels for coal; and a whole range of new ferro-alloys or alternate base metals for the relatively few original grades of iron and steel. The Canadian consumer now has a diverse variety of choice for goods and services which gives to competition a universality that it never before possessed. We must therefore turn our attention to the realities of present-day production and distribution as they apply to the Canadian economy. This suggests that while restrictive trade practices should continue to come within the purview of government supervision, the yardsticks that are used require careful re-examination. Consideration such as 'to the detriment of the public' and 'undue lessening of competition' are tenuous and difficult of reasonable interpretation. Bearing in mind our geographic position, the pattern of present population concentrations, and the increasing competition from abroad, it is possible that certain forms of integration for greater productive efficiency, lower costs, and improved competitive position, can exist in the public interest. In the light of advances in mechanization and mass production some form of industrial planning must be acceptable; otherwise unremunerative prices may follow which would not be in the public interest. Unprofitable business operations result in lowered wages and reduced employment—neither of which are desirable ends of policy.

"The question of monopolistic practice surely centres on the relative profits obtained on effective investment. If this yardstick were more frequently applied it would make for happier relations between industry and government without interfering with the right of action. The present approach, of proving collusion, seems somewhat unrealistic and unnecessary in the light of other and more useful tests of 'detriment to the public.' Surely with the re-emergence of a buyers' market, the sellers' market philosophy will be replaced with a realistic approach to competitive business as it is actually conducted."

• • •

"We have witnessed these past few months a revival of the purchasing power doctrine—a very pervasive approach to remedying any signs of unemployment. The idea that collectively we can buy our way out of any downward trend in economic activity sounds fine except for one factor—the resulting effect on prices. It cannot be said too often that we function in a world economy, not an isolated economy, and hence price is a key to, not incidental to, our prosperity. Let us keep clearly in our minds that, in the main, the product pays the wages—the manufacturer acting as a middle man in the transaction. What can be paid out in costs of production is determined by what the consumer will pay for the finished product. Manifestly, it is uneconomic in the face of a falling demand to do anything to increase prices in the hope of reviving that demand. Surely this is the time for realism in our market appraisals."

• • •

Turning now to the immediate prospects Mr. Stewart concluded: "Over-all I would suggest that the next twelve months will record a continuation of the spotty pattern that has been evident this year. How well or how poorly we react to the growing competition both at home and from abroad will of course have an important bearing on the relative success of our operations next year. However, disposable income continues to be high and there is every expectation that consumer purchasing will remain at a reasonably high level. Meanwhile, technology combined with the continuing development of resources suggests a steadiness in the rate of expansion of primary goods and ancillary industries. Investment opportunities should continue to be favourable and particularly in the construction industry it would appear that capital investment should remain strong.

"In the longer view, I look for continued growth and development throughout the country. Blessed as we are with an abundance and a variety of resources, one can only conclude that we can, with care and conservation, market many of our products with considerable advantage to ourselves. A growing population, which means a growing labour force, demands a continual revision of our objectives. This, amongst other things, means new markets and requires new or advanced methods of distribution. The challenges indeed are great; that we have successfully met problems in the past with foresight augurs well for the road ahead."

NEIL J. McKINNON, VICE-PRESIDENT and GENERAL MANAGER, after reviewing the balance sheet; highlights of which are summarized below, said in part:

"The 88th Annual Statement records a year of major growth during which new records were established in many important aspects of the Bank's business. Deposits increased by more than $156,000,000 and total assets increased by approximately $160,000,000 bringing the total assets of the Bank to an all-time high of $2,058,000,000.

"The past year has been on the whole one of active business, although at a somewhat lower level than last year, and it has been marked by a widening in the area of competitive trading conditions which were becoming evident more than a year ago. This has not only been true of production competing in the export field, but also of business serving principally the domestic market which, to an increasing extent, has competed with imports encouraged by the prevailing discounts on other currencies. The sharply competitive conditions have made exacting demands on management, and have focused attention on cost control and increased efficiency. Much attention has also been given to control and balance of inventories and this, together with a levelling-off in the expansion of retail consumer credit, has brought about, in many fields, a lessening in requirements for additional bank loans.

"This year The Bank Act was re-enacted by Parliament following the usual decennial revision. Several useful changes have been made, one of which enables security to be provided over petroleum in the course of production, a field of finance in which the Bank has played a leading part. Another change was the authorization of banks to engage in mortgage lending under the National Housing Act under which, subject to certain conditions, mortgages are insured up to 98% of the principal amount. The Bank has also been actively engaged in this field.

"A new item appears for the first time in our balance sheet in the form of mortgages insured under the National Housing Act. At 31st October this amounted to $5,800,000 and commitments presently outstanding will increase this amount measurably during the coming year.

"The balance at credit of undivided profits was increased to $3,647,000 of which $3,000,000 has been transferred to rest account in addition to a transfer of $10,000,000 from tax paid reserves to which reference has been made in the directors' report. The additional capital for which subscription rights have been offered to shareholders will augment the total of capital and rest account to $101,250,000. The enlarged capital resources will be an important aid in enabling the Bank to enlarge its participation in constructive developments and in furthering the continued growth of the Bank.

"Once again it is a privilege to acknowledge here, and pay tribute to, the loyal and enthusiastic work of all members of personnel within the Bank. The past year has been a very busy one and the whole-hearted cooperation of everyone is reflected in the progress shown in the Balance Sheet. With growing business and expanding activity, officers and employees have maintained a high level of service to the public which is traditional with the Bank."

Patrick Tells N.Y. Rangers To Get Tough Or Else In N.H.L. Play

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BATTLE FOR THIRD PLACE!

The Memos face one of their toughest tasks of the season tonight when they clash with the Whitby "Wrens" (so-called because of manager Wren Blair) on the latter's own ice in a battle for third spot in this ever-tightening Senior "B" hockey race.

At the present time the locals hold down the position, but by only one slim point, and, at that, they have played one more game than the "Wrens." A victory tonight would lift them into a second place deadlock with the Cornwall Colts, while a loss would drop them back to the fourth and last play-off spot.

• • •

Whitby and Boucher's boys have been travelling along at a pretty even pace of late, with the Memos winning two of their last three starts and the ex-Oshawa club taking two-of-two on Saturday and Monday to hop over Clinton. The New York aggregation, which was deadlocked with Belleville for third place last week, has run into a losing streak that now stands at six. Two of those setbacks came at the hands of our Memos, emphasizing the fact that the locals win their share of the "must" games. Both teams will be all out for this one and an extra two points in the win column on our side would look mighty good before we start that big series with Kingston on the week-end.

The Brockville Magedomas unlimbered their heavy artillery last night to hand the Clinton Comets a 9-0 shellacking in Brockville. The win vaults the Magedomas into fifth place, one point up on Clinton and one behind Whitby. It was only the second shutout in the league this year; Don Barclay having blanked Cornwall by a 2-0 score on November 21st.

The Trenton Admirals are guests of Belleville's new junior team at 9.00 in the second half of the double bill. The northern section opened on Monday with the Marmora Millionaires trouncing Campbellford 15-7.

Red Grange, the grey ghost of Illinois in his heyday as the scourge of Big Ten gridirons, is still regarded as one of U.S. college football's all-time greats. Red, however, thinks the greatest player ever was Minnesota's famed and fierce Bronko Nagurski.

Red's opinion came out in a recent interview in which he was asked how a team should defend against Nagurski.

"There was no trouble trying to defence Nagurski," said Red. "All the defence wasn't in position the Bronk would look it up."

ENEMY IN OUR MIDST

Quick glances at the tuberculosis death rates in Canada over the last few years have led a good many to believe that TB, most dreaded of diseases at the beginning of the century, is on its way out. The trouble is that quick glances are not all-inclusive. They don't give us the whole story.

Looking a bit further, we find there are still 11,000 new cases underscoring our sanatoria yearly. That hardly looks as if "the white plague" had been routed.

A reminder that we still have this job of prevention on our hands comes each year in the mail—the Christmas Seals. The seals themselves are gay but the letter accompanying them tells some sobering facts. Not that it is a discouraged or discouraging letter! Far from it. It is just the letter of people who have attacked a big job on behalf of the community and need some help from those who are going to benefit—you and me. When you have read the letter you will know why you should buy Christmas seals to help prevent tuberculosis.

Predicts Fireworks in Game With Detroit Red Wings; Canadiens Unhappy About Loss

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Politeness and courtesy are virtues to be admired, but they don't win hockey games in the National Hockey League.

That's the way coach Lester Patrick of New York Rangers sees it, and he has warned his slumping Broadway Blues "to get tough or else you might find yourselves mighty expendable."

Patrick's fifth-place Rangers, who haven't won in their last seven starts, meet second-place Detroit Red Wings at Madison Square Garden tonight, and Patrick predicts there'll be fireworks.

"I told them I wanted them to be downright mean out there on the ice," Patrick told reporters after saying he had laid down the law to the Blues in a morning workout Tuesday.

"So far this season, some of my guys have been just too sweet for words," Muss added. "And that's got to stop, right now. I believe you'll see a different kind of team out there against the Wings tonight. They'll get rough with their opponents or I'll get rough with some of them."

Coach King Clancy of Toronto Maple Leafs put the stress on the bump and bruise brand several weeks ago and since then his charges have climbed from the second division to a second-place tie with Detroit, four points behind Montreal Canadiens.

Leafs see action tonight, too, travelling to St. Louis to meet Chicago's last-place Black Hawks. A win for the two toughbeaus would place, but the revamped Hawks, who acquired Harry Watson from Leafs and Eddie Litzenberger from Montreal in time for a 2-1 victory at Toronto Saturday night, could upset the figuring.

Canadiens, idle tonight, are still unhappy over the team's 3-0 loss and 2-2 tie with Boston Bruins—also idle last night.

"A leading team should have a .500 road record," says coach Dick Irvin. "We have fallen below the mark. We didn't play well in either game against Boston."

Three of Baseball's Brightest Stars Sign 1955 Contracts; Kiner Asks, Gets Big Pay Cut

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three of baseball's brightest stars were signed,to 1955 contracts Tuesday and one of them—Ralph Kiner, former National League home run king—in an unprecedented move asked for and received a pay cut he said amounted to "about 40 per cent."

Kiner, who was bought from the Chicago Cubs by the Cleveland Indians last month, will receive about $40,000 from the American League champions next season.

The New York Yankees announced the signing of Jerry Coleman, veteran infielder, while the New York Giants got the name of third baseman Hank Thompson on the dotted line.

For the Yankees, Coleman is the seventh player to sign, an unusual feat so far in advance of the new season. However, the Yankees didn't win a pennant and world championship last season, making it easier on the front office.

It was estimated that Thompson signed for $20,000 and Coleman for around $16,000.

HAD PROTECTION

"I want my salary in the future to be determined by my performance," said Kiner, in announcing his startling decision. The Cubs reportedly paid Kiner about $60,000. $65,000 in 1954, and under baseball rules he was protected against a slash of more than 25 per cent.

Thompson, who starred in the Giants' 4-2 world series sweep of the Indians in October, hit .363 during the season, with 26 home runs and drove in 86 runs. He is the fourth Giant to come to terms.

Coleman, former Marine captain who was slow to round into form after his recall, will receive the same salary as this year.

The Giants also sold righthanded pitchers Al Corwin, Kosikowski and Charley Fowler to their Minneapolis farm club in the American Association. Kosikowski appears, in 10 games after returning from service the last season and had a 0-0 record, while Fowler was 6-6 for the year at Minneapolis.

The Chicago White Sox signed Al Brazle, veteran southpaw hurler who was released this season by ing a 54 record.

First Annual Powder Bowl Game Scheduled

VANCOUVER (CP)—It will be a man's game played by girls when the first annual Powder Bowl is staged at the University of British Columbia's stadium Jan. 30.

A Gamma Phi Beta squad will line up against Alpha Delta Pi—in a show of glamor and power.

All the color of a bowl game will be there, majorettes, band leaders and bands.

But there'll be a difference. The cheer leaders will be mutes.

There'll be blondes in the backfield and flame-throwers to make repairs.

It won't be touch football, but the real thing—tackling and all.

The game is to provide funds for rebuilding Brock Hall, a student building destroyed by fire this fall.

"Naturally, we'll play American rules," says Colleen Kelly, a pretty quarterback. "That way we'll get four downs instead of three."

Bev Keenan is at end, and Helen Donnelly five foot-two, Colleen Kelly is a fraction over five feet.

There are no heavyweights. The backfields will average about 123 pounds.

Trabert Meets Davidson In First Contest

By WILL GRIMSLEY

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—Slump-fighting Tony Trabert, described as the weak spot in Uncle Sam's tennis armor, meets Sweden's aggressive Sven Davidson Thursday in the first match of the inter-zone Davis Cup final.

The battle will be followed by a second singles match involving U.S. champion Vic Seixas and Lennart Bergelin, both in razor sharp form.

Thus, the pressure begins quickly for the U.S. tennis forces seeking another chance to wrest the big international bowl from Australia in the challenge round at Sydney, Dec. 27-29.

The Americans' confidence was shaken slightly when they read that Trabert (Big Bill) Edwards, president of the Queensland Lawn Tennis Association, had picked the Swedes to be a stunning upset.

"The Swedes are playing like champions," Edwards said. "The Americans may not be quite ready."

CAPTAINS PLEASED

While both non-playing captains, Bill Talbert of the U.S. and Gunnar Gaim of Sweden, expressed themselves as pleased with the draw, there arose a brisk argument among tennis authorities over what side benefited the way the names fell.

Kenneth Rose, former Australian Davis Cupper, declared the draw favored Sweden and added:

"Regardless of Bergelin's pressure cut form I consider Davidson Sweden's No. 1 player. He is a relentless attacker. He has a sound, well rounded game and he is as game as they come.

"On the other hand remember Trabert is in great form. Davidson has a good chance of beating him under grass, however. On the dog, look at the pressure that will be put on Seixas in the second match no matter how sharp his game."

Westwick Says Walker Signed For Three Years

OTTAWA (CP)—Sports columnist Bill Westwick, writing in Tuesday's Journal, said Douglas (Peahead) Walker has been signed to a new, three-year contract at $15,000 a year by Montreal Alouettes.

"Montreal officials haven't said so yet and they will deny it," said Westwick, but "you can take the word of one of Walker's closest friends that Walker already is signed to a three-year contract calling for $15,000 a year."

The friend of the coach whose club powered its way to the Big Four championship this season only to lose in the Grey Cup game to Edmonton Eskimos, said it this way, Westwick said:

"Walker, whose top salary after 14 years of putting Wake Forest (college) on the football map was $7,500, has signed a new contract with Montreal calling for double that amount."

Frankie Albert Severs Relations With League

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Frankie Albert, the Stanford all-America quarterback who starred from 1948 to 1952 for San Francisco '49ers, said Tuesday he will sever relations with the National Football League club Jan. 1.

Albert has been employed in the front office and on television for the club since the end of his playing days and had wanted to buy an interest in the '49ers. The quarter, who played with Calgary Stampeders last year, said he planned either to go into business for himself or to engage exclusively in television broadcasting.

Big Four Football Members In State of Shock Over Argo Dismissal of All Imports

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of three Big Four Football League teams, shocked by the decision of Toronto Argonauts to cast adrift all of their 1954 United States imports, have disclosed they intend to get in on the grab bag of the released American talent.

Jim McCaffrey of Ottawa Rough Riders was "astounded." Jake Gaudaur of Hamilton Tiger-Cats was "absolutely amazed." And Leo Dandurand of Montreal Alouettes wanted to know "what is going on up there!"

The announcement to dispose of all 13 of the 1954 imports on the team was made by Argonaut director Harry Sonshine Monday night. Sonshine said "the fans want plenty of changes and we're going to give them just that."

McCaffrey said Tuesday night Ottawa will "be glad to invite Nobby Wirkowski, Norb Hecker and Billy Cross" to join the Rough Riders. He added:

"I think Nobby is a grand quarterback and I thought he played wonderful football for Argonauts. . . We're going to appoint our new coach this weekend and I know he'll be interested in a lot of those boys."

Gaudaur didn't mention specifically which of the discards he'd like to see in Hamilton but said that "Argonauts had some mighty fine Americans this season and some of them could play on any Big Four team."

Dandurand, who returned to football as part owner of the Alouettes last week, said the impact of the Argonaut action was staggering. He said Doug (Peahead) Walker, Montreal coach, will arrive in Montreal today for a conference. "He will be interested in this," Dandurand said.

Meanwhile, two of the players released by Argonauts, contended they received a "raw deal" and demanded their release from the Argonauts.

Jack Carpenter, an assistant playing coach, said:

"We played up here for four or five years for a lot less money than these big names they are going to bring in will get. Now they aren't even giving us a chance to make the team."

Quarter Nobby Wirkowski, who led the league in pass-completion percentage last season, recalled the poor time he had to play behind the last couple of seasons and said he should have been given the chance to make the 1955 team and to play with a stronger line.

Belleville Batas Co-Holders Baseball Trophy

The Belleville-Bata baseball club, co-winners with Oakville of the Ontario senior baseball championship, was presented with the Toronto Daily News Cup at the baseball club banquet held at the Belleville Shrine Club last week. Lloyd "Red" Doran, O.B.A. convener, presented the cup to team captain Dick Fitzpatrick. Shown in the picture taken following the presentation are: Dr. Kurt Herz, Bata Shoe Company; Drury Denyes, club treasurer; Jack Curran, team manager; Vern Goyer, coach; Malcolm Robb, club president; Dick Fitzpatrick, team captain, and Arthur Duncan of Batawa.

Deadline Set

The deadline for players' certificates is Dec. 31 while artificial and natural ice rinks must be registered by Jan. 15, senior and single entries by Feb. 15.

A forum of secretaries and presidents of all leagues and teams will be held in January to discuss rules and playoffs.

WELLAND (CP)—H. D. Ovenden of Welland, secretary of the Ontario Rural Hockey Association, said Tuesday the final date for accepting affiliations with the association is Dec. 22.

Head of Dodgers Predicts League Will Be Stronger

BROOKLYN (AP) — Walter O'Malley, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, sidestepped today an opportunity to become engaged in a baseball owners' quarrel with Horace Stoneham but he assured the boss of the New York Giants the Dodgers would give a good account of themselves next baseball season.

Asked what he thought of Stoneham's remark Tuesday that "unless the Dodgers come up with a big deal, I can't see them as a big threat next year," O'Malley said:

"I am not claiming a National League pennant like some others may be doing. But we feel sure we will give a good account of ourselves.

"As for our failure to make a big deal, we won't be stampeded into making any trades. Sure we would like to make one but only if we think we can help our club. We've had several offers but we've turned them down. Why make a trade that might land you in the second division?"

O'Malley, who had just announced the sale of veterans Billy Cox, 33-year-old infielder, and Preacher Roe, 38-year-old left-handed pitcher, to Baltimore for cash reported variously between $15,000 and $75,000 and two minor league players, predicted the National League would be stronger next year than it has been since before the Second World War.

Many Graduating Notre Dame Stars May Find Way to Canadian Clubs

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—The man who negotiates for promising Notre Dame football stars thinks Canadian clubs would be National Football League teams for this season's Irish crop.

Julius Rykovich, South Bend business man, who has made an avocation of counselling Notre Dame players who enter pro ranks, says that seven Notre Dame seniors, including All-America quarterback Ralph Guglielmi, want to play professionally.

"I want to emphasize that I don't get a penny from handling contracts for these boys," said Rychovich. "I want only to see that they get a fair shake."

He said Guglielmi has had several "substantial" feelers from Canadian teams and that "any National League offer will have to be mighty good to get him."

Tackles Sam Palumbo, Frank Varrichione and Tony Pasquesi, centre Dick Szymanski and guard Cook and halfback Joe Heap also are shopping for pro jobs.

"This year I am leading a larger ear to the Canadian leagues," said Tucker. "Not only am I interested in obtaining the best contract financially for the players, but also in placing them with a club that can provide business opportunities for after their playing days."

Bobo Olson Strong Favorite To Hold Title Over Langlois

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—World middleweight champion Carl (Bobo) Olson of San Francisco makes the third defence of the crown he won 14 months ago when he meets Pierre Langlois of France over the Hercules bowl tonight.

The smart boys of boxing firmly believe that 25-year-old Bobo, a product of rough and tumble alley fighting in his native Honolulu, will turn back the challenge of 23-year-old Frenchman.

The scrap, one that promises to be rough, bruising and fought in close quarters, will be televised by the Columbia Broadcasting System with Northern California viewers shut out. The show goes on at 10 p.m. EST.

Both fighters oozed confidence. Maybe not in so many words, but each obviously has profound respect for the other or he'd have seemed no doubt that Bobo has no fear of losing his title, and Langlois in his stalled English said he didn't make the long trip here to lose his chance.

Olson has been a busy fighter since he captured the championship from Randy Turpin of England, Oct. 21, 1953, in New York.

Bobo has had six fights since then, including his title defences against Kid Gavilan last April and Rocky Castellani Aug. 20.

Pierre turned in an excellent upset in his last outing, whipping the No. 1 title challenger, Joey Giardello, in 10 rounds.

Canadian Group Interested In Buying Franchise

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Nothing will be done about locating the triple-A Ottawa franchise until after a meeting with Columbus, Ohio interests Thursday, Kansas City Athletics said Tuesday.

Ray Kennedy, Athletics' personnel director, left the Tampa-St. Petersburg area after talking with two groups interested in having Ottawa of the International League locate in this region. Ottawa is owned by Athletics.

Kennedy said a group in Columbus is interested in buying the Ottawa franchise and that the Kansas City club would prefer to sell the franchise, Tampa-St. Petersburg area after talking with two groups interested in having Ottawa of the International League locate in this region. Regina Deficit May Cost Lions About $4,000

VANCOUVER (CP)—Saskatchewan Rough Riders of the Western Interprovincial Football Union had a deficit last season—and it may cost B.C. Lions $4,000.

Don Mackenzie, president of Lions, said Tuesday his club "will have to pay approximately $4,000—if Saskatchewan asks for it."

The league is just under half the $8,429 deficit facing the Regina team. One of the conditions under which Lions were accepted into the WIFU was that they would make good in part any extra expenditure of the prairie clubs through assistance in travelling expense.

Dr. Beattie Martin, Roughrider president, in a long-distance interview with the Vancouver Sun, said nothing will be done until a full executive meeting is held to discuss the matter."

Teepees Are Held To 2-2 Overtime Draw With Quebec

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — St. Catharines TeePees had a battle for a 2-2 overtime stalemate here Tuesday night with Quebec Frontenacs in their round-robin series for the Sir Wilfrid Laurier hockey trophy. Frontenacs took their home affair 2-1.

Backed by 2,306 fans, Phil Watson's Quebec Junior Hockey League leaders assumed a 1-0 advantage in the second minute of play when Mike Lagace scored on a pass from Guy Rousseau.

The middle stanza was half over, with Roy Greenen benched, when Cec Hoekstra evened the score on a pass from Barry Cullen.

Frontenacs did not waste much time assuming the lead again as Pat Presley sent back a passin on a three-way play that was partially screened.

In the third period, captain Hank Cleala drove a short one that deflected into Marcotte's rigging.

TeePees dominated play in the sudden-death overtime except when starry Guy Rousseau sparked the Fronts offensive. He was the outstanding player on the ice and his daring sorties into St. Kitts' terrain kept the TeePees on their toes.

Little Soccer Clubs Having Rough Time Financially

By JEFF RYAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—England's little soccer clubs have run into rough financial weather and several appear to be foundering.

Diminishing crowds are causing the concern.

For example take Derby county, one of the 12 founder members of the 66-yerold Football League. Last season second-division Derby suffered its heaviest gate loss, some £14,000. This season the deficit jumped to £30,000.

"It can't be increased," warned club secretary Cyril Asmalle. "We might be able to survive with an average home gate of 16,000 but to be at all healthy we need at least 20,000."

Attendances lately have dropped to 11,000.

Soccer fortunes have fallen considerably since the lush years immediately following the Second World War. Arthur Oakley, vice-president of the Football League which governs professional soccer, hoisted a storm signal at the beginning of the 1954-55 season.

"If league membership is to prosper, we must get back the 4,500,000 spectators we have lost during the last few years."

What's causing the fan famine? Observers variously list television, weather and poor play.

Seasoned spectators discount the first two complaints. Look, they say, at the crowds of 50,000 or more which turned out to watch the Russian Spartak squad take on Arsenal and Wolverhampton in November. Both matches were televised and both played under conditions far from ideal.

The falling gates land hardest on the small teams. The minor clubs depend on a hard core of supporters for their existence, while first-division clubs like Tottenham Hotspur, can blow £30,000 on a player purchase.

Most of the third division teams are feeling the pinch.

On the other hand, Queen's Park Rangers, a London third division club, enjoys larger attendance this season, better playing makes the difference, say officials.

"We're up about 1,500 fans a game on last season," said a club spokesman, "but when you estimate taking at £75 a 1,000 spectators and take out entertainment tax and expenses, there's nothing left for buying players or even improvements to the grounds."

Owner of Braves May Be In Market for Club

OTTAWA (CP)—Louis B. Perini, owner of Milwaukee Braves of the National League, Tuesday was reported interested in buying Ottawa's International Baseball League franchise.

"Everything is still pretty much in the embryonic stage," one informed said. "However, Perini has written Tommy Gorman signifying his interest in purchasing the franchise."

Gorman, Ottawa sports promoter, holds the capital's baseball territorial rights and the lease on Lansdowne Park, home of the Ottawa Athletics.

The franchise is up for sale by Kansas City Athletics as a result of the recent American League shift of Philadelphia A's to Kansas City.

"I have had some correspondence with Mr. Perini," Gorman said. "But beyond that I would not like to say anything."

In Wellesley, Mass., Perini denied a report that he was negotiating for purchase of Ottawa's International League franchise.

Perini said in, commenting on the report:

"We are not negotiating for the Ottawa franchise. We feel it has fine possibilities for development but we already have one triple-A ball club in Toledo and are very happy there. We don't have enough triple-A players to staff another club."

Some bridge players make hard work of it when their turn comes to decide the second responding bid. You can make it easy on yourself and partner if you simply do the most natural thing

If you have nothing more to say and are not forced to bid, say nothing; pass. If you have more than you promised before, show what it is whether partner forced you to bid or not.

Suppose opener starts with one in a suit and responder bids one in a different suit if opener then bids one no-trump, what should be the second bid by responder? See what the teachers say:

Culbertson says: Pass with 1½ honor tricks or less; bid another suit with a five-card suit or a rebiddable suit with two honor tricks; bid two no-trump or jump to three in a major with more than two honor tricks.

Goren says: With 13 points, jump to three no-trump even with three card trump support or a rebiddable minor suit; with 9 to 13 points, bid only two no-trump; with less points, pass.

Accordin' to Gordon, all bids follow the P-O-N order of takeout, assist, no-trump. Each raise in the last partnership number promises another trick with no more tricks, pass.

♠ 10 7 5 3
♥ A Q 7 5
♦ 4 3 2
♣ A 9

If south then bids one no-trump, what is your second bid? You have not another suit or a rebiddable heart suit for a takeout. You lack support for the south diamond suit. You have no 7 or A.

So, if you have any bid at all it would have to be (N) no-trump. Your first response promised two high cards (no-trump tricks) among your other values. You have a third high card (no-trump trick).

With this third high card you may raise once to two no-trump. My future series will show proof of such bids. Order a load.

Sudbury Wolves Salvage Tie By Horeck's Goal

NORTH BAY (CP)—A goal by veteran Pete Horeck with just 47 seconds remaining in regulation time enabled Sudbury Wolves to salvage a 4-4 overtime deadlock with North Bay Trappers in a Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior southern group action here Tuesday night.

Defenceman Norm Gulmond's blueline blast had put Trappers ahead 4-3 early in the final session and Trappers protected the slim margin until Horeck got loose in the last minute. Neither team was able to break the tie in the 10-minute overtime stanza.

The split of points shoved the Wolves into a tie for last place with Pembroke Lumber Kings while moving Trappers four points back of the second place Sault, (Mich.) Indians.

Andy Milne, Art Rose and Roy Kelly smiled the first three Sudbury tallies. Goal-getters for Trappers were Bo Elik, who clicked for a pair, Ab Demarco and Gulmond. For Demarco, last year's scoring leader, it was the first of the season.

AT THE McCARTHY

Glenn Ford realizes every American boy's ambition to drive a locomotive in Columbia Pictures' "Human Desire", powerful story of a crime of passion also starring Gloria Grahame and Broderick Crawford, closing tonight at the Odeon McCarthy - Theatre. Glenn plays a railroad engineer in "Human Desire."

Gloria is seen as a small town Delilah, wife of railroad yard master Crawford. Dealing with a crime of passion, the film reportedly oozes with the strength and speed of the Diesel engine Ford handles in the film.

In early boyhood, Glenn moved to Santa Monica, Calif., from his native Canada. After graduating from high school, Glenn's ambition to go on the stage and won his first job in a West Coast production of "The Children's Hour." Then he joined a little theatre group in Santa Monica, The Players, where his work won him a screen test and subsequent contract at Columbia.

The next years, for Ford, were uneventful ones. After starring in a number of films, he quit, Columbia to join the Marine Corps in 1942 but returned to the studio upon the war's conclusion. His first postwar role, opposite Bette Davis, was in "Stolen Life." Ford was next placed by the team on its unfair list because non-union musicians are used at games.

The Guild club has been using a service club junior band at games. The union says music should be provided by professional union musicians.

Perry of 49ers Best on Ground In Football Loop

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joe Perry of the San Francisco 49ers has clinched, unofficially, the National Football League's ground-gaining title, lugging the pigskin a total of 1,049 yards in 12 games.

The season officially doesn't end until next Sunday when Cleveland plays Detroit at Cleveland, but Perry is far in front. In fact, his ball carrying mark is the second best in league history, behind the 1,146-yard mark set by Philadelphia's Steve van Buren.

Joe Perry retained the title he won last year with 1,018 yards. This year he carried the ball 173 times for an average of 6.1 yards per try.

Second, and far behind Perry, was another 'der, John Henry Johnson, with 681 yards. Los Angeles' Paul Youngs finished third with 610.

On Unfair List

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders have been asked to play ball with musicians.

The Regina Musicians' Protective Association, Local 446, in a letter to the Western Interprovincial Football Union club, says it has placed the team on its unfair list because non-union musicians are used at games.

The Guild club has been using a service club junior band at games. The union says music should be provided by professional union musicians.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars, for Thursday, December 16, 1954.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Maybe a "teaser" day but these (or even really difficult days) don't down you. Apply system and philosophy and don't overtax yourself.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — Concentrate on the artistic and necessary personal affairs today. There may be some uncertainties in financial matters. Be on guard or you may step into something troublesome.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — This is no time to step on anyone's toe. It could irritate, force you to change your course needlessly. A generous, understanding effort on your part will smooth over rath in many ways.

June 22 to July 22 (Cancer) — Today's planetary aspects suggest a conservative, thoughtful attitude. This format will aid in business, personal and family situations; will also help to stabilize harmony, order.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — Check over your schedule and be wary of dubious schemes. Maintain a gracious, patient manner. You can help to lead troubled souls back to hope and happiness; such reward is lasting.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo) — Some configurations are better than others. Some hours may be irksome, trying on the nerves. Be easy but be consistent and you will be the gainer. P.M. favors home, social activities and wholesome leisure pursuits.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Advice to Leo pertinent to you now. Avoid pessimism and doubt. Do your best and have faith in God and in yourself.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — A first-rate day for taking stock; conference with superiors, associates, etc., a good period for advancing steadily but not particularly favorable for untried ventures.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — An opportune time to move forward with concise, well-laid plans. With steadiness and a diplomatic attitude you can easily bypass contention and timewasters. Rest and relax during free hours.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Activities unrelated to your regular work and duties may run into snags. Avoid emotional upheavals or anxiety. Responsibilities can be handled more quickly and with less strain if you aren't easily upset.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — A cosy, refreshing outlook. But go after hard tasks and essential matters first. Then you will have deserved rest and pleasant diversion.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Heart interests, social affairs, contacts with the opposite sex and your family will need more than ordinary patience. Great pleasures and happiness will be the regard for faith and effort.

YOU BORN TODAY are observing, straightforward, self-reliant. Keen, about business affairs, you are able to handle things well under all conditions but especially in emergencies. This, of course, if you live up to your innate good qualities and talents, which are many. Avoid haste in making decisions, being too outspoken and impatient with slower people. Direct your enthusiasms carefully. Fine opportunities are ahead, but watch your budget. Birthdate of: Jane Austen, Eng. novelist.

Little Benny's Notebook

Ma was shaking her head to herself, saying to pop. Really, William, I meen actually, I cant get over it.

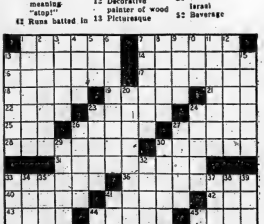
No? Over what? pop said, and ma said, The idea of that Salter boy and that Pepper girl being engaged to be married.

The question is, will they get over it? pop said, and ma said, They are as unlike as nite and morning. They have no more in common than the man in the moon, she said.

Who did he marry? pop said, and ma said, It's no lasting matter, William. Successful marriages are founded on the same taists and distaists, that's a proverbial fact of common nolige, she said.

Well, I know one that seem to disprove the rule, pop said, and ma said, What cases? Just name me one cuple, she said.

How about you and me? pop said, and ma said, Why William Potts, we're famous and notorious for the way we agree on every important matter that's even slightly essential, and I defy you to name a single exception.



I'll name 2, heet and cold, pop said. In the same room at the same tempture, icicles form on your eyebrows while my pores are sending off clouds of steem, and yet, as you say, we are justly renowned as a perfectly matched cupple, he said, and ma said, Now William, if you are looking for a trumped up excuse to throw open a window on a freezing nite like this, the answer is abslutely and positively no.

The result being they compromized on terming the heet down a little.

Canadian Firms Are Defendants In Aussie Court

MONTREAL (CP)—Two Canadian companies remain as co-defendants in a $1,414,000 damage action in connection with an explosion on board the SS Mahia, Aug. 7, 1947, at Melbourne, Australia.

Electric Reduction Company of Canada, Ltd., and Electric Reduction Sales Company, Ltd., were the manufacturers and shipping agency of a sodium chlorate shipment which exploded while being unloaded, killing 11 stevedores.

Jean Brisset, Q. C., will continue his arguments today on behalf of the plaintiff, Shaw, Seville and Alton Company, Ltd., owners of the vessel.

Tuesday he repeated his former plea that the chemical was not properly packed before it was loaded and that the chemical company had made certain misrepresentations at the time of shipping and prior to signing the shipping contract.
